Chap. III. 1-4. The primitive idea of preaching is taken from the office of a public crier, passing through the streets, and at fixed points lifting up his voice to proclaim the matter committed to him. In the present instance, Jonah was not sent to instruct, exhort, or persuade, but to make a proclamation of the terrible event which impended over the city. Twenty miles was considered a day's journey for a foot traveller. It will be observed, that Jonah was commanded to place the day of doom at a considerable distance, giving the people time to reflect, repent, and return to the Lord. Ver. 5-10. That such an effect should have followed the proclamation of an unknown and humble stranger, can only be accounted for on the ground of Divine influence. Whether he disclosed the events which had befallen him in consequence of his refusal, it is impossible to determine. One thing, however, is clear—that an overwhelming sense of guilt was awakened throughout the entire community, from the king on the throne to the humblest of his subjects. How far this repentance was evangelical does not appear, but, at any rate, it was obviously sincere; there was a turning from all iniquity, and a seeking to the Lord for mercy and deliverance from the wrath with which they were threatened. It is the dictate of nature, that in order to forgiveness, there must be repentance and amendment, and that whatever good shall follow, or whatever evil shall be averted, must be ascribed to mercy. Transgressors who have forfeited life, with all that belongs to it, can have no claim whatever on the ground of merit. To demand anything on that score is but to add to their transgression. But if we confess our sin, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sin, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all iniquity.

Chap. IV. 1-3. No language is so heartfelt as that which flows from recent experience under momentous circumstances. The perverse prophet had abundant reason to say, he knew the Lord was gracious, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, for he had proved it in a manner the most marvellous. But nothing could be more unseemly than the spirit he betrayed on this memorable occasion. Instead of rejoicing at the surprising turn which things had taken in consequence of his labours, he was grievously exasperated, and shewed that he would have rejoiced if his mission had been accompanied with vengeance. The destruction of the greatest city in the world, and the slaughter of its teeming population, would apparently have been a sight over which he would have exulted with most malevolent satisfaction. We may well exclaim, What is man! Jonah was certainly of all men the last to have manifested such a disposition. Ver. 4-11. The compassion of the Lord was manifested in bearing

MICAH.

Micah was contemporary with Isaiah and Hosea, and his prophecies, like theirs, were directed against both Judah and Israel, on account of their sins. Micah set forth the captivity, dispersion, and deliverance of Israel, the cessation of prophecy, and the destruction of Assyria and Babylon; he prophesied of Christ, the establishment of his kingdom, the glorious effects of the Gospel, and the final destruction of Jerusalem.

CHAPTER I.

1 Micah sheweth the wrath of God against Jacob for idolatry. 10 He exhorteth to mourning.

THE word of the LORD that came to Micah the Morasthite, in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.

2 ¶ Hear, ¹all ye people; hearken, O earth, and ²all that therein is: ³and let the Lord God be witness against you, ⁴the Lord from his holy temple.

3 For, behold, the LORD ⁵cometh forth out of his place, and will come down, and tread upon the high places of the earth.

4 And the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valleys shall be cleft, as wax before the fire, and as the waters that are poured down ⁶a steep place.

5 For the transgression of Jacob is all this, and for the sins of the house of Israel. What is the transgression of Jacob? ⁷is it not Samaria? and what are the high places of Judah? ⁸are they not Jerusalem?

6 Therefore I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard; and I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, and I will discover the foundations thereof.

7 And all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces, and all the hires thereof shall be burnt with the fire, and all the idols thereof will I lay desolate: for she gathered ⁹it of the hire of an harlot, and they shall return to the hire of an harlot.

8 Therefore I will wail and howl; I will go stripped and naked: I will make a wailing like the dragons, and mourning as the ¹⁰owls.

CHAPTER II.

1 Against oppression. 4 A lamentation. 7 A reproof of injustice and idolatry. 12 A promise of restoring Jacob.

WOE ¹to them that devise iniquity, and work evil upon their beds! when the morning is light, they practise it, because it is in the power of their hand.

2 And they covet fields, and take ²them by violence; and houses, and take ³them away: ⁴so they ⁵oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage.

with the petulance of Jonah, whose language merited severe rebuke. Paternal admonition followed, but it only served further to elicit the carnality of his heart, and to illustrate the unholy spirit that animated him. Although a prophet, he was wanting alike in the grace of pity for his fellow-creatures, and of patience under the trials of life, else he had never exclaimed, "It is better for me to die than to live." The question which the Lord put to him, instead of producing humility, only furnished an occasion to vent impiety: in an unhallowed frenzy he cries out, "I do well to be angry, even unto death." The lesson is one which ought not to be lost upon testy tempers, whose wisdom is, to think before they speak, to accommodate their language to their circumstances, and to look to the Lord for grace to rule their own spirits.

Chap. I. 1-9. The course of Micah's ministry probably extended to some forty or fifty years, since it comprised the reigns of three kings, which, united, amounted to about threescore years. The probability is that he preached much, while he only wrote those lessons of reproof, and the predictions, which have come down to us. His book ranks with those of the most important of the minor prophets. Ver. 10-16. Mourners in the East were accustomed to sit in the dust, covering their heads with it, and wallowing in it. It was an expression of humiliation and sorrow, and an accompaniment of penitential supplication. Sin and misery here, as everywhere, are brought together. What individuals or nations sow, that they must reap, and none can hinder it. In proportion to the sin and the aggravation attending it, are the punishments awarded to it, for the Judge of all the earth does right.

Chap. II. 1-6. As a man's heart is, so is he. Could the meditations of men on their beds be correctly ascertained, they would go a great way to determine their true characters. The solitude of night is favourable to reflection, and on such occasions a multitude of projects—some good, and some evil—have been originated, digested, and elaborated into methods of execution.

3 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, against ^cthis family do I devise an evil, ^dfrom which ye shall not remove your necks; neither shall ye go haughtily: ^efor this time ^fis evil.

4 ¶ In that day ^gshall one take up a parable against you, ^hand lament with ⁱa doleful lamentation, ^jand say, We be utterly spoiled; ^khe hath changed the portion of my people: how hath he removed ^lit from me! ^mturning away he hath divided our fields.

5 Therefore thou shalt have none that shall cast a cord by lot in ⁿthe congregation of the LORD.

6 ^oProphecy ye not, ^psay they to them that prophecy: ^qthey shall not prophesy to them, ^rthat they shall not take shame.

7 ¶ O thou that art ^snamed The house of Jacob, ^tis the Spirit of the LORD ^ustraitened? ^vare these his doings? ^wdo not my words do good to him that walketh ^xuprightly?

8 Even ^yof late my people is risen up as an enemy: ye pull off the robe ^zwith the garment from them that pass by securely as men averse from war.

CHAPTER III.

1 Micah reproveth the cruelty of the princes, 5 and the falsehood of the prophets. 8 He sheweth their ill-grounded security.

AND I said, Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the house of Israel; ^{bb}is it not for you to know judgment?

2 Who ^{bc}hate the good, ^{bd}and love the evil; who pluck off their skin from off them, and their flesh from off their bones;

3 Who also eat the flesh of my people, and flay their skin from off them; and they break their bones, and chop them in pieces, as for the pot, and as flesh within the caldron.

4 Then shall they ^{be}cry unto the Lord, but he will not hear them: ^{bf}he will even hide his face from them at that time, as they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.

5 ¶ Thus saith the LORD ^{bg}concerning the prophets that make my people err, that bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace; and he that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war against him:

6 Therefore night ^{bh}shall be unto you, ^{bi}that ye shall not have a vision; and it shall be dark unto you, ^{bj}that ye shall not divine; and ^{bk}the sun shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark over them.

7 Then shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded; yea, they shall all cover their ^{bl}lips: for ^{bm}there is ^{bn}no answer of God.

8 ¶ But truly ^{bo}I am full of power by the Spirit of the LORD, and of judgment, and of might, to declare unto Jacob his transgression, and to Israel his sin.

9 Hear this, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob, and princes of the house of Israel, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity.

10 They ^{bp}build up Zion with ^{bq}blood, and Jerusalem with iniquity.

Ver. 7-13. The Lord here expostulates with his people, who were now so deeply degenerated as not only to reject, but to despise his messengers, as if they might limit the Divine Spirit, and speak only that which was gratifying to them; or as if the Spirit was straitened, and no longer able to do good. When the people of God "rise up as an enemy" against the "Father of lights," and against each other, it is a token that their apostasy is complete, and that they are ripe for destruction. No cruelties are greater than those which brethren frequently perpetrate on each other. Men habitually influenced by the spirit of falsehood, will not hesitate to perpetrate any enormity which may promise to assist them in the accomplishment of their unhallowed objects. Should the demon of sensuality once possess them, they will sacrifice everything, sacred and profane, which stands in the way of their gratification. There is some difficulty as to the import of the term "breaker." The Jewish expositors apply it to the Messiah; others have thought that it referred to the bursting of the bonds of the captivity. Be this as it may, the one was doubtless an emblem of the other. While Cyrus proclaimed liberty to the captives, and opened up for the people a pathway to the land of their fathers, the Lord Jesus Christ, by the publication of his Gospel, announces to all flesh deliverance to the ends of the earth. He hath commanded all men everywhere to repent and believe the Gospel, that they may be saved.

Chap. III. 1-12. The oppressor is deaf to the cry of his victim. Leaving his heart behind him, he carries with him his understanding, his will, a strong arm, and a suitable weapon, as the instruments to accomplish his purpose. When the prophet says that "night shall be unto them," he indicates the approaching distress, which would confute their predictions, and put an end to their foolish visions. Men, while they seemed to walk in sunshine, and were famous among the wicked, blessed themselves; but their sun would set, and the darkness of disgrace, despair, and desolation surround them! The prophet, by "full of power," doubtless means full of the Spirit of God, and by means of that the prophet would be enabled to deliver the Divine message, by which right and wrong would be distinguished from each other—men humbled, and God exalted. The close of the chapter communicates a fact so fearful, that nothing but the most matured infidelity could have enabled the people to remain indifferent and impenitent.

11 The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money: ¹yet will they lean upon the LORD, ²and say, Is not the LORD among us? ³none evil can come upon us.

12 Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The glory, 3 peace, 11 and victory of the church.

BUT in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the LORD shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

2 And many nations shall come, ^aand say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: ^bfor the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

3 ¶ And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and ^cthey shall beat their swords into plough-shares, and their spears into ^dpruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, ^eneither shall they learn war any more.

4 But ^fthey shall sit every man under his vine, and under his fig-tree; and ^gnone shall make them afraid: ^hfor the mouth of the LORD of hosts hath spoken it.

CHAPTER V.

1 The birth of Christ foretold. 4 His kingdom, 8 and conquest over his enemies.

NOW gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops: he hath laid siege against us; they shall smite the ^tJudge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek.

2 But thou, Beth-lehem ^uEphratah, though thou be little among the ^vthousands of Judah, ^wyet out of thee shall he come forth unto me ^x*that is* to be ruler in Israel; ^ywhose goings forth have been from of old, from ^zeverlasting.

4 ¶ And he shall stand and ^bfeed in the strength of the LORD, ^cin the majesty of the name of the LORD his God; and Nothing, at that day, was more unlikely than that Zion would be "ploughed like a field;" and yet it was literally accomplished, when the Romans completed the destruction of the city and the temple. Judgments may seem far away, but every hour will bring them nearer. The truth of God is equally pledged to the performances of threats as of promises. His faithfulness extends not less to the darkness of perdition than to the glories of the celestial world.

Chap. IV. 1-13. This is one of the most precious portions of Inspiration. The prophet's eye, darting through the darkness which surrounds him, penetrates into the most distant future, clearly apprehending the glorious period when the power of the Lord should be felt through all hearts, in all nations, leading them to renounce their idols, to receive the truth, and to rejoice in the gospel of salvation. When these predictions shall have been accomplished, the whole earth will be filled with the glory of the Lord, his will be done upon earth as it is in heaven, and Jesus see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied. Here the highest truth is invested with the highest poetry. Nothing can exceed the grandeur and sublimity, and grace and loveliness, of the picture which is here drawn. The heart even now bounds to think of the coming day! How low and little is everything compared with these evangelical predictions! Where is the future of the infidel? While he tells us that his concern is how to obtain happiness in the present life, he offers nothing to promote the amelioration of the distress of this distracted world. He talks of philosophy, but despises truth! Sowing the wind, he will reap the whirlwind. "This shall he have of the Lord; he shall lie down in sorrow."

Chap. V. 1-7. The opening words refer to some invasion of Judah. By a nation with numerous troops may be meant the Babylonians, or the Romans, the principal powers by which Jerusalem was besieged, taken, and destroyed. The second verse is important for its reference to the Saviour. By the littleness of Ephratah, we are reminded of the division of the people by thousands under the government of their sovereign ruler. What can explain the language which closes the second verse, they shall abide: for now ¹shall he be great unto the ends of the earth.

5 And ²this man shall be the peace, ¹when the Assyrian shall come into our land: and when he shall tread in our palaces, then shall we raise against him seven shepherds, and eight ³principal men.

6 And they shall ⁴waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod ⁵in the entrances thereof: thus shall he deliver us from the Assyrian, when he cometh into our land, and when he treadeth within our borders.

7 And ^mthe remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people ⁿas a dew from the LORD, as the showers upon the grass, that ^otarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men.

8 ¶ And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep; who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver.

9 Thine hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off.

10 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD, that I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and I will destroy thy chariots:

11 And I will cut off the cities of thy land, and throw down all thy strong holds:

12 And ^pI will cut off witchcrafts out of thine hand; and thou shalt have no more soothsayers:

13 Thy ^qgraven images also will I cut off, and thy ^rstanding images out of the midst of thee; and thou shalt no more worship the work of thine hands.

14 And I will pluck up thy groves out of the midst of thee: so will I destroy thy cities.

15 And ^sI will execute vengeance in anger and fury upon the heathen, such as they have not heard.

CHAPTER VI.

HEAR ye now what the LORD saith; Arise, contend thou ¹before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice.

but the Eternal Sonship of the Lord Jesus, "whose goings forth have been from of old?" This is only one of the many portions of the Old Testament which point to the Divinity of the Saviour. In the fourth verse, the Lord Jesus is represented as performing the office of a shepherd in the midst of his flock, and as the source of peace to his people, and to the world. The Assyrian was one of the most distinguished enemies of Judah. The passage probably relates to the destruction of that power, or of some other like unto it, before the consummation of all things. Since the invasion of Sennacherib, the very name of the Assyrian inspired terror wherever it was heard. The chiefs of the Medes, and their allies, are intended, who attacked and took Nineveh, and laid the land waste, thereby securing deliverance to Israel from their oppression. Assyria is called the land of Nimrod, because he was the first king of the country. Ver. 8-15. Nothing is more certain than that the 2 Hear ye, O mountains, the LORD's controversy, and ye strong foundations of the earth: for the LORD hath a controversy with his people, and he will plead with Israel.

3 O my people, ^awhat have I done unto thee? and ^bwherein have I wearied thee? testify against me.

4 For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, ^cand redeemed thee out of the house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.

5 O my people, remember now what Balak king of Moab consulted, and what ^dBalaam the son of Beor answered him from Shittim unto Gilgal; that ye may ^eknow the righteousness of the LORD.

6 ¶ ^fWherewith shall I come before the LORD, and ^gbow myself before the high God? shall I come before him with burnt-offerings, with calves of a year old?

7 Will the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of ^hrivers of oil? shall I give my first-born for my transgression, the fruit of my ⁱbody for the sin of my soul?

8 He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to ^jlove mercy, and to ^kwalk humbly with thy God?

9 The ^mLORD's voice crieth unto the city, and ⁿthe man of wisdom shall see thy name: hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it.

10 ¶ ^oAre there yet ^pthe treasures of wickedness in the house of the wicked, and the ^qscant measure that is abominable?

11 Shall I ^rcount them pure with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights?

12 For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth.

Church will triumph over all her enemies, whom she will convert into friends, and add to the mystical body of Christ. When that day shall come, nations will dispense with horses and chariots; "salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks." Truth will then reign, and righteousness will be her companion. But before that, there will be conflict, confusion, and manifold troubles. Times are coming which will try men; but the grace of the Lord Jesus will suffice to guide his people through all perplexity, protect them amidst all danger, and guide them on to rest and happiness.

Chap. VI. 1-9. People should not require to be put in remembrance of their mercies. Balak was intent on the destruction of Israel, but the Lord compelled Balaam to bless instead of cursing them, to the grief and confusion of the king. The question contained in ver. 6 is one of the most important that language can frame, as it is

CHAPTER VII.

1 The church, complaining of her small number, 8 and the general corruption, 5 putteth her confidence in God.

WOE is me! for I am as ¹when they have gathered the summer-fruits, as the grape-gleanings of the vintage: ²there is no cluster to eat; my soul desired the first ripe fruit.

2 The ²good man is perished out of the earth; and ³there is none upright among men: they all lie in wait for blood; they ⁴hunt every man his brother with a net.

3 ¶ That they may do evil with both hands earnestly, the prince asketh, and the judge ^{asketh} for a reward; and the great man, he uttereth ³his mischievous desire: so they wrap it up.

4 The best of them is as a brier; the most upright is ^{sharper} than a thorn hedge: ⁵the day of thy watchmen and thy visitation cometh; now shall be their perplexity.

5 ¶ Trust ye not in a friend, put ye not confidence in a guide; keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom.

6 For ⁶the son dishonoureth the father, the daughter riseth up against her mother, the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; a man's enemies ^{are} the men of his own house.

17 They shall lick the dust like a serpent, they shall move out of their holes like ⁹worms of the earth: ²they shall be afraid of the LORD our God, and shall fear because of thee.

18 ¶ Who is ⁶a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and ⁷passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? ¹he retaineth not his anger for ever, because ²he delighteth in mercy.

19 He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us; he will subdue our iniquities: and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.

20 Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old.

one which every soul of man ought to put, since on its solution depends his eternal welfare. The custom of sacrifice was originally universal. After its origin was forgotten, it continued to be offered; man felt that he was a sinner, and that as such he deserved to die; but he retained the idea that he might escape through the substitution of Another. It is to be noted, that the inquirer says nothing of repentance, or reformation; all his confidence is in the death of the substituted victim for the sin of his own soul. The prophet answers by declaring, that God has shewn to man "what is good." There is somewhat of ambiguity in the reply, which may be viewed either as having a legal or an evangelical bearing. In the former light, the inquirer is told to "do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with his God," that he may live. But this is to base salvation on works, to the utter exclusion of atonement. The other view is, that God has shewn to man the sacrificial victim, the blood of Christ, as shadowed forth by sacrifice; so that it only remained for man to believe and live—"to believe with the heart unto righteousness, and with the mouth to make confession unto salvation;" and then to manifest his faith by his works.

Chap. VII. 1-13. The Turks and Persians are fond of fruit before it be ripe, and it is said not to prove hurtful to them; to this it is that the prophet refers when he speaks of the "first ripe fruit." His lamentation over the death of the good man is very affecting; the testimony he bears to the decay of virtue and piety among the people, shews the extent to which apostasy had gone. The test of individual character is brotherly kindness and charity. He who can catch "his brother with a net," will make no scruple in murdering the stranger. The state of things depicted in ver. 3, indicates a deplorable condition of society. By the time that iniquity has gained so thorough an ascendancy among the princes of the people and the dispensers of justice, it may well be supposed to have subjected the people to its dire dominion. The last resource of good men in evil times is to look to the Lord, for he will hear their cry, and interpose on their behalf, to the confusion of their enemies. Ver. 14-20. The "rod" sometimes signifies the sceptre of the sovereign, and sometimes the shepherd's crook. The abounding of iniquity, in one view, serves to prove the truth of piety. Paul's heart was stirred within him when he saw the city of Athens wholly given to idolatry.

NAHUM.

Nothing is known of this prophet beyond his own writings. The burden of his awful message is the destruction of Nineveh, which he sets forth in a manner peculiarly pathetic and impressive. His fire, spirit, and sublimity, have been considered as unequalled even by the greatest of the prophets. The allegorical pictures he presents are remarkable for their beauty.

David's eye affected his heart, and rivers of waters ran down his cheeks, because "the wicked kept not God's law." Such feeling furnishes strong evidence of sincerity; whereas to be unmoved by the outbursts of impiety, but too surely indicates a community of spirit, whatever pretence there may be to a contrary disposition. Micah, like others of the minor prophets, finishes in a strain full of evangelical consolation, inspiring hope for the captives, when they were forgiven, and restored to the favour of the God of Abraham.

Chap. I. 1-8. The Assyrians had covered Israel with desolation, and frequently harassed Judah, and it would seem at this time they had menaced it with utter destruction, triumphing as if their idols had vanquished the God of Israel. This accounts for the peculiarity of the language of Nahum. All the prophets testify to the patience of God, and his long-suffering towards the wicked, yet to these attributes there were limits set by justice, and a due regard to the honour of the Divine government. The portraiture here painted by the prophet is grand and terrible in the extreme, vividly exhibiting justice towards those whom mercy has failed to overcome. Ver. 9-15. The image here set forth is derived from a thorn hedge, and the import seems to be that they were so implicated together that they would be entirely destroyed at once, as so much stubble ready for destruction. While they combine and plot in wickedness, as thorns interwoven in a hedge, and associate together in drunkenness and riot, the judgments of the Lord would fall upon them, and at once consume them. It is interesting to observe how the justice and the mercy of the Lord are blended; all acts of the former are to be viewed, with respect to his own people, as so many displays of the latter. There was to be an end to the chastisements bestowed upon Judah; in due season, the Lord by his grace would change their hearts, and produce in them repentance, which would prepare them for mercy. There is this to cheer the Church of God in the darkest night of her history: the morning is sure to come, and if it come with clouds, they will pass away, and the Sun of righteousness will at length shine with healing in his beams.

Chap. II. 1-7. At the time appointed for the subversion of the Assyrian empire, appropriate instrumentali-the day of his preparation, and the fir-trees shall be terribly shaken.

4 The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways: ⁵they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings.

5 He shall recount his ⁶worthies: ⁷they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the ⁸defence shall be prepared.

6 The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be ⁹dissolved.

7 And ⁸Huzzab shall be ¹led away captive, she shall be brought up, and her maids shall lead her as with the voice of ²doves, tabering upon their breasts.

8 But Nineveh is ²of old ¹like a pool of water; yet they shall flee away. ³Stand, stand, shall they cry: but none shall ³look back.

9 Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold; ⁴for there is none end of the store and glory out of all the ⁵pleasant furniture.

10 She is empty, and void, and waste; and the heart melteth, and the knees smite together, and much pain is in all loins, ¹¹and the faces of them all gather blackness.

11 Where is ¹the dwelling of the lions, and the feeding-place of the young lions, where the lion, even the old lion, walked, and the lion's whelp, and ²none made them afraid?

12 The lion did tear in pieces enough for his whelps, and strangled for his lionesses, ¹and filled his holes with prey, and his dens with ravin.

ties were raised up, by whom means were adopted for the accomplishment of the Divine purpose. She had been long spared and much prospered, but her wickedness was to have an end, and her past conduct towards God's people to be visited with retribution. There is something in history remarkable as to the words of the sixth verse, "The gates of the rivers shall be opened." One of the most eminent ancient historians tells us that there was a prophecy received from the forefathers of the Ninevites, that the city should not be taken till the river first became its enemy. It came to pass in the third year of the siege, that the river being swollen with continued rains overflowed part of the city, and threw down a portion of the wall; Sardanapalus, the king, in his terror, imagining that the oracle had been at last accomplished, and that the river was now manifestly become the enemy of the city, resigned all hope of safety: and, lest he should fall into the hands of the enemy, built a huge funeral pyre in the palace, and having collected all his gold and silver and royal vestments, together with his wives, concubines, and eunuchs, placed himself with them in a little apartment built in the midst of the pyre, where they were all consumed to ashes. When the death of the king was announced, the enemy entered in by the breach which the waters had made, and took the city. But their triumph was much abated by the frenzied decision of the king. Ver. 8-13. Another effect of the taking of the city was the flight of the inhabitants. Danger to them was a new thing; long ages of peace, prosperity, and luxury had rendered them at once effeminate and secure. The whole city, with all its treasures, except those of the king and such as were hid or removed, became the prey of the invaders. What lions are to the beasts of the forest, that the kings of Assyria had been to surrounding countries; they were a terror to the earth, and the scourge of the nations.

Chap. III. 1-12. Nineveh, notwithstanding her peerless pre-eminence in commerce, was yet "a bloody city, full of lies and robbery." The assault of the city is here presented, in a vision to the prophet's eye, in terms of matchless force and fervour. The terrible scene is made to live, by anticipation, before the reader. He sees the prancing horses, the dashing chariots bounding after the HABAKKUK.

From the internal evidences of this book, it seems probable that the prophet lived after the destruction of the Assyrian Empire, which followed the fall of Nineveh, in the year of the world 3392, and shortly before the devastation of Judah by Nebuchadnezzar. Nahum foretold the destruction of the Assyrians, who carried the Ten Tribes into captivity; and Habakkuk predicted the judgments that were to come on the Chaldeans, who completed the captivity of the two remaining tribes. The design of the prophecy appears to have been to impart consolation to the people of God under their unparalleled afflictions.

CHAPTER I.

Habakkuk is shewn the fearful vengeance of the Chaldeans.

THE ¹burden which Habakkuk the prophet did see.

2 O LORD, how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear! even cry out unto thee of violence, ²and thou wilt not save!

3 Why dost thou shew me iniquity, and cause me to behold grievance? for spoiling and violence are before me: and there are that raise up strife and contention.

4 Therefore ¹the law is slacked, and judgment doth never go forth: for the wicked doth compass about the righteous; therefore ²wrong judgment proceedeth.

5 ¶ Behold ye among the heathen, and regard, and wonder marvellously; ¹for I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe, though it be told you.

6 For, lo, I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and hasty nation, which shall march fiery steeds, the polished swords and shining spears, and the heaps of the slaughtered, before him. The true representation of a battle, when one side is broken, and the cavalry of the conqueror fall in upon them, hewing them down with their swords, and trampling them to pieces under the hoofs of the horses, is a picture fraught with unutterable horror; and such was the condition to which these proud idolaters would be ultimately subjected. Ver. 13-19. They are here counselled to make provision for the siege by cultivating food, and filling the cisterns with water — fortifying the strongholds, and making ready stores of bricks to repair the battered walls. Although the wall of the city bordered on the river, it might not be safe to water there, within reach of the enemy's missile weapons and engines, and, therefore, they were required to provide otherwise for their necessities. The river Tigris ran near to Nineveh, which enabled them to lay in an abundant store for a lengthened period. The multiplication of her merchants above the stars of heaven, is a figurative representation of their vast numbers, wealth, and luxury. By the stumbling of the shepherds, is to be understood the apathy of the Assyrian rulers, who had become drowsy and self-indulgent, and who, in that state, would be assaulted and slain, and left unburied on the ground, while the people were scattered as lost sheep, with none to care for them. Those predictions which had gone before concerning Nineveh, were all to be accomplished, to prove to the nations that there is verily a God in heaven, who can reveal the secrets of after ages, and at the appointed period accomplish his own purposes. The power of empire can make no resistance to the providence of God. He wills, and it is done; he commands, and it stands fast. Every enemy of the Church of God will at length be subdued, and his people raised to a state of purity, love, and obedience, which will render such chastisement no longer necessary.

Chap. I. 1-11. The prophet was deeply affected by the perversity of the people, and the utter failure of his earnest endeavours to bring them to repentance. None of the prophets present a more deplorable picture of the national profligacy. The law was slackened, and judgment never went forth, because the wicked encompassed 12 ¶ Art thou not from everlasting, O LORD my God, mine Holy One? we shall not die. O LORD, thou hast ordained them for judgment; and, O mighty God, thou hast established them for correction.

13 Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity: wherefore lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously, and holdest thy tongue when the wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous than he?

14 And makest men as the fishes of the sea, as the creeping things, that have no ruler over them?

15 They take up all of them with the angle, they catch them in their net, and gather them in their drag; therefore they rejoice and are glad.

16 Therefore they sacrifice unto their net, and burn incense unto their drag; because by them their portion is fat, and their meat plenteous.

17 Shall they therefore empty their net, and not spare continually to slay the nations?

CHAPTER II.

2 Habakkuk is informed that he must wait by faith.

5 The judgment upon the Chaldeans.

I WILL stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will watch to see what he will say unto me, and what I shall answer when I am reproved.

2 And the LORD answered me, and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.

3 For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry.

4 Behold, his soul which is lifted up is not upright in him: but the just shall live by his faith.

5 ¶ Yea also, because he transgresseth by wine, he is a proud man, neither keepeth at home, who enlargeth his desire as hell, and is as death, and cannot be satisfied, but gathereth unto him all nations, and heapeth unto him all people:

6 Shall not all these take up a parable against him, and a taunting proverb against him, and say, Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his! how 16 Thou art filled with shame for glory: drink thou also, and let thy forehead be uncovered: the cup of the LORD's right hand shall be turned unto thee, and shameful spewing shall be on thy glory.

17 For the violence of Lebanon shall cover thee, and the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid, because of men's blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein.

18 ¶ What profiteth the graven image that the maker thereof hath graven it; the molten image, and a teacher of lies, that the maker of his work trusteth therein, to make dumb idols?

19 Woe unto him that saith to the wood, Awake; to the dumb stone, Arise, the righteous. Iniquity was everywhere in the ascendant. In the government of nations, the mere carnal eye sees nothing beyond the plots of politicians, and the ambition of kings; but it is clear from all Scripture, and from the declaration in ver. 6, "Lo, I raise up the Chaldeans, which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess the dwelling-places that are not theirs," that the hand of the Lord regulates the succession of thrones, and determines both war and peace among the nations of the earth. This he does without at all interfering with the free-will of men, and so destroying their accountability. In the execution of their own plans, they become voluntary instruments in accomplishing the counsels of the Lord. Ver. 12-17. The sublimity of the prophet here is wonderful. The human mind can form no idea of the import of the term "everlasting." When the highest powers have put forth their utmost efforts in heaping millions upon millions, the result is nothing as compared with eternity. Light and darkness are not more opposed to one another than holiness and sin; therefore God, whose holiness is infinite, is of purer eyes than to look upon iniquity. In proportion as his children possess the spirit of their Father in heaven, they will view sin as he does, and stand at the furthest distance from transgression.

Chap. II. 1-11. The Lord here answers the importunities of his faithful servant. A gracious promise is given him that the vision should be continued till the time appointed for the appearance of the Messiah; and in the faith of this, the pious, as opposed to the vain and the proud, are encouraged to hold on, while the enemies of God's people are threatened with destruction as the due reward of their iniquity. The reference to writing-tables signifies the pains which were to be taken to preserve a faithful record of Divine communications. The tablets were overspread with wax, on which the writing was engraved with an iron pen; and it was so large and legible, that even a person running might read. The reference is, probably, to the custom of suspending laws on pillars, or on public buildings, where their meaning might be ascertained at a glance. Habakkuk was honoured to record one of the most important doctrines of Scripture—"The just shall live by his faith." The man who is made just by his faith shall live; and he will walk by the faith through which he has been justified. Ver. 12-20. The prophet is careful to specify those forms of wickedness which particularly prevailed; such as "building towns with blood, and stablishing cities by iniquity." How rapid the transition from the mischief to the remedy! "The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea;" and that will set all right. The glorious Gospel will prove the power of God to salvation to every one that believes.

Chap. III. 1-16. The sublime description of the prophet is matter for devout admiration rather than for comment. Its splendour dazzles and overpowers the eye of the mind, impressing the conviction of created nothingness. Ver. 17-19. The beauty of these verses has been the theme of praise in every age. The prophet had made up his mind to manifold and overwhelming distress; but the prospect was alleviated by thoughts of the compassion of his heavenly Father. He clearly saw that the Chaldeans would cover the land with desolation; but when all was gone, Abraham's God would still remain the inheritance of his children. Whatever may befall the world, the Church is safe, and every individual member of it. Faith in fearful times lays hold upon Omnipotence, and relies upon infinite and everlasting love—well assured that the covenant cannot fail, and that God will open up a way of deliverance for his people. Mercies are often little thought of while abundantly enjoyed, and their worth is learned only from their withdrawal. The godly man, however, has sources of satisfaction and consolation unknown to the men of the world. When the heavens shall pass away, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, He will remain the hope and joy of His people.

ZEPHANIAH.

Zephaniah was contemporary with Jeremiah, in the first year of that prophet, and he occasionally uses the same language. The burden of his message is, the wickedness of the people, whom he severely rebukes, predicting the invasion of the Chaldeans, with its desolating results. As the only method of escaping the impending vengeance, he exhorts the people to repentance; and concludes his labours by an animating glimpse at the latter-day glory, and the universal establishment of the Church of Christ.

CHAPTER I.

God's severe judgments against Judah for diverse sins.

Chap. I. 1-11. In the days of Zephaniah, idolatry was rampant, and the people manifested the most inconsistent and incongruous conduct, in worshipping, and "swearing by the Lord, and by Malcham," at the same time. Amidst all this profession, they turned back from the Lord, neither did they seek nor inquire after him. They looked for felicity in transgression, and became increasingly debased and benighted by their idolatrous orgies. Ver. 12-18. The intimation made here is terrible. The "search with candles," implied the closest inquisition, so that none should escape; they who atheistically said, "The Lord will not do good, neither will he do evil," were destined to a speedy experience of vengeance. By people being "settled on their lees," we are to understand, a people fully hardened in transgression, through long continued impunity and abundance of worldly prosperity. Wine grows stronger and more heady when long settled on the lees, and so departure from the living God rises into scepticism, then into infidelity, and then finishes in atheism. "The wicked hath said in his heart, There is no God." Plenty and prosperity, while blessings, are liable to be perverted to evil. Piety alone will enable us to use the world as not abusing it, habitually remembering that the fashion of it passeth away.

Chap. II. 1-7. The prophet lays the axe to the root of the tree. Departure from the Lord was the national crime, and the source of the national calamity. There was, therefore, but one remedy—it was for "the meek of the earth to seek the Lord," as the salt of the land, and the light of the nation. They, and only they, could offer the prayer which had power with God, and which might perchance, at least, stay the approaching calamity fiere anger of the LORD come upon you, before the day of the LORD's anger come upon you.

3 ^bSeek ye the LORD, ^call ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; ^dseek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye shall be ^ehid in the day of the LORD's anger.

12 ⁿYe Ethiopians also, ye shall be slain by my sword.

13 And ^mhe will stretch out his hand against the north, and destroy Assyria; and ⁿwill make Nineveh a desolation, and dry like a wilderness.

14 And flocks shall lie down in the midst of her, all the beasts of the nations: both the ^ocormorant and the bittern shall lodge in the ^pupper lintels of it; their voice shall sing in the windows; desolation shall be in the thresholds: ^qfor he shall uncover the cedar-work.

15 This is the rejoicing city that dwelt carelessly, that said in her heart, I am, and there is none besides me: ^rhow is she become a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in! ^severy one that passeth by her shall hiss, and wag his hand.

CHAPTER III.

1 Jerusalem reproved for divers sins. 8 Israel exhorted to wait for restoration.

WOE to ^ther that is filthy and polluted, to the oppressing city!

2 She obeyed not the voice; she received not ^ucorrection; ^vshe trusted not in the LORD; ^wshe drew not near to her God.

3 Her princes within her are roaring lions; her judges are evening wolves, they gnaw not the bones till the morning.

4 Her prophets are light and treacherous persons: her priests have polluted the sanctuary, they have done violence to the law.

5 The ^xjust LORD is in the midst thereof; ^yhe will not do iniquity: ^zevery morning doth he ^{aa}bring his judgment to light, he faileth not; but the unjust knoweth no shame.

6 I have ^{ab}cut off the nations: their ^{ac}towers are desolate; I made their streets waste, that none passeth by: their cities are destroyed, so that there is no man, that there is none inhabitant.

7 I said, ^{ad}Surely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive instruction; so their dwelling should not be cut off, howsoever for a season. It was for them to "seek righteousness, and to seek meekness," to cultivate those virtues themselves, and labour to produce them in their neighbours. One happy result of this course would be realised—they themselves would be hid in the day of the Lord's anger. It is affecting to observe how, everywhere, mercy blends with, even where it does not rejoice against, judgment. The record of desolation here set forth, closes with the consolatory assurance that "the Lord their God should visit them and turn their captivity." Ver. 8-15. Idolatry—the people's besetting sin—was a special object of the Divine abhorrence, and hence the threat set forth in ver. 11, to "famish all the gods of the earth." At that period men will worship the Most High, every one from his place, even all the isles of the heathen.

Chap. III. 1-7. These minor prophets have in them much more that possesses a spiritual bearing than at first sight appears. The portrait of backsliding is vividly set forth, in all its essential features, in the second verse of the present chapter. Backsliding commences in disobedience—chastisements must follow; and the thorough backslider despises them. Under these circumstances, he ceases to trust in the Lord, taking the affairs of his earthly pilgrimage into his own hand, surrounding himself with an atmosphere of settled unbelief; and, when things have reached this pass, he no longer draws near to his God. This state of mind extensively prevails amongst professing Christians in seasons of coldness and of falling away; and it is necessarily attended with a corresponding deportment on the part of pastors and teachers. Like the prophets, they will be "light and treacherous," polluting the sanctuary, and doing violence to the law. Such a state of things possesses in itself no element of self-recovery. All reformation must, therefore, originate with a power from without, and that power is the Spirit of God. The comfort of the Church, however, is, that the Lord is in the midst of his people, that he will do no iniquity, and that in his own time he will restrain that of those he loves; and though he may chastise them with scorpions, he will ultimately restore them to his favour. Ver. 5 presents one of those innumerable axioms of Scripture, penetrating and beautiful: "The unjust knoweth no shame." How true! When God takes in hand the work of reforming his people, difficulties will speedily be removed; when he says, "Surely thou wilt fear me; thou wilt receive instruction," it is done. Folly rebuked gives place to

I punished them: but they rose early, and ^bcorrupted all their doings.

8 ¶ Therefore ¹wait ye upon me, saith the LORD, until the day that I ²rise up to the prey; for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: ³for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy.

9 For then will I turn to the people a pure ⁴language, ⁵that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one ⁶consent.

10 From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering.

11 In that day shalt thou not be ashamed for all thy doings, wherein thou hast transgressed against me: for then I will take away out of the midst of thee them that rejoice in thy pride; and thou shalt no more be haughty ⁷because of my ⁸holy mountain.

12 I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, ⁹and they shall trust in the name of the LORD.

13 ¶ The ¹⁰remnant of Israel shall ¹¹not do iniquity, nor speak lies; neither shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth: for they shall feed and lie down, and none shall make them afraid.

HAGGAI.

Haggai lived about 520 years before the Christian era. He was probably born in Babylon, during the Captivity, and returned with Zerubbabel. His prophecy has special reference to the opposition which was made to the building of the Temple after the foundation had been laid.

CHAPTER I.

² Haggai, reproving the people's negligence, ³incited them to build the house, ¹²and promised God's assistance therein.

IN the second year of Darius the king, in the sixth month, in the first day of the month, came the word of the LORD ¹by ²Haggai the prophet ³unto Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, ⁴governor of Judah, and to ⁵Joshua the son of ⁶Josedech, the high priest, saying,

2 ¶ Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, This people say, The time is not come, the time that the LORD's house should be built.

3 Then came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying, wisdom, and the ear is open to admit doctrine. Ver. 8-20. We have throughout these verses a larger amount of encouragement and consolatory statement, than is to be found within the same space in any other minor prophet. When the Holy Spirit shall have been poured out in the latter day, Zion will be built up. The people will be turned to a pure language, that they may call on the name of the Lord, and serve him with one consent. The enlightening and subduing power of holy love will everywhere be felt. Human nature will through all the earth present itself in a new aspect—holy, harmless, and undefiled. The image of the Saviour will be deeply engraved upon the hearts of all nations, kindreds, peoples, and tongues.

Chap. I. 1-11. Where there is an inward aversion to a given course of proceeding, reasons will seldom be wanting in support of it. The people thought the time for building the house of the Lord was not yet come, although they had been allowed to return for that very purpose. The objection was met by the pungent question, "Is it time for you to dwell in ceiled houses, and this house lie waste?" The people, notwithstanding their affliction, were more intent on the promotion of 9 Ye looked for much, and, lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did ^ablow upon it. Why? saith the LORD of hosts. ^bBecause of mine house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house.

12 ¶ Then ^eZerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of Haggai the prophet, (as the LORD their God had sent him,) and the people did ^ffear before the LORD.

10 ¶ In ^jthe four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying,

11 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Ask now the priests ^kconcerning the law, saying, 12 If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? And the priests answered and said, No.

13 Then said Haggai, If one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean.

their personal comfort than of social piety. Were the bulk of a nation to give themselves to religion with half the zeal which characterises their business movements, the world would soon present a very different appearance. The only remedy for such a state of mind is consideration; and hence we find the prophet, once and again, urging the people to that duty. Obedience would be found the short and the sure way to the accomplishment of the object their hearts were bent on. Their negligence in this matter had withheld from them the blessing, without which there is no prosperity. They had been smitten without their knowledge; their crops had been a failure; there had been a want of the comforts of life, and distress was general; "they looked for much, but it came to little;" that blessing was withheld which "maketh rich, and addeth no sorrow." In their unbelief they ascribed these things to natural causes, but the prophet undeceived them, giving them plainly to understand that it was a Divine chastisement for their indifference to the Divine honour, resulting from their carnality of heart. Ver. 12-15. A measure of success attended the rebuke and the remonstrance of Haggai such as seldom cheered the hearts of the prophets. A Divine power clearly accompanied it; "for the people did fear before the Lord," who graciously received their returning homage by the joyful assurance, "I am with you." A Divine influence went forth at the same time, and rested on Zerubbabel and Joshua, and the remnant of the people. The result of this gracious influence was at once to invigorate and impel the people to their duty, and accordingly "they came, and did work in the house of the Lord." God's people are always willing in the day of his power to do the work assigned them. There is every reason to believe that even under the present dispensation the worldly condition of Christians has more to do with their religious integrity than they suppose. The promise is absolute concerning Zion: "They shall prosper that love her."

Chap. II. 1-9. Never were circumstances more different than those in which the two temples were respectively built, and the results of the respective endeavours corresponded with that difference. The few ancient men who saw the first temple, and compared the second with it, judged it as nothing. Solomon brought to his task all the resources both of his father's reign and of his own boundless wealth, and an amount of workmanship of unparalleled magnitude. No wonder, therefore, that the results were matchless and marvellous. In the present case, the means were very limited, and the workmen few. Nor was this all; they had just returned from captivity, where they were depressed and debased, and where mechanical skill, in all that was necessary to such an enterprise, had died out. Under these circumstances, 14 Then answered Haggai, and said, ^aSo is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD; and so is every work of their hands; ¹and that which they offer there is unclean.

15 And now, I pray you, consider from this day and upward, ²from before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the LORD;

16 Since those days were, when one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten: when one came to the press-fat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty.

ZECHARIAH.

Zechariah, having been a captive, returned with his brethren, and consequently he was able, from experience, to sympathise with them amid all their trials and afflictions. His special province as a preacher consisted in encouraging them to build the Temple. Next to Isaiah, he was the most evangelical of all the prophets, enjoying bright and glorious visions of the coming kingdom of the Lord Jesus. He has, therefore, not inaptly been designated the Sun among the Lesser Prophets; although that Sun is often clouded with obscurity. His obscurity, however, arises not more from the abruptness of his style, than from his reference to facts and circumstances now unknown.

CHAPTER I.

1 Zechariah exhorted to repentance. 12 Comfortable promises made to Jerusalem.

IN the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah the son of Barachiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

2 The LORD hath been ¹sore displeased with your fathers.

3 Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ²Turn ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, ³and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 Be ye not as your fathers, unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ⁴Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings: ⁵but they did not hear, nor hearken unto me, saith the LORD.

5 ⁶Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever?

so fitted to dishearten, the prophet was sent to encourage them by the assurance that the Spirit of the Lord remained among them. This temple, notwithstanding the people's poverty and its plainness, would be far more distinguished than that of Solomon. An event awaited the world of unparalleled importance, which would come itself with that temple—the arrival of “the Desire of all nations.” “God manifest in the flesh” would come and appear in that very house, filling it with the Divine glory. There the Prince of Peace would stand, proclaiming “peace on earth, and good will towards men.” Ver. 10-23. Such language as the foregoing might well strengthen the hearts of the people. The prophet here first reminds them that their past adversity arose from their negligence relative to the 7 ¶ Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Sebat, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah the son of Barachiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

8 I saw by night, and behold a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the myrtle-trees that were in the bottom; and behind him were there red horses, ³speckled, and white.

They would not only possess abundance, but enjoy it, connecting every blessing with the hand of their heavenly Father.

Chap. I. 1-11. The eighth month corresponds with the latter part of our October and the beginning of November. The building of the temple had been resumed this year, on the 24th day of the sixth month—that is, the beginning of September—in pursuance of a message from the Prophet Haggai. The greatness of the work, added to the time already lost, and the peculiar difficulties to be overcome, led the prophet to urge expe-

12 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD answered and said, O LORD of hosts, how long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, and on the cities of Judah, against which thou hast had indignation these threescore and ten years?

13 And the LORD answered the angel that talked with me ^mwith good words, and comfortable words.

CHAPTER II.

1 God, in his care of Jerusalem, sendeth to measure it.
6 The redemption of Zion.

I LIFTED up mine eyes again, and I looked, and behold °a man with a measuring-line in his hand.

2 Then said I, Whither goest thou? And he said unto me, To measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof.

3 And, behold, °the angel that talked with me went forth, °and another angel went out to meet him,

4 And said unto him, Run, speak to this °young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein:

5 For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her °a wall of fire round about, and will be °the glory in the midst of her.

6 ¶ Ho, ho, come forth, and flee from the land of the north, saith the LORD: for I have °spread you abroad as the four winds of the heaven, saith the LORD.

7 Deliver thyself, O Zion, °that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.

8 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, °After the glory hath he sent me unto the nations which spoiled you; for he that toucheth you toucheth °the apple of his eye.

9 For, behold, I will shake mine hand upon them, °and they shall be a spoil to their servants: and ye shall know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me.

10 ¶ Sing °and rejoice, O daughter of Zion: for, °lo, I come, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the LORD.

11 And °many nations shall be joined to the LORD in that day, and shall be my people: and I will dwell in the midst of thee; and °thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto thee.

dition. The fathers were gone, and going, and the prophets in their turn would follow; it therefore became them, with all their might, to begird themselves for the holy undertaking before them. Ver. 12-21. "Good words, and comfortable words," were very necessary to persons so circumstanced; their trials were great and varied, and their enemies both malignant and powerful. The intercession of the angel in their behalf was accepted, and the blessing implored would be extended to them. It has appeared, throughout all the prophets already considered, that although the invading nations accomplished the purposes of the Most High, by inflicting on his people the chastisements that were due to their idolatry, their deeds had not his glory for their aim; they were simply impelled by hate and ambition—crimes which they aggravated by needless cruelty to the Jews, and for these things, in due season, they would receive their due reward.

Chap. II. 1-5. The character of the man with the measuring-line is invested with mystery. Some have viewed him as representing Nehemiah with his commission to build the walls of Jerusalem, which had hitherto remained without enclosure; others, as the Messiah himself; while a third party have looked upon him as an angel in human appearance. Such is an example of the fruits of attempting to be wise above what is written. The promise made in ver. 5, that He would be a "wall of fire about the city, and the glory in the midst of her," is one of a peculiarly precious character, and it must have produced the most cheering effects on the minds of the people. Walls of brick and stone might be breached or broken down, but a wall of fire none could penetrate or destroy. This beautiful and most expressive image is thought to have been derived from a custom adopted in the East, by travellers in the night season; they kept fires burning around their camps, and by this means protected themselves against the wild beasts. Ver. 6-13. It is clear that the union of many nations to the Lord, set forth in ver. 11, indicates the all-absorbing power of the Church of Christ, which is ultimately destined to gather to itself all nations, kindreds, tongues, and peoples. The assurance, "I will dwell in the midst of thee," is a promise which has never been revoked; and although it will be accomplished in a peculiar manner to Israel, it will also hold to the Gentile Church to the close of ages. When the King is in the midst of His people, 12 And the LORD shall inherit Judah his portion in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again.

13 ^aBe silent, O all flesh, before the LORD, ^bfor he is raised up out of ^chis holy habitation.

CHAPTER IV.

1 By the golden candlestick is foretold Zerubbabel's success. 11 By the two olive-trees, the two anointed ones.

all will be peace, truth, justice, love, holiness, and happiness.

Chap. III. 1-7. Joshua, the high priest, standing before "the Angel Jehovah" as the representative of Israel, seeks a blessing upon his afflicted people; and while he does so, the arch-enemy of souls stands at his right hand to resist him, and shew cause why his plea should not be heard. We may hence learn the vigilant and malicious endeavours of the Wicked One to discourage the servants of God in their work, and his systematic efforts to prevent their success. But in the hour of difficulty the Advocate of the faithful is always at hand. The Angel Jehovah—Christ Jesus—was present to rebuke Satan, apprising him that the Lord had chosen Jerusalem, to which he would establish his promises and fulfil his purposes of mercy. To rebuke, properly signifies to check or restrain; and this not merely in words, but by the exercise of the necessary power. The filthy garments with which Joshua was clothed, were, doubtless, emblematic of the sinfulness both of himself and of his people. The figure is full of instruction to the Gentile world. No righteousness of mortals would suffice to appear in before the Lord. The address to Joshua, "I have caused thine iniquity to pass away from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment," is most beautifully expressive of the bestowment of the righteousness of God by faith in Jesus Christ. Ver. 8-10.

Joshua and his friends were greatly wondered at; and so are decided Christians in the midst of an ungodly world. Isaiah testified that, in his day, every one that departed from iniquity was accounted mad. The stone with the seven eyes has necessarily a mystic import, bearing an intimate relation to The Branch—the Lord Jesus—and his kingdom. The Messiah himself is foretold under the metaphor of a stone, not only in this passage, but in many others of the prophetic writings. The Lord, by Isaiah, promises to lay in Zion "a stone, a tried stone, a precious stone, a sure foundation." The seven eyes probably denoted that each should be the perfection of wisdom and knowledge in the great Antitype intended by this stone, Christ Jesus the Lord, the foundation of his Church and hope of his people. The removal of "the iniquity of the land in one day," implies a wonderful exercise of Divine mercy; and the phrase, every man "calling to his neighbour under the vine, and under the fig-tree," vividly portrayed the peace and the felicity which await the world when the reign of the Messiah shall have been established.

Chap. IV. 1-14. The chandelier is considered as representing the temple, which was then being erected; and as it was supplied with oil issuing from the olive-trees, without the labour of man, so should the temple be completed, not by human effort alone, but by the Spirit of the living God. "Not by might nor by power, 10 For who hath ^adespised the day of small things? ^afor they shall rejoice, and shall see the ^bplummet in the hand of Zerubbabel ^cwith those seven; ^mthey are the eyes of the LORD which run to and fro through the whole earth.

11 ¶ Then answered I, and said unto him, What ^aare these two olive-trees upon the right ^aside of the candlestick, and upon the left ^aside thereof?

12 And I answered again, and said unto him, What ^abe these two olive-branches, which, ^athrough the two golden pipes, ^aempty ^athe golden oil out of themselves?

13 And he answered me and said, Knowest thou not what these ^abe? And I said, No, my lord.

14 Then said he, ^aThese are the two ^aanointed ones, ^athat stand by ^athe Lord of the whole earth.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The vision of the four chariots. 9 By the crowns of Joshua are showed the church and kingdom of Christ.

AND I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass.

2 In the first chariot were ^ared horses, and in the second chariot ^ablack horses,

3 And in the third chariot ^awhite horses, and in the fourth chariot ^agrisled and ^abay horses.

4 Then I answered and said ^aunto the angel that talked with me, What are these, my lord?

but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts," must be the watchword of the faithful in every age, and in every clime. It is meet that their confidence should rest where God has placed their strength. Alone, they are nothing; but united with the Spirit, they are omnipotent. No matter what may be the magnitude of the difficulties which stand in the way of the establishment of the kingdom of heaven upon earth; God hath willed it, and it shall be done! He that planted the sun in the heavens, and marshalled all the stars, will bring forth the Head Stone of the spiritual temple with shoutings of "Grace, grace unto it!" People are but too prone to judge by appearances, exaggerating the importance of instruments, and overlooking the Hand from which all prosperity must flow. The day of small things, however, must not be despised. What could have been more apparently insignificant and contemptible, than the captives who returned to the land of their fathers' sepulchres to build the temple, and the city, and to replenish Palestine? But they were sustained by the authority of the greatest king on earth, who supplied them with every temporal necessity; while the God of heaven stood pledged to prosper them in all their ways, protecting and preserving them from their numerous and malignant foes. Thus it is the Church of Christ of which these captives and their work were a very striking emblem. Judging by appearances, there was a time when the notion of subverting the idolatry of the world, and filling it with a knowledge of the true God, seemed something worse than chimerical. But already wonders have been wrought, and the experience accumulated clearly shews, that in the fulness of time the gods of the heathen will be banished, and the reign of justice, truth, and love established through every region. The Lord will hasten it in his time. Let his people, therefore, labour on in the assured confidence that it shall be done.

Chap. V. 1-11. The roll contained the curse which impended over the rebellious people. It was written on both sides, like that of Ezekiel; on one side were contained the judgments against stealing, and on the other those against false swearing, which appear to have been prevalent crimes at that period. While people seek wealth by fraud, perjury, and other crimes, they open their doors to admit the curse which never fails to follow. The little that a righteous man hath is truly better than the riches of many wicked. Well said one of the wisest and best of men, "Nothing was ever lost by praying, or gained by stealing."

Chap. VI. 1-8. The four chariots are considered as representing the four great empires of the world, the Babylonian, Persian, Grecian, and Roman, all distinguished from each other by their order and their attri-forth into the north country; and the white go forth after them; and the grisled go forth toward the south country.

7 And the bay went forth, and sought to go, that they might walk to and fro through the earth: and he said, Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth. So they walked to and fro through the earth.

8 Then cried he upon me, and spake unto me, saying, Behold, these that go toward the north country have quieted my spirit in the north country.

9 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

10 Take of them of the captivity, even of Heldai, of Tobijah, and of Jedaiah, which are come from Babylon, and come thou the same day, and go into the house of Josiah the son of Zephaniah;

11 Then take silver and gold, and make crowns, and set them upon the head of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest;

12 And speak unto him, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the LORD:

13 Even he shall build the temple of the LORD; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne: and the counsel of peace shall be between them both.

14 And the crowns shall be to Helem, and to Tobijah, and to Jedaiah, and to Hen the son of Zephaniah, for a memorial in the temple of the LORD.

15 And they that are far off shall come and build in the temple of the LORD; and ye shall know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto you. And this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently obey the voice of the LORD your God.

LORD came unto Zechariah in the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu;

2 When they had sent unto the house of God Sherezzer and Regem-melech, and their men, to pray before the LORD,

3 And to speak unto the priests which were in the house of the LORD of hosts, and to the prophets, saying, Should I weep in the fifth month, separating myself, as I have done these so many years?

4 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD of hosts unto me, saying,

5 Speak unto all the people of the land, and to the priests, saying, When ye fasted and mourned in the fifth and seventh month, even those seventy years, did ye at all fast unto me, even to me?

6 And when ye did eat, and when ye did drink, did not ye eat for yourselves, and drink for yourselves?

7 Should ye not hear the words which the LORD hath cried by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, and the cities thereof round about her, when men inhabited the south and the plain?

9 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, Execute true judgment, and shew mercy and compassions every man to his brother:

10 And oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor the poor; and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart.

11 But they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear.

12 Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant-stone, lest they should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent in his Spirit by the former prophets: therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts.

13 Therefore it is come to pass, that as he cried, and they would not hear; so they cried, and I would not hear, saith the LORD of hosts:

14 But I scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations whom they butes. Mountains have been viewed as symbols of kingdoms or princes, while brass implies strength and durability. The figure may amount to this, that other kingdoms renowned for their strength should precede the four chariots, of which the only interpretation given by the angel is, that they are the four spirits—literally, the four winds. It has been considered that the bay horses represent the Roman Empire, the last and strongest of the prophetic monarchies, with its various forms of government. They may, however, denote dispensations mingled with wrath and mercy, or those lighter afflictions and judgments which are common in the world. Ver. 9-15. The Saviour, who is never long out of the sight of these prophets, is here presented as The BRANCH, who would, in due time, assume human nature as a stem from the root of Jesse. He would certainly grow out of his place, from a virgin of the family of David, in the city of Bethlehem, where he should be born, and he would build the true temple of the Lord, of which the temples of Solomon and Zerubbabel were but types, consisting of the whole company of the redeemed, of every nation, tongue, and people. It is meet that He who is to do a work so great should bear the glory, and sit and rule upon His throne as a priest, while the counsel of peace should be between them both—that is, between Jew and Gentile, mankind and God, through one almighty Mediator.

Chap. VII. 1-14. The prophet is here instructed to deal very closely with the consciences of the people. Their afflictions were such as ought to have prompted the most fervent prayer, with the deepest humiliation. They were not wholly wanting in the external forms of these things, but the heart was far from God, and hence their prayer had no power, and their professed submission was only an aggravation of their offences. Religion, from the first, was a thing of the heart, and it referred not less to men's fellow-creatures than to the Lord of all. The prophet, therefore, enjoins them to execute judgment, and shew mercy and compassion every man to his brother. The widow and the orphan were the particular objects of Divine protection, and blessings were always promised to those who proved their friends, while their enemies were menaced with judgments. When the earth knew not: thus ^athe land was desolate after them, that no man passed through nor returned; for they laid the ^bpleasant land desolate.

CHAPTER VIII

¹ Jerusalem's restoration. ⁹ The people are encouraged to build the temple by God's favour.

AGAIN the word of the LORD of hosts came to me, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, I was jealous for Zion with great jealousy, and I was jealous for her with great fury.

3 Thus saith the LORD, "I am returned unto Zion, and will ^bdwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and Jerusalem shall be called, A city of truth; and the mountain of the LORD of hosts, The holy mountain.

4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand for ¹very age.

5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

6 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, If it be ^amarvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, should it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith the LORD of hosts.

7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will save my people from the east country, and from the ^awest country;

8 And I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem; ^aand they shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and in righteousness.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Let your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words by the mouth of the prophets, which were in the day that the foundation of the house of the LORD of hosts was laid, that the temple might be built.

10 For before these days ^athere was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast; neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in because of the affliction: for I set all men every one against his neighbour.

11 But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the LORD of hosts.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, As I thought to punish you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the LORD of hosts, and I repented not;

15 So again have I thought in these days to do well unto Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah: fear ye not.

16 ¶ These are the things that ye shall do, "Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; ^aexecute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates:

21 And the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go ^aspeedily to ^apray before the LORD, and to seek the LORD of hosts; I will go also.

22 Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the LORD of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the LORD.

shall be filled with truth and righteousness, love and compassion will every where be displayed, and the poor amongst men will find their account in the universal diffusion of the common salvation.

Chap. VIII. 1-17. When Jerusalem shall have been called "the city of truth," the people will become the subjects of a happiness of which even the best generation of their fathers had no conception. The Spirit of adoption will then be poured out in the most copious measure. Great things are indicated by these precious words, "They shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and in righteousness." The nation will then present a splendid illustration of the doctrine, that "Wisdom's ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." The captivity of Israel will have been turned in every sense; and as they had been a curse among the heathen, they will then be a blessing. "The city of truth," is an expression which implies everything that contributes to purify and to establish society. They will then comply with the injunction, "to speak every man truth to his neighbour, and to execute the judgment of truth and peace in their gates." They will no longer even imagine evil in their hearts against their neighbour; they will love no false oath, and they will eschew those things which are displeasing to God. Ver. 18-23. A state of society is here indicated which will make short work with the world's conversion. A power will be put forth by the Saviour, which will extend to the whole earth. Conversion will proceed at a rate which will excite universal astonishment amongst those who still remain to be brought in. It is not enough to call the movement extraordinary; it will be a new thing in the earth, when the inhabitants of one city shall come to another, exhorting them to unite in spiritual exercises, and in seeking the Lord of hosts. Notice is due to the prominence which is here given to prayer, to social prayer, and to special arrangements for simultaneous supplication.

CHAPTER IX.

1 God defendeth his church. 9 Zion is exhorted to rejoice for the coming of Christ.

THE burden of the word of the LORD in the land of Hadrach, and Damascus shall be the rest thereof: when the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the LORD.

2 And Hamath also shall border thereby; Tyrus, and Zidon, though it be very wise.

3 And Tyrus did build herself a strong hold, and heaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets.

4 Behold, ^athe LORD will cast her out, and he will smite her power in the sea; and she shall be devoured with fire.

5 Ashkelon shall see it, and fear; Gaza also shall see it, and be very sorrowful, and Ekron; for her expectation shall be ashamed; and the king shall perish from Gaza, and Ashkelon shall not be inhabited.

6 And a bastard shall dwell in Ashdod; and I will cut off the pride of the Philistines.

7 And I will take away his ¹blood out of his mouth, and his abominations from between his teeth: but he that remaineth, even he, shall be for our God; and he shall be as ^aa governor in Judah, and Ekron as a Jebusite.

8 And I will encamp about mine house because of the army, because of him that passeth by, and because of him that returneth; and no oppressor shall pass through them any more: for now have I seen with mine eyes.

9 ¹Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: ^abehold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and ²having salvation; ⁴lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.

During the last two centuries, there have been small movements of a somewhat corresponding nature between Christians in this and other countries; and an increased diffusion of the same influence by which these were produced, will realise the marvellous vision here presented to the prophet.

Chap. IX. 1-8. "The burden of the word of the Lord," signifies the prophecy threatening destruction to the wicked, which, notwithstanding its justice and the entire approval of the Heaven-taught heart, is painful to human nature. It has been urged as very improbable that Zechariah should predict the destruction of the temple while actually encouraging the Jews to build it; but Moses predicted the dispersion of Israel while actually encouraging them to go and possess the promised land. Solomon, moreover, was apprised of the destruction of his temple, as the punishment of the people's sins, at the very period of its dedication. Daniel, too, sometime before Zechariah, foretold the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple, and the judgments of God on the people, within the seventy weeks, on the very day when his prayer was heard for the rebuilding of the temple and the restoration of Jerusalem. Other illustrations might be cited, but these may suffice. The Divine plans not only comprise a vast compass, but are interwoven in a manner which displays the Divine wisdom. Ver. 9-17. The prediction here set forth was fulfilled during one of the most interesting periods of the Saviour's public ministry. This joyous event, by a rapid transition, is connected with the universal empire of Messiah, who shall "speak peace unto the heathen," and whose dominion shall be "from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth." Connected with this is the covenant of grace, and the pledge by which it was sealed, and the emancipation of those on whose behalf the Saviour was ultimately to die.

Chap. X. 1-12. Rain, in every age and country, has been an element of infinite importance to the human family; both man and beast were dependent upon it for sustenance and comfort. At the present hour, in Africa—the most arid continent on the globe, where produce is always at its minimum, and where, to a vast extent, the soil, if such it can be called, is incapable of culture—the rain is an object of uniform and constant solicitude.

CHAPTER XI.

1 The destruction of Jerusalem. 10 The staves, Beauty and Bands.

OPEN thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars.

2 Howl, fir-tree; for the cedar is fallen; because the ¹mighty are spoiled: howl, O ye oaks of Bashan; for the ²forest of the vintage is come down.

3 ^aThere is a voice of the howling of the shepherds; for their glory is spoiled: a voice of the roaring of young lions; ^afor the pride of Jordan is spoiled.

4 ^aThus saith ^bthe LORD my God, ^cFeed the flock of the slaughter;

5 Whose possessors slay them, and hold themselves not guilty: and they that sell them say, ^aBlessed be the LORD; for I am rich: and their own shepherds pity them not.

6 For ^aI will no more pity the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD: but, lo, I will ^adeliver the men every one into his neighbour's hand, and into the hand of his king; and they shall smite the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them.

7 And I will feed the flock of slaughter, ^aeven you, O poor of the flock. And I took unto me two staves; the one I called Beauty, and the other I called ^aBands; and I fed the flock.

8 Three shepherds also I cut off in one month; ^aand my soul ^aloathed them, ^aand their soul also abhorred me.

9 Then said I, I will not feed you: that that dieth, let it die; and that that is to be cut off, let it be cut off; and let the rest eat every one the flesh of ^aanother.

10 ^aAnd I took my staff, ^aeven ^bBeauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break

The profession of a "rain-maker," therefore, founded in the necessities of the people, and nourished by their superstition, is one of special importance; so much is this the case, that the imposture continued from age to age without detection, till the arrival of the missionaries. The Indian priests were also believed to be in favour with the Deity, and able to procure rain in answer to their prayers. When the ground is parched, the rain-makers are to intercede with the Spirit of Fire. The shepherds here referred to, as in other prophecies, signify the kings and princes, as well as prophets and priests. Ver. 4 is remarkable for its fulness; it signifies that Judah would raise up among themselves all the officers and soldiers necessary for the government and protection of the nation, and that they should not be dependent on foreign supplies. The "corner stone" of a building, and the nail on which the ornaments of the house are hung, are emblems of principal persons in the State and Church. Assyria and Egypt may be understood as symbolising the enemies of the Church generally, who are ultimately to be broken in pieces, that the kingdom of the Lord may be established. The chapter closes with a glance at the happy times which await the Church, when her members shall "walk up and down in his name," strong in faith, giving glory to God. For that day, let the saints, without ceasing, make prayer and supplication.

Chap. XI. 1-9. The "three shepherds" mentioned in ver. 8, have been the subject of conflicting conjecture. Some have viewed them as the three Maccabees—Judas, Jonathan, and Simon; others, the three wicked High Priests—Jason, Alcimus, and Menelaus; some, the three princes of the Ammonite race—Alexander, Hyrcanus, and Antigonus; and others, the Priesthood—the dictatorship—including the scribes and Pharisees, the Magistracy and Great Sanhedrim, and the smaller Councils, which were all annihilated by the Roman conquest. This is one of the most extraordinary instances extant of the conflicting sentiments which obtain among commentators, and the worthlessness of mere conjecture in the absence of light necessary to decision. Ver. 10-17. We have here one of the most important portions of prophecy, as bearing directly on the treason of Judas, and the betrayal of the Son of God. Here is the speech of "the son of perdition," who, it would seem, conducted himself with considerable haughtiness and ostentatious indifference, when he appeared before the authorities to sell his Lord. He said unto them, "If ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear." Rejoicing in the offer, they at once agreed, and weighed out to him the money. The precise and emphatic language of the prophecy could only be understood when illustrated by the event. The facts and particulars are so minute and peculiar, that it is difficult to conceive of anything prophetic coming so near to actual history; and yet, until the occasion arose which fulfilled them, without the aid of inspiration they were an impenetrable mystery. It is not too much to affirm, that the same remark applies to no small portion of unfulfilled prophecy. The portraiture here presented of a bad shepherd is very affecting; the opposite qualities would constitute a model my covenant which I had made with all the people.

11 And it was broken in that day: and ⁸so the poor of the flock that waited upon me ¹knew that it was the word of the LORD.

12 And I said unto them, If ⁹ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. ¹⁰So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver.

13 And the LORD said unto me, ¹Cast it unto the potter: ²a goodly price that I was prized at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD.

14 Then I cut asunder mine other staff, even ¹Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel.

15 ¶ And the LORD said unto me, Take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd:

16 For, lo, I will raise up a shepherd in the land, which shall not visit those that be ²cut off, neither shall seek the young one, nor heal that that is broken, nor ³feed that that standeth still; but he shall eat the flesh of the fat, and tear their claws in pieces.

be cut in pieces, though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it.

4 In that day, saith the LORD, I will smite every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madness; and I will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah, and will smite every horse of the people with blindness.

5 And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart, ³The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the LORD of hosts their God.

6 ¶ In that day will I make the governors of Judah like an hearth of fire among the wood, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf; and they shall devour all the people round about, on the right hand and on the left: and ¹Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem.

7 The LORD also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David, and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, ⁴do not magnify themselves against Judah.

8 In that day shall the LORD defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and he that is ¹feeble among them at that day shall be as David; and ²the house of David shall be as God, ³'as the angel of the LORD before them.

9 And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem.

10 ¶ And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and ¹of supplications; and ²they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and ³they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his first-born.

11 In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon.

pastor—visiting those that are cut off, caring for the young, healing the broken in heart, stimulating the sluggish, regardless of worldly interests, and wholly intent on seeking the interests of the fold. The "idol shepherd" means a worthless one—literally, "a shepherd of nothing"—since, according to Paul's address to the Corinthians, "An idol is nothing in the world."

Chap. XII. 1-8. It is difficult to speak with certainty as to the import of the expression, "A cup of trembling unto the people round about." It has been applied to various events, but, doubtless, the Spirit of the Lord directed it to something special, which, probably, yet remains to be fulfilled. There seems reason to believe that it refers to the restoration of the Jews, so frequently spoken of by the prophets, and to events therewith connected. It has been thought that the "burdensome stone for all people" signifies the descent of the bolt of the Divine vengeance upon the enemies of the Church, and that the metaphor may have been selected from the fact that a stone was hurled at the breast of a culprit adjudged to lose his life by stoning, which, when thrown by a strong hand, broke the breast bone to pieces, and so brought the machine of life to a stand-still. The governors of Judah being a "hearth of fire," refers to the effect which would attend the movements of the chosen people against their foes. A hearth of fire consumes whatever is laid upon it, and in particular straw and stubble, things light and combustible, which are here used as an emblem of the nations that shall oppose the people of God in that eventful day. The conversion of the Jews will commence with the humbler portion of the people, not among the chiefs of the nation. Conversion will be decided, and the Divine light they will enjoy exceedingly great, so that the feeblest will resemble David in faith and love, grace and power; while the house of David, or the more eminent men of the nation, will resemble the Angel of the Lord. Ver. 9-14. We have here one of the most precious portions of prophecy. When this promise shall have been fulfilled, it will be proof that the dispensation of the Spirit has reached something like meridian power. The people will be melted as wax before the sun. Convictions will be all-pervading, and utterly prostrating; the people will sink under a sense of their wickedness; at the same time, such views of the Divine mercy will be enjoyed as to mitigate their sorrow, and impart to it a thoroughly evangelical character. Conversion of such a BEHOLD, the day of the LORD cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee.

2 For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; ^aand the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city.

4 And ^chis feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east; and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley: and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south.

Chap. XIII. 1-6. The blood of Christ is here meetly represented as a "fountain" specially opened for sin and for uncleanness. When the Lord Jesus had risen from the dead, after finishing the work which the Father had given him to do, he commanded his servants to preach remission of sins to all mankind, beginning at Jerusalem; the effect was seen in the conversion of many, and the establishment of the New Testament Church. The idea of a fountain would commend itself strongly to the Jewish understanding. In the East, where water was scarce, cisterns abounded, and fountains were particularly precious, as being intimately connected with health and comfort. This fountain has, in effect, been available from the hour that sin entered into the world, and will be until the last child of man shall have been born. Ver. 7-9. This is one of those glorious passages clearly pointing to the Lord Jesus, and to the decree which he was to accomplish at Jerusalem. The sword of Divine justice had slept throughout the lengthened period of God's forbearance, but it could not do so for ever, and the time to awake would come at the appointed season. The Messiah, long predicted, would appear in human nature as the "fellow" of the Father—"the Word that was with God, and was God," who must be "smitten," that he might bear the griefs and carry the sorrows of his people, finishing transgression and making an end of sin, and bringing in an everlasting righteousness. There is some difficulty attending part of the last verse. The closing portion, setting forth the restoration of the people, and their re-admission to the Divine favour, and reception of the Spirit of adoption, in the following words, are so clear as to require no comment: "I will say, It is my people; and they shall say, The Lord is my God." It is not so with the bringing of "the third part" through the fire; there is some obscurity here. It seems probable, however, that what is meant, is the furnace of affliction by which they were to be purified and led to repent of their sins, and to receive the Saviour. This was the remnant of which Isaiah, and Paul, in Rom. ix. 27, spake. When the fire had done its work it would be extinguished, and a purified people return to the God of their fathers, to rejoice for ever in the privileges of the everlasting covenant.

Chap. XIV. 1-11. There is some obscurity on the subject referred to in ver. 7 and 8. There can be no doubt, however, that the language is figurative, and that it refers to the future glory of the Church, when Christianity shall have attained to universal prevalence, after a period of twilight, such as that in which we now live. It seems to denote the entire period of Messiah's reign, to which every part of it is applicable. The light has hitherto been always more or less obscured by error, delusion, and superstition. But the time will come when it will shine in its celestial purity, without any admixture of these base ingredients. The verses, therefore, may be viewed as containing a prophecy of the state of the Church from its establishment in the days of the Apostles, to that period when the whole earth shall be filled with the Saviour's glory. Ver. 12-21. It is hazardous, in a matter so awful, and on a subject still so much obscured, to affirm anything positive, but ver. 12-15 certainly indicate the infliction of judgments of the most tremendous character on the enemies of God and his people. The forces arrayed against the Church will be numerous beyond all precedent, and their discomfiture will amount to total annihilation. The period will be such that there will be nothing to be compared with it in the previous history of mankind, while the consummation will be fraught with the world's emancipation, and the complete establishment of the kingdom of heaven upon earth. The character of the ensuing state of things is most beautifully depicted by the wonderful declaration, "In that day there shall be upon the bells of the horses, Holiness unto the Lord; yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the Lord." Can language present a more vivid picture of entire and universal consecration of soul, body, spirit, and substance to the Lord?

MALACHI.

Malachi was the last of the prophets who flourished previous to the appearance of the Son of God in the flesh. He must have succeeded Haggai and Zechariah, since in his time the Temple was rebuilt, and the worship re-established; he was contemporary with Nehemiah, and a prime supporter of his government, and promoter of his enterprises. It had been part of the duty of Haggai and Zechariah to rebuke the people for postponing the erection of the Temple, while Malachi was sent to reprove them for their neglect of the Temple, and for their profanation of the Temple-service, which shews that the zeal which had impelled them to the work subsided when the effort had been completed. Malachi speaks more clearly of the Messiah as then approaching than any other of the prophets had done; concluding with an instruction to observe the law of Moses, and to wait for the coming of the Lord.

3 Behold, I will corrupt your seed, and spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your solemn feasts; and one shall take you away with it.

4 And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you, that my

Chap. I. 1-11. The language employed concerning Jacob and Esau has led to considerable disputation. An error has been made in this matter by not bringing New Testament fact and light to the interpretation of Old Testament figure and obscurity. It is matter of history that Jacob and his offspring enjoyed a measure of favour greater than that which fell to the lot of Esau and his seed; they had better land, and higher religious privileges. There was a special providence attending them in all their ways—raising them into a kingdom, dispersing them, restoring them, forming among them the school of the prophets, and honouring them as the prophets of the Lord Jesus Christ, establishing among them the New Testament Church, dispersing them again, still preserving them, with the promise of an ultimate restoration to forfeited favour, and their re-establishment in the land of their fathers. While especial favour was thus shewn to Jacob, no harm was done to Esau any more than to any other individual of the human race; Esau had no claim to such favour, even Jacob had done nothing to merit it; it was simply an act of sovereign mercy. Had it seemed good to the Lord, the position of the brothers might have been reversed. The principle here set forth is that of the election of grace generally. As had been usual, the priests were the primary offenders, perverting the people by their lessons, or leaving them in darkness by their neglect, or misleading them by their example. Selfishness appears to have been perfected. Such was the absence of generous zeal to promote the cause of God, that the prophet asks, "Who is there among you that will shut the door for nought? neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for nought." By a wonderful transition, the spirit of the prophet rises above the national prostration, darting into the future, when the name of the Lord, from the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered. Ver. 12-14. The light in which professors look on the table of the Lord may be taken as a sure index of their spiritual condition. At this time the Jews turned the altar of sacrifice with contempt. They turned away from it with scorn; and, instead of honouring the Lord with the best which the flock or the herd could supply, they endeavoured to compromise the matter, and to serve him on the cheapest terms—presenting the torn, the lame, and the sick! The spiritual analogies which the New Testament Church may supply to these things will at once occur; and they are deeply deserving the consideration of all who desire to walk in their integrity, and maintain a good conscience.

Chap. II. 1-10. The prophet never loses sight of the covenant might be with Levi, saith the LORD of hosts.

5 My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name.

6 The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips: he walked with me in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity.

7 For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the LORD of hosts.

8 But ye are departed out of the way; ye have caused many to stumble at the law; ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the LORD of hosts:

9 Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial in the law.

10 Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers?

11 ¶ Judah hath dealt treacherously, and an abomination is committed in Israel and in Jerusalem: for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the LORD which he loved, and hath married the daughter of a strange god.

12 The LORD will cut off the man that doeth this, the master and the scholar, out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and him that offereth an offering unto the LORD of hosts.

13 ¶ And this have ye done again, covering the altar of the LORD with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good-will at your hand.

14 Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the LORD hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously: yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant.

15 And did not he make one? Yet had he the residue of the Spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed. Therefore take heed to your spirit, and let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth.

16 For the LORD, the God of Israel, saith that he hateth putting away: for one covereth violence with his garment, saith the LORD of hosts; therefore take heed to your spirit, that ye deal not treacherously.

17 ¶ Ye have wearied the LORD with your words: yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied him? When ye say, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the LORD, and he delighteth in them; or, Where is the God of judgment?

CHAPTER III.

1 Of the messenger, majesty, and grace of Christ. 7 Of the rebellion, 8 sacrifice, 13 and infidelity of the people.

BEHOLD, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the LORD, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the LORD of hosts.

2 But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap:

3 And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the LORD an offering in righteousness.

4 Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the LORD, as in the days of old, and as in former years.

5 And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the LORD of hosts.

6 For I am the LORD, I change not; priests as prime promoters of the national transgression. Persuasion having failed, he now resorts to fearful measures. They had disgraced themselves and degraded their office, and without reformation, nothing remained for them but judgment; they had been pointed to the example of Levi, a pattern and an example of knowledge, piety, zeal, and every excellence. As a reward of his fidelity, God's covenant was with him of life and peace. A body of priests, of a kindred spirit with Levi, would probably have preserved the nation from its deep revolt, and, by consequence, have averted the judgments by which it was overtaken, and all but annihilated. Ver. 11-17. In the closing verses of the chapter, the prophet severely rebukes the priests for their petulance and perversity. They had the audacity to ask "wherein they had wearied" the Lord, although they had so far departed from the truth as to say, "Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the Lord, and he delighteth in them." Such language was blasphemous, and merited at the hands of the Lord the severest chastisement. There was no hope of any good from the labours of men who thus felt and thus spoke. An impious ministry is the greatest curse that can befall a nation. Such a body can neither teach nor exemplify the love and the grace of the Gospel, and the love of the Lord; they are a stumblingblock in the way of the people.

Chap. III. 1-12. Here again we have the Lord Jesus about to descend among his people. John the Baptist was the Messenger; he was to precede his Divine Master, and prepare the way before him. In the East, when the traveller is a royal person, the messenger goes further in advance than on ordinary occasions, to obtain time for the more extensive preparations which are then necessary. The person sent was the Messiah, whom they had been taught to expect from the predictions which had gone before, and more especially from the explicit prophecy of Daniel. We find, accordingly, that when the Saviour appeared, Simeon and Anna, and many others, were actually waiting for him, as "the consolation of Israel" and the joy of his people. He is the Messenger of the covenant, inasmuch as he comes to fulfil it, converting prophecy into history, and figures into facts, thus opening up a new and living way for therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.

7 ¶ Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them.^a Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the LORD of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return?

8 ¶ Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings.

9 Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

10 Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

11 And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the LORD of hosts.

12 And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the LORD of hosts.

13 ¶ Your words have been stout against me, saith the LORD: yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee?

14 Ye have said, It is vain to serve God; and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the LORD of hosts?

15 And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered.

16 ¶ Then they that feared the LORD spake often one to another: and the LORD hearkened, and heard it; and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the LORD, and that thought upon his name.

CHAPTER IV.

1 God's judgment on the wicked, 2 and his blessing on the good, 3 He telleth of Elijah's coming and office.

FOR, behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the LORD of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.

2 ¶ But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall.

3 And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet, in the day that I shall do this, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 ¶ Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments.

5 ¶ Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the LORD:

6 And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.

mankind, both Jew and Gentile, to return to God. Ver. 13-18. While the priests received marked rebuke, the people were not passed by. They also displayed a spirit and conduct which but too closely harmonised with that of their teachers. Impiety had attained to such a pitch, that their words had been "stout" against God. They went the length of declaring that it was vain to serve him, and that there was no profit in keeping his commandments. The spirit which prompted language so blasphemous, proved a people ripe for ruin. They who deem the proud happy, and "set up the wicked" as models for imitation, have attained to the last stage of apostasy; but even then, notwithstanding the wide-spread revolt, there were those who "feared the Lord, and spake often one to another." The Lord heard them, and kept a book of remembrance before him for all such, to whom he will shew especial favour, when he comes to make up his jewels, and separate the righteous from the wicked. A day of decision will arrive, when a better spirit will break out amongst them, and men will distinguish between him that served God, and him that served him not.

Chap. IV. 1-3. It is not easy to fix on any special period of the Jewish history that will more strikingly illustrate these words than the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and the slaughter and the exile of the people, which accompanied that dreadful event. Here again that night of tempest and horror is irradiated by the beautiful prediction of the rise of the Sun of righteousness with healing in his wings. The expression, which is remarkable, has illustrations in the East. It has been observed at Smyrna, that every morning, at sunrise, a gale of air blows from the sea over the land, clearing the infected atmosphere, and most materially contributing to the health of the people. David speaks of the "wings of the wind," and this salubrious breeze which attends the rising sun may be considered as his wings, which afford such salutary influence. Ver. 4-6. Elijah meant John the Baptist, who had much in common with that noblest of men, and most faithful of prophets. This is so distinctly set forth in the Gospels, as to require no confirmation. The predicted effect of John's administration, as a thing that would set all right in the individual and in the household, was strikingly verified on the banks of the Jordan. That multitudes were converted by his labours, notwithstanding the shaded and elementary character of his preaching, and so prepared for the advent of Christ and his apostles, is beyond doubt. An increased importance attaches to these words, as being the last uttered by inspired men until the advent of the Messiah. They are alike calculated to awaken fear and hope, while they impressively shew that domestic religion is an all-important element in the Church of God. While the hearts of the fathers are right towards the children, and the hearts of the children towards the fathers, everything will go well; but where the reverse is the rule, the fact will shew that nations are ready to be smitten with the curse of disorder, rebellion, convulsion, and desolation.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MATTHEW.

The Gospel according to Matthew was probably written about ten years after the death of Christ. It bears internal evidence of having been prepared, primarily, for the use of the Jews; for Matthew appeals more than any other of the Evangelists to the Prophets, shewing from them that Christ was descended from Abraham, and that the other great facts of his history were all foretold. This mode of argument was particularly suited to that people. This Gospel existed at an early period, both in Hebrew and in Greek; and, with a view to its more extensive usefulness amongst the Gentiles, the Greek version contains an explanation of the Hebrew words. The history of Matthew is incomparably the most wonderful known to the human family. The incarnation of the Son of God, his miracles, preaching, death, resurrection, and ascension, the descent of his Spirit, and the establishment of his Kingdom on earth, are all events new, extraordinary, joyful, and glorious.

17 So all the generations, from Abraham to David, are fourteen generations; and from David, until the carrying away into Babylon, are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ, are fourteen generations.

18 ¶ Now ^athe birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child ^bof the Holy Ghost.

19 Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a publick example, was minded to put her away privily.

20 But while he thought on these things, behold, ^cthe angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, ^dJoseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for ^ethat which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.

21 And she shall bring forth a son, and ^fthou shalt call his name JESUS; ^gfor he shall save his people from their sins.

22 (Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying,

23 Behold, ^ha virgin shall be with child,

Chap. I. 1-17. Abraham received a promise, that through him all the families of the earth should be blessed. That promise pointed to the Lord Jesus Christ, of whom Isaac was a type, as its ultimate object. The promise was renewed to David in a form still more fully developed in the type of Solomon his son. He foretold that all men should be blessed in him, and that all nations should call him blessed; and prayed that the whole earth might be filled with his glory. This promise was gospel, or good news, to both Abraham and David; the day of his appearance on earth, however, was far off, especially to Abraham, yet, by faith he saw it, and was glad. Ver. 18-25. The condition of Mary was the cause of surprise and distress to Joseph, whose excellent spirit led him to compassionate her, notwithstanding the extent to which, according to appearances, she had wronged him. When the matter had reached a crisis, the Lord put an end to his perplexity by revealing to him the true state of the case, and attesting Mary's innocence. Joseph at once received the angelic testimony, and acted accordingly. True faith yields prompt obedience. The angel not only gave the name of the unborn Child, but explained its import. The single word "Jesus" comprises the germ of the plan of salvation. A people were given him, chosen from all eternity, stricken with the leprosy, and burdened with the guilt of sin, whom he would cleanse from the one, and free from the other, and thus change both their state and their character, giving them at once a title and a meanness for heaven. His name is thus set forth at the very and shall bring forth a son, and ¹they shall ²call his name Emmanuel, which, being interpreted, is, ³God with us.)

24 Then Joseph, being raised from sleep, did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife;

25 And knew her not till ¹she had brought forth her first-born son: ²and he called his name JESUS.

CHAPTER II.

¹ The wise men, coming to Christ, worship him.
¹³ Joseph fleeth into Egypt.

NOW when Jesus was born in ¹Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem,

2 Saying, Where is he that is ¹born King of the Jews? for we have seen ²his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

3 When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

4 And when he had gathered all ¹the chief priests and ²scribes of the people together, ³he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

5 And they said unto him, ¹In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet,

6 And thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come ¹a Governor, that shall ²rule my people Israel.

7 Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, enquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

8 And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, ¹Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

9 ¶ When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

10 When they saw the star, ¹they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

13 ¶ And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, ¹Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there ²until I bring thee word: ³for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him.

14 When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt;

15 And was there ¹until the death of Herod: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son.

16 ¶ Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, ¹and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently enquired of the wise men.

outset of the history, indicating both his offices and his nature. Jesus is a Prophet, to teach the knowledge of the Father; a Priest, to offer himself a sacrifice for sin; and a King, to rule and to defend his people. To these offices he was specially anointed—a fact which is implied by his name Christ, in Greek, and Messiah, in Hebrew. Emmanuel, distinctly proclaims him God over all blessed for ever, the only potentate, King of kings, and Lord of lords.

Chap. II. 1-23. Herod was not a son of Abraham, but a native of Idumea, and a very monster of cruelty and wickedness. These wise men were clearly under Divine guidance, and sent to Judea to awaken public attention to a great event which was about to take place. The intelligence that One was born who was to be King of the Jews, naturally agitated Herod, and produced great excitement among the people, since it bespoke a revolution, and great changes. The appeal to the Scriptures confirmed the report of the wise men, and increased the terror of Herod, who combined craft with falsehood, that he might accomplish his wicked design. His worship would have been murder! But his words were heard on high; he deceived the strangers, but not the Lord, who searched his heart, and knew his thoughts, and warned them not to return to him. By following the Star of Inspiration, we shall not fail to find the Lord; we have but to search the Scriptures which testify of him, in order to obtain eternal life. It is affecting to behold these Heaven-taught men worshipping the Infant as divine, and offering him presents of the precious things of the earth. This was the first-fruits of the coming harvest, when to him shall be offered the thanks, praise, service, substance, and adoration of a world. The angel was too far-seeing for the king; while he sent the wise men home another way, he immediately ordered the parents of the child to another country. The king, baffled in his attempts to find the Infant Saviour, as the only means left him slew all the children from two years old and under, in the hope that Jesus was among them: No sooner had Herod finished his barbarous career, than the angel appeared again to Joseph, apprising him of the fact. It deserves notice, that in these wonderful transactions, the position of Joseph as the head of his own household was respected; the three dreams in which the angelic communications were made, were those, not

22 But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, ^ahe was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee:

23 And he came and dwelt in a city called ^aNazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, ^aHe shall be called a Nazarene.

CHAPTER III.

selves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

10 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit ^bis hewn down, and cast into the fire.

13 ¶ Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.

14 But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

15 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

16 And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, ⁱand he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him:

17 And lo a voice from heaven, saying, ^jThis is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Christ fasteth, is tempted, and overcometh. 17 He beginneth to preach, and calleth some to be his disciples.

THEN ^awas Jesus led up of the Spirit ^binto the wilderness, ^cto be tempted of the devil.

of Mary, but of Joseph. By the foregoing events, two Scriptures were fulfilled: Mary and Joseph had dwelt at Nazareth before they went to Bethlehem to be taxed, and in the course of Providence they were permitted to return to the circle of their friends. The inhabitants of Nazareth were viewed with general contempt, for what reason it does not appear. Thus every step of the Holy Child's progress was under the Divine guidance. Such is the privilege of the humblest of the family of God; they have only to commit to him their way, and he will direct their steps.

Chap. III. 1-12. "Those days" signify a period about twenty-eight years after the events already recorded. The opening chapter testifies both to the Divinity and the Atonement of Christ, and is, therefore, very offensive to the Socinians, who, as a method of escaping the difficulty, reject the foregoing chapters, and here commence the history of Matthew. But it is to no purpose: all the ancient manuscripts, as well as all translations, contain these chapters. The attempt, therefore, to reject them, has no foundation whatever in truth or fact. The importance of what is here said about John's preaching is very great, as describing the first step in the sinner's return to God. In this the guilt of sin is felt and confessed; the sinner ceases to do evil, and learns to do well; the wicked man forsakes his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and turns to the Lord in search of mercy. "The kingdom of heaven," signifies the Messiah's reign, which was to introduce a new state of things. That wonderful economy of types and sacrifices, which had obtained through the long period of 1500 years, and which, in its blessings, had been limited to the seed of Abraham, was now drawing to a close, and a kingdom about to be established which should comprise all nations, kindreds, peoples, and tongues. The dispensation of John was essentially appropriate to the appearance of Jesus, and to this new order of things. The preaching of John was the best method conceivable for awakening the attention of the nation to the mighty Personage who was about to appear. Every word seemed to resound throughout the land, and all classes hastened to hear his warning voice. John, so far as repentance is concerned, is a model to preachers in all succeeding ages. Abjuring all philosophical refinements, he walks in the path of common sense, and treats his hearers as rational and responsible beings. While the process of thrashing goes on, the wheat and the chaff are blended together in the floor, but the application of the fan effects a separation, when the wheat is stored up for use, and the chaff consumed. Chaff is a light, empty, useless thing, carried about by every breeze that blows. Wheat is substantial and valuable—a meet emblem of true piety, producing works of faith and labours of love. Ver. 13-17. The fulfilment of all righteousness is a point which must overrule every consideration of delicacy. Here we behold baptism, both in the sign and in the thing signified. The baptism with water was immediately followed by baptism with the Holy Spirit.

Chap. IV. 1-16. Seasons of triumph often prepare the way for temptation. The enemy of souls adapts himself to the circumstances of those he assails. His skill is such as to bend everything to his purpose; no man on this side heaven is beyond the reach of danger, while the tempter walks abroad as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour. He perverts providences, misrepresents Scripture, and violates truth, that he may

2 And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred.

3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, ^aIf thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.

4 But he answered and said, It is written, ^cMan shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

5 Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,

6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, ^dHe shall give his angels charge concerning thee; and in their hands they shall bear thee up, ^elest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, ^fThou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;

9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, ^gSatan: for it is written, ^hThou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

11 Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.

12 ¶ Now, when Jesus had heard that John was ⁱcast into prison, he departed into Galilee;

13 And ^jleaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in ^kCapernaum, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of ^lZabulon and ^mNephthalim:

14 That ⁿit might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying,

15 The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, ^oGalilee of the Gentiles;

16 The people ^pwhich sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region ^qand shadow of death light is sprung up.

17 ¶ From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the ^rkingdom of heaven is at hand.

18 ¶ And Jesus, walking by the ^ssea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

compass his ends of destruction. The tribes of Zabulon and Nephthalim dwelt on the western shore of the sea of Galilee, which was the chief scene of the labours and miracles of Jesus. The spiritual condition of the country was very dark, but the Sun of Righteousness at length appeared as a great light, illumining the region of the shadow of death. Ver. 17-25. Jesus here ratifies the course and the preaching of John, by taking up his very words, and urging them on the consciences of his hearers. Repentance is the first lesson and the first duty of a fallen world. In dealing with the wicked, there need be no mistake. Men must turn, or perish! The 3 Who are blessed. 14 The apostles are a light to the world. The law expounded.

AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain; and when he was set, his disciples came unto him:

preacher has to do with them simply as sinners, and as such it is his duty to press on them repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Having done this, he must leave the results to the Lord of the harvest. The call of the Lord was with power. In no case did any of the Apostles refuse to follow him, or make any stipulation for attendance. When he speaks, the soul is at once obedient.

Chap. V. 1-12. These wonderful discourses of the Lord Jesus everywhere assume the conversion and the restoration of the audience to Divine favour, and delipersecuted they the prophets which were before you.

13 ¶ Ye are ¹the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men.

14 Ye are ¹the light of the world. ^mA city that is set on an hill cannot be hid.

15 Neither do men light a candle, and put it under ²a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

16 Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, ²and glorify your Father which is heaven.

17 ¶ Think not that I am come ^oto destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, ^pbut to fulfil.

18 For verily I say unto you, ^qTill heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled.

19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of ^rthese least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach ^rthem, the same shall be called ^rgreat in the kingdom of heaven.

20 For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall ^rexceed ^rthe righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ^rye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

21 ¶ Ye have heard that it was said ^sby them of old time, ^sThou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment:

22 But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment; and ^rwhosoever shall say to his brother, ^rRaca, shall be in danger of the council; but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell-fire.

23 Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there ^rrememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee;

24 Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, ^rand then come and offer thy gift.

25 Agree with thine adversary quickly, ^rwhiles thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison.

create the character which the children of God should cultivate. While it guided the truly devout, it served to correct the self-righteous, by shewing them that religion was essentially a thing of the heart, and not of external formality. Although many qualities are here described, they are all to be understood as comprised in one character; each of the Divine family is to exhibit the several attributes with which the several blessings are here connected. The principle whence they flow is found in "every one that is born of the Spirit." When reviled and persecuted, we are to remember that we are holding fellowship with the prophets and apostles, and even with our Divine Lord himself. Ver. 13-26. Salt that has lost its savour, is a most expressive emblem of men who have left their first-love; it is still the same to outward appearance, but the power, the pungency is gone: it is thenceforth good for nothing. The Divine commands are not to be trifled with. To do and to teach is the highest service; but to transgress, and to lead others to follow the example, is heinous rebellion! The righteousness of the Pharisees was a thing of works, not of faith. It was, therefore, essentially defective in 1 Of alms, 5 prayer, 14 forgiveness, 16 fasting, 19 our treasure, 24 and against worldly care.

TAKE heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them; otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven.

2 Therefore, when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues, and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

3 But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth;

4 that thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly.

5 And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

6 But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet; and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

7 But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

11 Give us this day our daily bread.

12 And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

13 And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

14 For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you:

15 But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

16 Moreover, when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

17 But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face;

18 That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

19 Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

20 But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

21 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

22 The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

23 But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

24 No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

quality, and such as it was, it was also wanting in measure; it was a thing of mere public display for the sake of human praise. The true principle of all obedience is love, which is the fulfilling of the law.

Chap. VI. 1-18. They who seek only the praise of men, need not be disappointed if they obtain not the praise of God. Motive, which determines the character of action, may escape the notice of our fellow-creatures, but all things are naked and open to the Searcher of hearts. Praying at the corners of the streets was an act, not of devotion, but of ostentation: it was done to be seen of men, and of them to obtain approbation. The practice still prevails in many parts of the East, where, at certain hours, the people recite their prayers as a meritorious act, regardless of the character, will, and glory of the Most High. The kingdom referred to in the form set forth, is clearly that of the Messiah, which is destined to comprehend the whole earth. When the Divine will shall come to be the rule of life, earth will bear a close resemblance to heaven. "Debt" signifies sins in thought, word, or deed. Pardon is connected with repentance, and that repentance which needeth not to be repented of comprises an element of tenderness to our fellow-creatures. Implacability is incompatible with evangelical penitence. If men forgive not, they cannot be forgiven, for forgiveness softens the heart, leading it to imitate the Father of mercies in the pardon of offences which have been confessed. Ver. 19-31. The "single" eye is opposed to dark rather than to double vision. It signifies simplicity of aim, and, therefore, is opposed to carnality, cunning, and selfishness. An "evil eye" means an eye diseased, from which it does not take the true impression of objects, and clearly report their character to the mind. Mammon was a term which signified riches, or the world, and it was 25 Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. ^aIs not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

26 Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?

27 Which of you ^aby taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?

28 And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider ^athe lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:

29 And yet I say unto you, That ^aeven Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these.

30 Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, ^ashall he not much more clothe you, ^aO ye of little faith?

31 Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed?

32 (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek;) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things.

33 But ^aseek ye first ^athe kingdom of God, and his righteousness; ^aand all these things shall be added unto you.

34 Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. ^aSufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Christ reproves rash judgment, 6 forbiddeth to cast holy things to dogs, 7 exhorteth to prayer, 13 to enter in at the strait gate, 15 to beware of false prophets, 21 and not to be hearers, but doers of the word.

JUDGE not, that ye be not judged.

2 For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

3 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, ^abut considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

4 Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye?

5 Thou hypocrite, ^afirst cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

6 ^aGive not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

7 ^aAsk, ^aand it shall be given you; ^aseek, and ye shall find; ^aknock, and it shall be opened unto you:

8 For ^aevery one that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened.

9 ^aOr what man is there of you, whom, if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?

10 Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?

11 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

12 Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: ^afor this is the law and the prophets.

13 ^aEnter ye in ^aat the strait gate: ^afor wide is the gate, and broad is the way, ^athat leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat:

14 ^aBecause strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

15 ^aBeware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they ^aare ravening wolves.

16 Ye shall know them by their fruits. ^aDo men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

17 Even so every good tree bringeth impossible to combine with it the love and the service of the Lord. It is not meant in ver. 25 that the affairs of life should be neglected, and that means should be separated from ends. What is forbidden is an anxious, distrustful, self-consuming care, excluding the power and providence of God. The term "Gentiles" signifies nations, and it meant all other people not Jews. The spirit and conduct of the disciples of the Saviour must not descend to the low level of these idolaters. Where much is given, much will be required. "The kingdom of God" is in the heart of every believer, consisting of righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. The "righteousness" which is to be sought is the righteousness of God by faith, as opposed to the righteousness of works. This was the error of the Jews, who went about to establish their own righteousness, to the rejection of the righteousness of God which is by faith in the Lord Jesus, unto all and upon all them that believe. It is needless to bring trouble from to-morrow, seeing that each successive day will yield a full supply. It is, moreover, for the day, not for the morrow, that strength is promised. They, therefore, who will pass into the future to take up forbidden burdens, must bear them as they best can.

Chap. VII. 1-14. Few cautions are more necessary than not to "judge" our fellow-creatures. The human heart is naturally prone to it; it gratifies both vanity and malice, while it supplies an exercise to a false zeal. The fact, that according as men judge they will themselves be judged, is greatly calculated to awaken consideration, as well as to teach modesty and mercy. "Mote" and "beam" were doubtless proverbial expressions in Judea, intended to indicate less and greater, and to shew the inconsistency of men who diminish their own shortcomings to the smallest point, and exaggerate those of their neighbours to the utmost. "Pearls" signify the doctrines of the Gospel, and the experience of their power on the soul, which are things neither respected nor understood by the wicked. The most precious jewels have no value amongst swine; and so it is with the things of the Spirit amongst ungodly men. That we may receive, we must ask in faith, and with due regard to the Divine wisdom and glory. The answer of many a prayer on which the heart is set would be the heaviest calamity; but we are protected against this by the mercy and goodness of our heavenly Father. The finest point in morals is set forth in ver. 12, which is so clear and simple that the youngest and the weakest may forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit; neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19 Every tree that ^abringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

20 Wherefore ^rby their fruits ye shall know them.

21 ¶ Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22 Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, ^ahave we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

24 ¶ Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto ^aa wise man, ^awhich built his house upon a rock;

25 And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: ^afor it was founded upon a rock.

26 And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, ^aand doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand;

27 And ^athe rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

28 ¶ And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine:

CHAPTER VIII.

^a Christ cleanseth the leper, ^bhealeth many diseased, ^c19 sheweth how he is to be followed, ^d24 stilleth the tempest on the sea, ^e28 driveth devils out of two men possessed, ^f31 and suffereth them to go into the swine.

WHEN he was ^acome down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.

2 And, ^bbehold, there came ^aa leper, and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

3 And Jesus ^aput forth his hand, and touched him, saying, ^aI will; be thou clean. And ^aimmediately his leprosy was cleansed.

4 And Jesus saith unto him, See thou tell no man; but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

5 ¶ And when Jesus was ^aentered into Capernaum, there came unto him ^aa centurion, beseeching him,

6 And saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.

7 And Jesus saith unto him, ^aI will come and heal him.

8 The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof; ^abut speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.

9 For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, ^aGo, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, ^aDo this, and he doeth it.

10 When Jesus heard it, ^ahe marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I comprehend it. We shall never greatly err in doing that which, on a change of circumstances, we should wish to have done to ourselves. The teaching of the Law, the Prophets, and the Apostles is all summed up in these precious words. Nothing is wanted to put a new face on human society through all the earth but the universal prevalence and predominance of this law. "The strait gate" indicates the difficulties connected with repentance, faith, and holiness, which require a man to go counter to a wicked world, which will generally bring upon him contempt, if not persecution. Ver. 15-29. False profession has always, to some extent, been mingled with the true. There were false prophets and also false apostles, and among those chosen by the eye of the Omniscient Master himself, one was a "devil." No two creatures can less resemble each other than the sheep and the wolf; and yet the wool of the one may clothe the ferocity of the other. Such a character is peculiarly injurious to the cause of Christ, and, as involving heinous iniquity, it will be visited with the most fearful chastisement. It is proper to profess our allegiance to the Saviour, and to call him Lord; but the profession must be connected with loving obedience. He will resent words, mere words, while the heart goeth after its covetousness, as an indignity. It requires less of the human heart to contend for doctrine than to strain after practice, and hence the danger of praising the precept while neglecting it. The simile of the falling house presents a terrible warning. No faith justifies that does not work by love; where works are, therefore, they will be taken as proof both of the love and the faith which produced it.

Chap. VIII. 1-17. In former times, leprosy was a malady which largely prevailed in Judea and in the East. It was peculiarly loathsome as well as incurable, and justly considered the heaviest visitation that could fall on a man. The leper was forbidden by the law of Moses even to touch his fellow-creature. He was, therefore, compelled to live apart, which greatly added to his affliction. He was not permitted to enter the temple, and to share in the services of the nation; he was further obliged to cry "Unclean, unclean!" when any one approached him. This disease presents the most striking emblem of sin that the history of human malady can supply. It separates from God and from his holy creatures, and until it be removed it shuts out its subject from the Divine sanctuary. The blood of Christ alone can cleanse it; and when that is done, the sufferer is restored to health, happiness, and the society of the just. The power of our Lord is gloriously manifested in the words, "I will; be thou clean." He has but to speak, and it is done! It is his glorious prerogative to give eternal life to all who come to him. The centurion, as the name implies, was the commander of a hundred soldiers. The strongest faith was not to be looked for in such a man, and yet it was greater far than that of multitudes who had vastly superior advantages. In this case, faith and humility are remarkably blended; meekness and lowliness are among the principal elements of piety. No grace is of such difficult cultivation to the human heart, which is essentially proud and self-sufficient. Ver. 12 ought to strike into the hearts of all those who have been born of Christian parents, and have enjoyed religious privileges from their youth up. The guilt of such is peculiarly awful, and their punishment will be corresponding. Ver. 18-34. The request made by a son to bury his father is very affecting; it say unto you, °I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

11 And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and °shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, °in the kingdom of heaven:

12 But °the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

13 And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the self-same hour.

14 ¶ And when Jesus was come °into Peter's house, he saw his °wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever.

15 And he °touched her hand, and the fever left her: and she arose, °and ministered unto them.

16 ¶ When the even was come, °they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils; °and he cast out the spirits with his word, °and healed all that were sick:

17 That °it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, °Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.

18 ¶ Now, when Jesus °saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side.

19 And a certain scribe came, and said unto him, Master, °I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

20 And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but °the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

21 And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

22 But Jesus said unto him, °Follow me; °and let the dead bury their dead.

23 ¶ And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him.

24 And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, inasmuch that the ship was covered with the waves: but he was asleep.

25 And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, °save us: we perish.

27 But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

34 And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus; and when they saw him, they besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

2 Christ cureth the palsy, 9 calleth Matthew, 10 saith with publicans and sinners.

AND °he entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into °his own city.

2 And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: and Jesus, seeing their faith, said unto the sick of the palsy, °Son, °be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

3 And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, °This man blasphemeth.

4 And Jesus, °knowing their thoughts, said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?

5 For whether is easier to say, Thy sins seems not only natural but praiseworthy. The peremptory injunction, therefore, shews the danger that may arise from the discharge even of the most binding duties. Earthly concerns, however, must not be suffered to prevent the immediate surrender of the soul to Christ. Whether amidst the mirth of marriage, or the sorrows of sepulture, it behoves the sinner, on hearing the Gospel, to exercise repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The tendency of man is to postpone the concerns of the soul. When we shall have accomplished this, and that, and something else, then we will decide; but no sooner are the points on which the decision was made to turn realised, than something fresh arises; and thus the affairs of the soul are postponed from day to day, until disease approach, and death ensue, putting an end to the procrastination.

Chap. IX. 1-17. The faith of these people was displayed by their earnestness to break through all obstacles to get at the object of their veneration. It was a new and an extraordinary thing to hear one who seemed only a man professing to forgive sins, and therefore not unnatural that the bystanders should accuse him of blasphemy. That high prerogative belonged to God only; and any attempt to exercise it by a mere man, unless acting in the name of the Most High, was culpable in the extreme. Nothing but the Godhead of the Saviour could authorise such conduct. Power in one direction may be illustrated by power in another. He who could impart health, might, by possibility, cancel guilt. Jesus rested his mission on his miracles. Among the Jews it was not uncommon to have two names, and therefore we find Matthew likewise called Levi. The publican of ancient times did not belong to the vocation which is known by that name amongst ourselves. He was a collector of taxes; which explains the character of the assembly he invited to dine with the Saviour. The publicans were a low class in society. The term is used as synonymous be forgiven thee; or to say, ^aArise, and walk?

6 But that ye may know ^bthat the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) ¹Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house.

7 And he arose, and departed to his house.

8 But when the multitudes saw ^cit, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

9 ¶ And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, ²named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, ¹Follow me. And he arose, and followed him.

10 ¶ And it came to pass, ^mas Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, ⁿmany publicans and sinners came and sat down with him and his disciples.

11 And when the Pharisees saw ^cit, ^othey said unto his disciples, ^pWhy eateth your Master with publicans and sinners?

12 But when Jesus heard ^qthat, he said unto them, ^qThey that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

13 But go ye and learn what ^rthat meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come ^rto call the righteous, ^rbut sinners to repentance.

14 ¶ Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not?

15 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bride-chamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, ^swhen the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they fast.

16 No man putteth a piece of ^tnew cloth unto an old garment; for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse.

17 Neither do men put new wine into old bottles; else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.

18 ¶ While he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler, and ^uworshipped him, saying, ^uMy daughter is even now dead: but ^vcome and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live.

with sinners; and the Pharisees were therefore shocked to find the Son of God mingling with them at the same table. Mankind have reason to rejoice that he came to call, not the righteous, but sinners to repentance. Sacrifice, in its own place, is important; but it must not stand in the way, or offer itself as a substitute for mercy. The Son of God was never more in character than when in the company of such people as he met in the house of Matthew; and if we will walk in his steps, we will not shun the wicked, but seek their society with a view to their salvation. This is to have fellowship with our glorious Lord in the performance of the great work his Father gave him to do. By "children," we are to understand the disciples and attendants of the Lord Jesus, who were identified with him both in his sorrow and in his joy. The cloth and the bottles are 20 ¶ (And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with ^{an}issue of blood twelve years, came behind ^{him}, and ²touched the hem of his garment:

21 For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

22 But Jesus turned him about; and when he saw her, he said, ³Daughter, be of good comfort; ⁴thy faith hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour.)

23 ¶ And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise, 24 He said unto them, ⁵Give place; for the maid is ⁶not dead, but sleepeth. ⁷And they laughed him to scorn.

25 But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.

26 And ⁸the fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

27 ¶ And when Jesus departed thence, ⁹two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, ¹⁰Thou son of David, ¹¹have mercy on us.

28 And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, ¹²Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord.

29 Then ¹³he touched their eyes, saying, ¹⁴According to your faith be it unto you.

30 And ¹⁵their eyes were opened; and Jesus straitly charged them, saying, See ¹⁶that no man know ¹⁷it.

31 But they, when they were departed, ¹⁸spread abroad his fame in all that country.

32 ¶ As they went out, behold, they brought to him ¹⁹a dumb man possessed with a devil.

33 And when the devil was cast out, ²⁰the dumb spake: and the multitudes marvelled, saying, It was never so seen in Israel.

34 But the Pharisees said, He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils.

35 And ²¹Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness, and every disease, among the people.

36 ¶ But when he saw the multitudes, striking illustrations. The new cloth was stiff and strong, the old tender and weak; and hence the difficulty of joining them together. The bottles of the ancients were made of skins, as is the case at present in Africa; and hence old bottles were unable to resist the force of fermentation, and apt to burst. The exalted views of the Saviour were not easily harmonised with the ritual of the Jews. Having so much to do with the flesh, they were apt to stumble at the spirit. Ver. 18-33. Miracle was largely intermingled with the Saviour's ministrations, and it was generally of a character to illustrate the mercy of the Gospel. Faith is the hand by which the power of the Lord Jesus was seized, and rendered available for the necessities of the creature. Nothing else availed for purposes of salvation. The Son of David was the well-known title of Emmanuel;

he was moved with compassion on them, because they ³fainted, and were scattered abroad, ⁴as sheep having no shepherd.

37 Then saith he unto his disciples, ¹The harvest truly is plenteous, ²but the labourers are few:

38 Pray ye therefore ¹the Lord of the harvest, ²that he will send forth labourers into his harvest.

CHAPTER X.

The apostles are sent to do miracles, and to preach.

AND when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power ¹against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease.

2 Now the names of the twelve apostles are these: The first, ¹Simon, who is called Peter, and ²Andrew his brother; ³James the son of Zebedee, and ⁴John his brother; ⁵Philip, and Bartholomew; ⁶Thomas, and ⁷Matthew the publican; ⁸James the son of Alphaeus, and ⁹Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus;

4 ¹Simon the Canaanite, ¹and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him.

5 These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, ¹Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not:

6 But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

8 ¹Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: ²freely ye have received, freely give.

9 ¹Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses;

10 Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet ¹staves: ²for the workman is worthy of his meat.

11 And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, enquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence.

12 And when ye come into an house, ¹salute it.

13 And if the house be ¹worthy, let your peace come upon it; but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you.

nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, ¹shake off the dust of your feet.

25 It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. ¹If they have called the Master of the house ²Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?

26 Fear them not therefore: for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known.

and these poor blind men, by the use of the expression, shewed that they were not wholly untaught in the things of the kingdom. They displayed implicit faith in his power, and only implored the extension of his clemency. Their faith was honoured by an immediate exercise of healing virtue. They saw, they rejoiced, and filled the country with the praises of their Benefactor.

Chap. X. 1-23. The opening verse is every way wonderful. Who but a Divine person could give such a commission? Who but the Ruler of Spirits and the Creator of the human frame could speak after this fashion? The calmness with which the Evangelist narrates it, is also very remarkable. He displays no wonder himself, nor does he lay his account with it in others. His sole concern is to bear witness, leaving it to the world to treat his testimony as they choose. The whole Jewish nation were to be considered as lost sheep, for whom salvation was now to be provided. Salutation is still common in the East, and the import of the term is a desire of peace for those addressed. There is something of difficulty attending the expression, "The coming of the Son of man." Christ speaks, in several places, of two comings—first, in the way of judgment, to destroy Jerusalem and scatter the Jews; and, secondly, to raise the dead, and to judge the world. The direction here given clearly provides for the use of all means for the preservation of life. If the faithful must needs resist unto blood, they will receive the necessary strength, and their great work will be duly rewarded; but they are not unnecessarily to place themselves in jeopardy, and to invite destruction. The doctrine of Scripture on this subject is uniformly exemplified by the conduct of Paul, who, while prepared to suffer all things for the elect's sake, resorted to proper means to preserve life. Ver. 24-42. Beelzebub was the idol god of Ekron, and hence fitly employed to designate the Wicked One. In the East, the tops of the houses were generally flat, where parties could stand with comfort and speak to those below. The Saviour, although the Prince of Peace, publishing the Gospel of Peace, and intent on filling the world with peace, yet foretold that one of the results of the publication of the message of mercy would be to create strife amongst men. They who are after the flesh, will perse-

28 And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell.

29 Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father.

30 But the very hairs of your head are all numbered.

31 Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows.

32 Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, I will confess also before my Father which is in heaven.

33 But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

34 Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

35 For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.

36 And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.

37 He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me.

38 And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.

39 He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.

40 He that receiveth you, receiveth me; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

41 He that receiveth a prophet, in the name of a prophet, shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man, in the name of a righteous man, shall receive a righteous man's reward.

42 And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

CHAPTER XI.

2 John sendeth his disciples to Christ. 20 Christ upbraids the unthankfulness and impenitence of Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum: 25 and praiseth his Father's wisdom in revealing the gospel to the simple.

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence, to teach and to preach in their cities.

2 ¶ Now, when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples,

3 And said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?

4 Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see:

5 The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk; the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear; the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them.

6 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

7 ¶ And as they departed, Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

8 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.

9 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet.

10 For this is he of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

11 Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.

12 And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

13 For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John.

14 And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come.

cute those who are after the spirit. The Saviour is therefore clearly speaking, not of the object of his appearance, but the tendency of it. Thus individual hate and domestic discord more or less distinguished the first introduction of the Gospel into every country. All history confirms the fact; and even in countries where the gospel has long been known, and where the form has prevailed without the power, when the Spirit of the Lord descends, examples are abundantly furnished of this moral conflict. The taking up of the cross implied a readiness to suffer; and seeing that in our Lord's own day persecution was the consequence of profession, it was needful that every man, before making it, should count the cost.

Chap. XI. 1-19. Both the Old and New Testaments uniformly breathe compassion towards the poor and the afflicted. One of the most distinguishing features of the new dispensation was the kindness which was manifested towards them. This constitutes the climax of the wonderful things which John's disciples were to report. The wise men of the heathen world, even the scribes and elders among the people, despised the poor. To be "offended," signifies to stumble at the meanness of the Saviour's appearance, so as to reject his claims to Messiahship. The caprice of the people is sharply rebuked. John presented an aspect of austerity, and on that ground they turned away from him as possessed of the devil. Jesus appeared in an opposite character, the friend of all, associating with all, rich and poor, good and bad, without distinction, and they impeached his morality. People who dislike the truth, will seldom be at a loss to fasten a quarrel upon its promulgators. The violence referred to in ver. 12, indicates the earnestness with which men came from all parts, first to hear John, and then Jesus. In particular, they burst every barrier, that they might listen to the gracious words and witness the wondrous works of God manifest in the flesh. The prophets, the law, all announced the appearance of Emmanuel; but it was the privilege of John to proclaim his actual advent. The children by whom Wisdom is justified, signifies those taught of God to distinguish between things that differ. They were stumbled neither at John's seeming barbarity, nor at the condescension of the Lord 15 He ¹that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

16 ¶ But whereunto shall I liken ¹this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows, 17 And saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented.

18 For ^mJohn came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, ⁿHe hath a devil.

19 The Son of man ^ocame eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a wine-bibber, ^pa friend of publicans and sinners: ^qbut Wisdom is justified of her children.

20 ¶ Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not.

21 Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, ^rBethsaida! ^rfor if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have ^rrepented long ago in sackcloth and ashes.

22 But I say unto you, ^sIt shall be more tolerable for ^sTyre and Sidon at ^sthe day of judgment than for you.

23 And thou, ^tCapernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24 But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment than for thee.

25 ¶ At that time Jesus answered and said, ^uI thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

26 Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight.

27 All things ^vare delivered unto me of my Father: and ^vno man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and ^vhe to whomsoever the Son will reveal ^vhim.

28 ¶ Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

29 Take ^wmy yoke upon you, and learn of me; ^wfor I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The disciples pluck the ears of corn on the Sabbath.
31 Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven.

AT that time Jesus ^awent on the sabbath-day through the corn; and his disciples were an hungred, and began ^bto pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.

2 But when the Pharisees saw ^cit, they said unto him, ^cBehold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the sabbath-day.

3 But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungred, and they that were with him;

4 How he entered into the house of God, and did eat ^dthe shew-bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the priests?

5 Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath-days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless?

6 But I say unto you, ^eThat in this place is ^eone greater than the temple.

7 But if ye had known what ^fthis meaneth, ^fI will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

8 For ^gthe Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath-day.

9 ¶ And when he was departed thence, ^hhe went into their synagogue:

10 And, behold, there was a man which had ⁱhis hand withered. And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-days? that they might accuse him.

11 And he said unto them, ^jWhat man shall there be among you that shall have one sheep, ^jand if it fall into a pit on the sabbath-day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift ^jit out?

12 How much then ^kis a man better than a sheep? Wherefore ^kit is lawful to do well on the sabbath-days.

13 Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched ^lit forth; ^land it was restored whole, like as the other.

14 ¶ Then the Pharisees went out, and ^mheld a council against him, how they might destroy him.

Jesus. In the one they saw the morning star, and in the other the rising Sun. Ver. 20-30. The bulk of mankind have no idea of the guilt of impenitence. They understand crimes against the moral law, and generally allow that such ought to be visited with some species of penalty; but they are not easily persuaded that impenitence towards God, and unbelief towards Jesus Christ, are the greatest crimes of which men can be guilty, and the sins for which they are now condemned. The address of our Lord to the cities in which he had done his chief works, settled the question of culpability. In point of privilege, they had been lifted up to heaven, and, for the abuse of that privilege, they would be cast down to hell. Even Sodom itself, had it seen such works, would have repented and been preserved. The sovereignty of grace is particularly indicated in ver.

25, 26, the wise and prudent signifying the scribes and the Pharisees, and others who had a lofty conception of their own attainments; and the babes, those who become as little children, meekly and implicitly receiving the Divine testimony concerning the Lord Jesus. Pride and piety are incompatible. Only the humble soul will submit to be indebted through eternity to the free grace of God for pardon, righteousness, acceptance, adoption, and glory.

Chap. XII. 1-21. The shew-bread was composed of cakes placed, on the morning of the Sabbath-day, on a golden table in the tabernacle, or the temple. As a rule, it was not lawful for others than the priests to eat this bread; but there is a higher law than the merely ceremonial: where life is concerned, everything of a merely 15 But when Jesus knew ^{it}, he withdrew himself from thence: and great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all;

16 And charged them that they should not make him known:

17 That ^{it} might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, ^{saying},

18 Behold ^{my} servant, whom I have chosen; ^{my} beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased: ^I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall shew judgment to the Gentiles.

19 He shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets.

20 A ^{bruised} reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, ^{till} he send forth judgment unto victory.

21 And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

22 ¶ Then ^{was} brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind and dumb: ^{and} he healed him, inasmuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw.

23 And all ^{the} people were amazed, and said, ^{Is} not this the son of David?

24 But ^{when} the Pharisees heard ^{it}, they said, This ^{fellow} doth not cast out devils, but by ^{Beelzebub}, the prince of the devils.

25 And ^{Jesus} knew their thoughts, and said unto them, ^{Every} kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand:

26 And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?

27 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, ^{by} whom do your children cast ^{them} out? therefore they shall be your judges.

28 But if ^I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.

29 Or else, how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house.

30 He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.

31 Wherefore I say unto you, ^{All} manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: ^{but} the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

32 And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, ^{it} shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

33 Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by ^{his} fruit.

34 O ^{generation} of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? ^{for} out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

35 A ^{good} man, out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things: ^{and} an evil man, out of the evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things.

36 But I say unto you, That ^{every} idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

37 For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

38 ¶ Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, ^{Master}, we would see a sign from thee.

39 But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas:

40 For ^{as} Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, ^{so} shall the Son of man be three days and three nights ⁱⁿ the heart of the earth.

41 The ^{men} of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: ^{because} they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, ^{behold}, a greater than Jonas is here.

42 The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, ^{behold}, a greater than Solomon is here.

43 When ^{the} unclean spirit is gone out of a man, ^{he} walketh through ^{dry} places, ^{seeking} rest, and findeth none.

44 Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when ritual character must give way. Again, the temple service required the performance on the Sabbath of various kinds of work not permitted to the nation at large. The priests, for example, had to slay the sacrifices, and to offer them, and to perform all the duties connected with that serious operation. But if these things might be done in the temple, how much more anything that was permitted by Emmanuel himself, who was greater than the temple, and greater than the universe, which he created and upheld! He was Lord of the Sabbath; having appointed it, he possessed the power to abrogate or to change it at pleasure. He thus enlarged the minds and elevated the views of the people; for if such things were proper and necessary in regard to the mere brute creation, how much more in the case of creatures bearing the image of God! The Pharisees soon began to display their true character in conspiring to destroy him, because of the mercy he had shewn in the works he performed. Ver. 22-50. The miracle before us was one of a very extraordinary character, at once testifying to his power and pity; but, instead of rejoicing and glorifying God on behalf of the poor sufferer, it is turned into an occasion of blasphemy against the Holy Ghost—the most horrible and hopeless of crimes! The import of the language, notwithstanding the controversy to which it has given rise, is by no means difficult of comprehension. It consists in ascribing the miracles of the Saviour to the Wicked One! That the work was done, was not questioned; that it was above the power of mere man, was not denied; it was allowed that it could only be performed by supernatural agency. Granting this, they ascribe it, not to God, but to Beelhe is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished.

45 Then goeth he, and taketh with himself ^aseven other spirits ^bmore wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

46 ¶ While he yet talked to the people, behold, ^chis mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him.

47 Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee.

48 But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren?

49 And he stretched forth his hand toward ^dhis disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren!

50 For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, ^ethe same is my brother, ^fand sister, ^gand mother.

2 And ^bgreat multitudes were gathered together unto him, ^cso that he went into a ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.

3 And he spake many things unto them ^din parables, saying, Behold, ^ea sower went forth to sow:

4 And when he sowed, some ^fseeds fell ^gby the way-side, and the fowls came and devoured them up:

5 Some fell upon ^hstony places, where they had not much earth; and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth:

6 And when the sun was up, they were scorched; and, because they had no root, they withered away:

7 And some fell ⁱamong thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them:

8 But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundred-fold, some sixty-fold, some thirty-fold.

10 ¶ And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables?

11 He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.

12 For ^awhosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, ^bfrom him shall be taken away even that he hath.

13 Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing, see not; and hearing, they hear not; neither do they understand.

14 And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive:

15 For this people's ^cheart is waxed gross, and ^dtheir ears are dull of hearing, and ^etheir eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with ^ftheir eyes, and hear with ^gtheir ears, and should understand with ^htheir heart, and should be converted, ⁱand I should heal them.

16 But ^jblessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear.

17 For verily I say unto you, ^kThat many prophets and righteous men have desired to see ^lthose things which ye see, and have not seen ^mthem; and to hear ⁿthose things which ye hear, and have not heard ^othem.

18 ¶ Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower.

19 When any one heareth ^athe word of the kingdom, ^band understandeth it not, then cometh ^cthe wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. ^dThis is he which received seed by the way-side.

20 But he that ^ereceived the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and ^fanon with joy receiveth it:

21 Yet hath he not ^groot in himself, but ^h endureth for a while; ⁱfor when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is ^joffended.

22 He also that received ^kseed among the thorns is he that heareth the word; and ^lthe care of this world, and ^mthe seebub the prince of the devils! Nothing could exceed the wickedness of such a course, and hence the peculiar peril which attended it. These perverse and obstinate men, turning aside from the glorious manifestations of Divine power which had been given, sought for a sign, which brought forth an important declaration touching the resurrection of the dead. An impressive example is here presented concerning the duty we owe to parents, brothers and sisters, and other relatives. While bound to love them because of the ties of nature that unites us, provided they be the subjects of regeneration, temples of the Spirit, and consecrated to the Lord Jesus, we are instinctively led to love them with a different and a higher love; the natural then becomes mingled in the spiritual affection, and we love Christ who is formed within them the hope of glory.

Chap. XIII. 1-30. Among the wonderful things comprised in the Gospels, a chief place belongs to the parables of our Lord, which are alike full of beauty, wisdom, and instruction; but clear as they now seem to us, with the additional lights which we enjoy, they were not so to the multitude, nor even to the disciples themselves. In explaining the parables, the scope is to be attended to rather than the drapery. Imagination must be curbed, and judgment must walk by the analogy of faith. The tendency of prosperity is to perpetuate itself; and such, too, is that of adversity. The light is thrown away on men who deliberately shut their eyes. The Saviour's labours were lost on a people who closed their ears, and determined to reject him. Truth and miracle were alike overlooked or perverted by them. Men who ascribed Divine miracles to the devil, were not in a condition to profit by the word preached; and an increase of miracles only served further to blind the mind and harden the heart. The parable of the sower has a very impressive bearing on the Gospel ministry, and on the work of the Sabbath-school teacher. Both in deceitfulness of riches, ^b choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.

23 But he ¹ that received seed into the ¹ good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also ¹ beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, ^m some an hundred-fold, some sixty, some thirty.

24 ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed ^a good seed in his field;

25 But while men slept, his ^o enemy came and sowed ^p tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26 But ^q when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27 So ^r the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from ^s whence then hath it tares?

28 He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29 But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

30 Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say ^t to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, ^u and bind them in bundles to burn them: ^v but gather the wheat into my barn.

31 ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took and sowed in his field:

32 Which indeed is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof.

33 ¶ Another parable spake he unto them; The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three ¹ measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

34 All ^w these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them:

35 That ^x it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, ^y I will open my mouth in parables; ^z I will utter things which have been kept secret ¹ from the foundation of the world.

36 ¶ Then ¹ Jesus sent the multitude away, ² and went into the house; and his disciples came unto him, saying, ³ Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

37 He answered and said unto them, ¹ He that soweth the good seed ² is the Son of man;

38 The ¹ field is the world; ² the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are ¹ the children of the wicked one;

39 The ² enemy that sowed them is the devil; ³ the harvest is the end of the world; ⁴ and the reapers are the angels.

40 As therefore ⁵ the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

41 The Son of man shall send forth his angels, ⁶ and they shall gather out of his kingdom all ⁷ things that offend, ⁸ and them which do iniquity, 42 And shall ⁹ cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be ¹⁰ wailing and gnashing of teeth.

43 Then ¹¹ shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. ¹² Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

44 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

45 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant-man seeking goodly pearls;

46 Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

47 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind:

48 Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away.

49 So shall it be at the end of the world: ¹³ the angels shall come forth, ¹⁴ and sever the wicked from among the just,

50 And shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

51 Jesus saith unto them, Have ye understood all these things? They say unto him, Yea, Lord.

52 Then said he unto them, Therefore every scribe, ¹⁵ which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven, is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure ¹⁶ things new and old.

the school and in the house of God, illustrations are being continually supplied in multitudes. When men first enter the narrow way that leads to life, they have much to contend with. The cares of the world among the many, and the deceitfulness of riches among the few, form serious barriers to progress. The "good ground," means a heart prepared by the Spirit of the Lord. The Gospel in such hearts will bring forth fruit in various measures, and all of proper quality. The same soil, however, which produces corn, also produces tares; and so believers and unbelievers are never found far apart. It is, moreover, difficult to distinguish between them. The human eye cannot discover the line which separates between the highest point of worldly virtue, and the lowest point of true religion. All that can be reasonably demanded, therefore, is a credible profession. Ver. 31-58. The mustard-seed is, perhaps, the most beautiful emblem that creation can supply of the rise, progress, and complete establishment of the kingdom of Christ. Leaven also strikingly exemplifies the assimilating process of the Church in the world, by the means of truth and grace. It quickens, renovates, and attracts to itself the mystical body of Christ. Worth and rank have been too frequently identified; and wisdom too often 53 ¶ And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, ^ahe departed thence.

54 And ^bwhen he was come into his own country, ^che taught them in their synagogue, inasmuch that ^dthey were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?

55 Is not this ^ethe carpenter's son? ^f'is not his mother called Mary? ^gand his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas?

56 And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things?

57 And they were offended in him. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house.

58 And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.

¹ Herod's opinion of Christ. ⁸ Why John Baptist was beheaded. ¹⁶ The miracle of the five loaves; ²² and of walking on the sea.

AT that time ^aHerod the ^btetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus, ² And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist: he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works ¹do shew forth themselves in him.

³ ¶ For ^aHerod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias' sake, ^dhis brother Philip's wife.

⁴ For John said unto him, ^e'It is not lawful for thee to have her.

⁵ And ^fwhen he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, ^g'because they counted him as a prophet.

⁶ But when Herod's birth-day was kept, ^hthe daughter of Herodias ⁱdanced ^jbefore them, and pleased Herod.

⁷ Whereupon ^khe promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask.

⁸ And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, ^l'Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.

⁹ And ^mthe king was sorry: nevertheless for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her.

¹⁰ And he sent, ⁿand beheaded John in the prison.

¹¹ And his head was brought in a charger, ^oand given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.

¹² And his disciples came and ^ptook up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus.

¹³ ¶ When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities.

¹⁴ And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, ^qand was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

¹⁵ And when it was evening, his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; ^r'send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals.

¹⁶ But Jesus said unto them, ^s'They need not depart; give ye them to eat.

¹⁷ And they say unto him, ^t'We have here but five loaves, and two fishes.

¹⁸ He said, Bring them hither to me.

¹⁹ And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass, and took the five loaves, and the two fishes, and, ^u'looking up to heaven, ^v'he blessed, and brake, and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

²⁰ And they did all eat, and were filled: ^w'and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full.

²¹ And they that had eaten were ^x'about five thousand men, besides women and children.

²² ¶ And straightway ^y'Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship, and to go before him unto the other side, ^zwhile he sent the multitudes away.

²³ And when he had sent the multitudes away, ^a'he went up into a mountain apart to pray: and when the evening was come, ^b'he was there alone.

²⁴ But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, ^c'tossed with waves: for the wind was contrary.

²⁵ And in ^d'the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, ^e'walking on the sea.

²⁶ And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, ^f'It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear.

²⁷ But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, ^g'Be of good cheer: ^h'it is I; be not afraid.

²⁸ And Peter answered him and said, assigned to a stranger, which, even in a superior degree, has been denied to friends and relations. The power of the Lord was not limited; but its exercise was obstructed by the unbelief prevailing among the people. They had so badly requited the good done, that it was meet, for the present, to withhold the farther exercise of his power.

Chap. XIV. 1-22. The Tetrarch was a ruler over the fourth part of a country. High position is unfavourable to popular knowledge. Herod was the last to hear of the miracles of Jesus; but at length the report reached even him, and excited his curiosity. The dance of Salome was a preconcerted thing; it was sure she would please, and that a present would be offered her; and hence her wicked mother taught her by anticipation what to ask. Her age is uncertain, but she was capable of performing the horrid part assigned to her, which she did without any manifestation of female tenderness. The sorrow of Herod would indicate his indisposition at that time to proceed to extremities; it was, moreover, an ill omen to stain a birth-day with the blood of innocence. It was a frequent custom to produce the head of the slain as a proof of death. It was the fear of the multitude that had preserved the life of John up to that period; now, however, through the cruel artifices of a wicked woman he was destroyed. The Saviour here

Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water.

29 And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, ²he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

30 But when he saw the wind ³boisterous, he was afraid; and, beginning to sink, he cried, saying, 'Lord, save me.

31 And immediately Jesus ⁴stretched forth his hand, ⁵and caught him, and said unto him, 'O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?

32 And when they were ⁶come into the ship, the wind ceased.

33 Then they that were in the ship came and ⁷worshipped him, saying, 'Of a truth thou art the Son of God.

34 ¶ And when they were gone over, they came into the land of ⁸Gennesaret.

35 And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they sent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased;

36 And besought him that they might ⁹only touch the hem of his garment: and as many as touched were made ¹⁰perfectly whole.

CHAPTER XV.

3 God's commandments, and men's traditions. 11 What defileth a man.

THEN came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying,

2 Why do thy disciples ¹transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread.

3 But he answered and said unto them, ²Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?

4 For God commanded, saying, 'Honour thy father and mother: and, ³He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death.

5 But ye say, Whosoever shall say to his father or his mother, ⁴'It is a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me,

6 And 'honour not his father or his mother, he shall be free. Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.

7 Ye hypocrites, ⁵'well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying,

8 This people ⁶draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; ⁷but their heart is far from me.

sets an example of thanksgiving for food, which was his uniform custom, both in public and in private. This matter is oft-times improperly gone about; a few words of prayer are uttered without the slightest reference to the bounties placed on the table. A custom largely prevails of first asking a blessing, as it is termed, and at the close of the repast giving thanks. From the New Testament, it is clear that this was not the practice of the Saviour and his Apostles. Blessing and giving thanks were identical expressions, and acts which always took place previous to the reception of food. Ver. 23-36. The concern of the disciples on seeing the Lord, plainly shews the prevalence, at that time, of the belief in the existence of men after death. Nothing can be more satisfactorily demonstrative of the popular faith on this

10 ¶ And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand:

11 Not ¹that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; ²but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man.

12 Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended, after they heard this saying?

13 But he answered and said, ³'Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.

14 ⁴'Let them alone: ⁵'they be blind leaders of the blind. ⁶'And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.

15 Then answered Peter, and said unto him, ⁷'Declare unto us this parable.

16 And Jesus said, Are ye also yet without understanding?

17 Do not ye yet understand, ⁸'that whatsoever entereth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, ⁹'and is cast out into the draught?

18 But ¹⁰'those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man.

19 For ¹¹'out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies:

20 These are the things ¹²'which defile a man: ¹³'but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

21 ¶ Then Jesus went thence, ¹⁴'and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon.

22 And, behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, saying, ¹⁵'Have mercy on me, O Lord, ¹⁶*thou* ¹⁷'son of David; ¹⁸'my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil.

23 But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, ¹⁹'Send her away; for she crieth after us.

subject. The confession of the Divine Sonship of the Saviour, which occurred after he entered the vessel, was natural. His march over the waves was a striking proof of supernatural power.

Chap. XV. 1-20. Tradition still continues to rule the Jewish mind. It is generally placed on an equality with Inspiration, if not higher. Our Lord here pronounces decisively upon its worthlessness, and remonstrates with his hearers for transgressing the commandments of God by a resolute adherence to it. The matter of ver. 5, 6 is particularly noticeable, as shewing the extent to which tradition had subverted the most important principles of religion. "To honour" is a term which always signifies respect; but in the case of parents, should it be 27 And she said, 'Truth, Lord: ^ayet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table.

28 Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, ^agreat is thy faith: ^mbe it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

29 ¶ And Jesus departed from thence, ^aand came nigh unto the sea of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there.

30 And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet, and he healed them;

31 Inasmuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw ^athe dumb to speak, ^bthe maimed to be whole, ^cthe lame to walk, and the blind to see: ^aand they glorified the God of Israel.

32 ¶ Then ^aJesus called his disciples unto him, and said, ^aI have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now ^athree days, ^aand have nothing to eat: and I will not send them away fasting, ^alest they faint in the way.

33 And his disciples say unto him, ^aWhence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as ^ato fill so great a multitude?

34 And Jesus saith unto them, ^bHow many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven, and a ^afew little fishes.

35 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the ground.

36 And he took the seven loaves and the fishes, ^aand gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

CHAPTER XVI.

4 The sign of Jonas. 5 The leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. 21 Christ foresheweth his death.

THE Pharisees also, with the Sadducees, came, and tempting, desired him that he would shew them ^aa sign from heaven.

2 He answered and said unto them, ^bWhen it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather; for the sky is red:

3 And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day; for the sky is red and lowering. ^cO ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern ^dthe signs of the times?

4 A ^awicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, ^abut the sign of the prophet Jonas. ^aAnd he left them, and departed.

5 ¶ And when his disciples ^bwere come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, ^aTake heed, and beware of ^bthe leaven of ^cthe Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

7 And ^mthey reasoned among themselves, saying, ^aIt is because we have taken no bread.

8 Which ^awhen Jesus perceived, he said unto them, ^bO ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread?

9 Do ^aye not yet understand, neither remember ^athe five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

10 Neither ^athe seven loaves of the four thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

11 How ^ais it that ye do not understand that I spake ^ait not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees?

necessary, it implies succour as well as reverence. Tradition, however, devised a method of setting it aside. If parents sought relief of their children, it was only for them to say, "It is Corban," and they were at once freed from all further obligation. By that single word they set aside the Fifth Commandment. It has been thought that by "Corban" the sum required was to be given to the temple, which would have been the introduction of a Popish principle, which, doing violence to the Scriptures, places the Church before the parent. Ver. 21-39. This woman of Canaan was, of course, not a descendant of Abraham, which explains the Saviour's language to her. She was not one of the lost sheep of the house of Israel, to whom, for the present, he had come. She, however, wisely thought, not of her lineage but her misery, and continued to pour out her fervent prayer. She displayed a remarkable firmness of purpose, as well as strong faith in his goodness, and her perseverance was honoured with complete success. The example is fraught with much encouragement to all parents under analogous circumstances, and to all Christians. There is no other limit set to the bestowment of blessings than that which arises from the faith and the desire of the suppliant.

Chap. XVI. 1-19. Ver. 18, 19 have been the subject of much discussion between Papists and Protestants. Few passages have more remarkably exemplified the imperfection of the human understanding, and the difficulty of obtaining unanimity on moral questions. There have been no fewer than six views held on the subject of the foundation of the Church. It has been contended that by the "rock" is meant Peter's confession; Peter himself, as the instrument of founding the Church; Christ the Lord, in his person, offices, and work; both Peter's confession and his apostolic labours; the Lord Jesus himself; Peter and the rest of the Apostles. Were a proposition to be formed substantially inclusive of all these points, it would be near the truth. The foundation, doubtless, generalised, means this:—that Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, is the basis of human hope, as his death has been the ransom of the race, and that there is salvation in none other. A like diversity of judgment has prevailed touching the "keys" of the kingdom. The key, in ancient cities, was a badge of office, and the Jews were accustomed to accompany the promotion to the seat of authority by the presentation of a key. The expression, therefore, is significant of distinction founded in high trust. The language of the 13 ¶ When Jesus came into the coasts of ^cCesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, ^dWhom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?

14 And they said, Some say that thou art ^eJohn the Baptist; some, ^eElias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15 He saith unto them, ^bBut whom say ye that I am?

16 And Simon Peter answered and said, ^cThou art the Christ, the Son of ^dthe living God.

17 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, ^cSimon Bar-jona: ^dfor flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, ^ebut my Father which is in heaven.

18 And I say also unto thee, That ^bthou art Peter, and ^cupon this rock ^dI will build ^emy church; ^fand the gates of hell ^gshall not prevail against it.

19 And I will ^cgive unto thee ^dthe keys of the kingdom of heaven: ^eand whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

20 Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.

21 ¶ From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, ^dand be raised again the third day.

22 Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, ^bBe it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, ^cGet thee behind me, Satan; thou art an offence unto me: for ^dthou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

24 ¶ Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any ^cman will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The transfiguration of Christ. 14 He healeth a leuitick: 22 foretelleth his own passion. 24 He payeth tribute.

AND after six days Jesus taketh ^cPeter, ^cA James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart,

2 And was ^btransfigured before them: and ^chis face did shine as the sun, and his ^draiment was white as the light.

3 And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him.

4 Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

5 While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, ^cThis is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.

6 And when the disciples heard it, ^cthey fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

7 And Jesus came and ^ctoucheth them, and said, ^bArise, and be not afraid.

8 And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead.

10 ¶ And his disciples asked him, say-text implies an authority given to abolish the old dispensation, and to establish the new, with everything which these operations implied. We therefore find the Apostles forbidding circumcision, putting an end to sacrifice, practising baptism, teaching the churches to observe the Lord's Supper, and all things appertaining to the government of the churches. Ver. 21-23. The great idea which filled the minds of the Apostles from the outset was the kingly character and glory of their Master, and the advantages they expected to reap from his enthronement. Nothing, therefore, could more seriously clash with their prejudice than the communication made, that he was to suffer many things, and then to be slain. Their minds were too dark to understand the import, or even to receive the fact of his resurrection. The awful statement gave a shock to the company, calling forth Peter, as usual, to give expression to the common feeling. Peter's views, however, were treated as the dictate of the Wicked One, who was addressed accordingly. Peter savoured only of notions of temporal grandeur, and recoiled from the intimation of death. Our Lord embraced the opportunity of clearing away the mists which had gathered upon the minds of the disciples, by telling them that they must severally take up their own cross and follow him. The prospect he opened up was anything but encouraging as to this present world. To preserve life here, might be to lose it eternally—to lose it here, to find it there. These words, in due season, produced their effect upon the minds of the Apostles, teaching them that they were here to have tribulation, to be followed by glory in the world of spirits. The coming of the Lord referred to in ver. 23 must necessarily have pointed to the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jewish economy, which took place some fifty-three years afterwards.

Chap. XVII. 1-21. Three witnesses were chosen only six days after the confession of Peter, to testify to the transfiguration and dignity of our Lord. The former of these events occurred in Upper Galilee. On this sublime occasion the Saviour laid aside his veil, and appeared in the glory of his Godhead, giving his disciples, at least, a glimpse of that which enlightens, adorns, and rejoices the heavenly world. The night was too dazzling for the witnesses long to sustain; they, nevertheless, were enabled to discover the presence of Moses and Elias, as also to listen to the subject of their converse, while they heard a voice from heaven which testified to the Sonship of the Saviour, and the future approbation of his work. The importance of this vision ing, ¹Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?

11 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, ²and restore all things.

12 But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed: likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

13 Then ¹the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

14 ¶ And ^mwhen they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, ⁿkneeling down to him, and saying,

15 Lord, ^ohave mercy on my son; ^pfor he is lunatick, and sore vexed: for oft-times he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

16 And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

17 Then Jesus answered and said, ^qO faithless and perverse generation, ^rhow long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? Bring him hither to me.

18 And Jesus rebuked the devil; and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

19 Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out?

20 And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, ^sIf ye have faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

21 Howbeit ^tthis kind goeth not out ^ubut by prayer and fasting.

22 ¶ And, while they abode in Galilee, Jesus said unto them, The Son of man shall be ^vbetrayed into the hands of men;

23 And ^wthey shall kill him, and ^xthe third day he shall be raised again. And they were exceeding sorry.

24 ¶ And when they were come to Capernaum, they that received ^ytribute-money came to Peter, and said, Doth not your Master pay tribute?

25 He saith, Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon?

of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers?

26 Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free.

27 Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find ^aa piece of money: that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Christ teacheth to be humble. 7 Touching offences, 21 and forgiving one another.

AT the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest ^ain the kingdom of heaven?

2 And Jesus called ^ba little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them,

3 And said, ^cVerily I say unto you, ^dExcept ye be converted, ^eand become as little children, ye shall not ^fenter into the kingdom of heaven.

4 Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

5 And whoso shall ^greceive one such little child in my name ^hreceiveth me.

6 But whoso shall ⁱoffend one of these ^jlittle ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

7 ¶ Woe unto the world because of offences! ^kfor it must needs be that offences come; ^lbut woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!

8 Wherefore, ^mif thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands, or two feet, to be cast into ⁿeverlasting fire.

9 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell-fire.

10 ¶ Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones: for I say unto you, That in heaven thy angels do always was not fully understood and felt till afterwards, when the Saviour had departed to the heavenly world, and hence the injunction not to make it known till that time. Few events in their lives contributed more to support these three Apostles amidst labours, suffering, and death, for Christ's sake, than this vision with which they were honoured. Jesus had no sooner returned to society than he began again to manifest his power and compassion in the relief of suffering. The defective faith of the disciples limited their power of working miracles, which drew from their Master an expression of displeasure. Having heard and seen so much, their faith by that time ought to have been thoroughly confirmed; but, without the exercise of an inward power acting on the soul, nothing external can either introduce or invigorate the principle. Ver. 22-27. The Saviour now appears to have been daily meditating his approaching death; and again he communicates to his disciples the secrets of his soul. On this occasion, neither Peter nor the rest ventured to deprecate or contradict; but the intimation sank deep into their hearts, filling them with great sorrow. They fully believed that it would be as he had told them. The notion of death they comprehended, but they do not appear to have realised any comfort from that of the resurrection, nor even to have understood it. The miracle here performed, touching the tribute-money, was greatly calculated to fortify the faith of Peter and the rest in their belief of the Saviour's power and knowledge.

Chap. XVIII. 1-14. The inspired penmen are at no pains to draw a veil over their own infirmities, or those of their brethren in the apostleaship. Subjects of discussion frequently indicate the feelings of those who discuss them. Among the disciples there were those who aspired to pre-eminence in the coming kingdom, little knowing that this would consist in contempt, labours, sufferings, and death! At that time, nothing could be more inconbehold the face of my Father which is in heaven.

11 For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

12 How think ye? ¹If a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth ²into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

13 And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, ³he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

14 Even so ⁴it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that ⁵one of these little ones should perish.

15 ¶ Moreover, ⁶if thy brother shall trespass against thee, ⁷go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother.

16 But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, ⁸that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.

17 And if he shall neglect to hear them, ⁹tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican.

18 Verily I say unto you, ¹⁰Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

19 Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, ¹¹it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

20 For where ¹²two or three are gathered together in my name, ¹³there am I in the midst of them.

21 ¶ Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?

22 Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but, Until seventy times seven.

heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants.

24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him which owed him ten thousand ¹talents:

25 But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord ²commanded him to be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

26 The servant therefore fell down, and ³worshipped him, saying, Lord, ⁴have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

27 Then the lord of that servant was ⁵moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

28 But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants, which owed him an hundred ⁶pence; and he laid hands on him, and took ⁷him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

30 And he would not; ⁹but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

31 So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

32 Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me:

33 Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, ¹⁰even as I had pity on thee?

CHAPTER XIX.

2 Christ healeth the sick; 3 answereth the Pharisees touching divorcement; 16 and sheweth how to attain everlasting life.

AND it came to pass, ¹that, when Jesus had finished these sayings, he degruous with the true spirit of Christ than their carnal controversies and ambitious views. This matter of drowning with the millstone about the neck was well understood by the ancients. It seems to have grown into a proverb, as expressing fearful and certain destruction. There was no escape for the hapless mortal who was thus precipitated into the ocean. Ver. 10 presents a point of some difficulty. The language must not be explained as figurative; it can signify nothing less than that the angels who rejoice in the Divine favour are ministering spirits to children. It is clear that the heirs of the kingdom enjoy angelic attendance, service, and protection. It has been contended that the angels here mentioned mean, not angels proper, but the spirits of the just made perfect, who are employed in missions of benevolence on the earth. For this, however, there is no authority, and the safe course is strictly to adhere to the written word. Ver. 15-22. A most important duty is here enjoined, on the proper discharge of which, the peace and prosperity of the churches, as well as the happiness of individuals, very mainly depend. Few Gospel duties, however, are more frequently neglected, and the results are almost always disastrous. The party injured will speak to any and everybody, rather than to the wrong-doer, which can neither correct the erring brother, nor bring redress and comfort to his own mind. Nothing is more simple than the Saviour's rule. The weakest may understand it and obey it. The term "Church," signifies the society or body of Christian brethren meeting in any one place for the exercise of worship and the observance of Divine ordinances. The duty of the Church in the case of an evil-doer is most explicit. No consideration of rank, wealth, or station must interfere with obedience to the Divine law. Where exclusion is founded in truth, it is the most terrible event that can befall an immortal being. What is done on earth will be ratified in heaven. Nothing can open the celestial gate for him but that which opens the doors of the Church—repentance, confession, and a fresh appeal to the mercy of God through the blood of Christ. Ver. 23-35. It is surely to be expected that they who have received mercy should shew mercy. Implacability, which is a revolting sight even in a heathen, becomes inexpressibly more so in a professed child of God.

Chap. XIX. 1-15. Our Lord has pronounced with decision on the matter of divorce. It would seem that Moses, in permitting divorces for other than the one parted from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judea beyond Jordan;

2 And ^bgreat multitudes followed him; and he healed them there.

3 ¶ The Pharisees also came unto him, ^ctempting him, and saying unto him, ^dIs it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?

4 And he answered and said unto them, ^eHave ye not read, ^fthat he which made ^gthem at the beginning, made them male and female;

5 And ^hsaid, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall ⁱcleave to his wife: ^jand they twain shall be one flesh?

6 Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore ^kGod hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

7 They say unto him, ^lWhy did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, ^mand to put her away?

8 He saith unto them, Moses, ⁿbecause of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so.

9 And I say unto you, ^oWhosoever shall put away his wife, ^pexcept ^qit be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery.

10 His disciples say unto him, ^rIf the case of the man be so with ^shis wife, it is not good to marry.

11 But he said unto them, ^tAll men cannot receive this saying, save ^uthey to whom it is given.

12 For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from ^vtheir mother's womb; and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men; and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive ^wit, let him receive ^xit.

13 ¶ Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put ^yhis hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them.

14 But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

15 And he laid ^zhis hands on them, and departed thence.

16 ¶ And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have ^{aa}eternal life?

17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? ^{ab}there is none good but one, ^{ac}that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

18 He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, ^{ad}Thou shalt do no murder, ^{ae}Thou shalt not commit adultery, ^{af}Thou shalt not steal, ^{ag}Thou shalt not bear false witness, 19 ^{ah}Honour thy father and ^{ai}thy mother: and, ^{aj}Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

20 The young man saith unto him, ^{ak}All these things have I kept from my youth up: ^{al}what lack I yet?

21 Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go ^{am}and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and ^{an}come ^{ao}and follow me.

22 But when the young man heard that saying, ^{ap}he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

23 ¶ Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

24 And again I say unto you, ^{aq}It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

25 When his disciples heard ^{ar}it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, ^{as}Who then can be saved?

26 But Jesus beheld ^{at}them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; ^{au}but with God all things are possible.

27 ¶ Then answered Peter, and said unto him, Behold, ^{av}we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?

28 And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me ^{aw}in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ^{ax}ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging ^{ay}the twelve tribes of Israel.

29 And ^{az}every one that hath forsaken great cause, acted on the principle of expediency. He permitted this as the less of two or more evils; but the Lord Jesus, the Head of the Church, speaks authoritatively, telling them that the case of Moses was exceptional, and that from the beginning of the world it was not so. It is noticeable that our Lord, throughout the whole of his course, manifested peculiar condescension to little children. Among the Jews it was common for the prophets, in their prayers for others, to place their hands on the object of their supplication. Ver. 16-30. The party putting the question does not ask how he may be saved, but what he shall do in order to it, so that our Lord, in replying, takes him on his own ground, preaching to him not the Gospel but the Law. This was the short and sure way to work conviction, and thus to prepare for the display of sovereign mercy. The young man laid claim to a measure of obedience which shewed how imperfectly he was acquainted with his own heart. To mention nothing else, he had not loved his neighbours as himself, and much less the Lord his God, with all his soul and heart, and strength and mind. The Searcher of hearts perceived that, notwithstanding his sobriety, purity, and general morality, he was a lover of the world, and applied the test which would bring home to him the charge. He would have done or suffered anything compatible with the retention of his great possessions, but he could not part with these even for "eternal life." The fact gives fearful emphasis to the Scripture, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world; if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." He was here told distinctly by what means he might obtain eternal happiness, but the price was too high, and he declined to pay. He chose the world, and in all probability lost his soul. The circumstance deeply impressed the minds of the Apostles; and it is still much calculated to reconcile the poor to their poverty, which is not without important advantages touching personal godliness. The dangers houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred-fold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

30 But many that are first shall be last, and the last shall be first.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Of the labourers in the vineyard. 20 Christ teacheth his disciples to be lowly.

FOR the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire labourers into his vineyard.

2 And when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

3 And he went out about the third hour, and saw others standing idle in the market-place,

4 And said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way.

5 Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise.

6 And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7 They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8 So when even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

9 And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

10 But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a penny.

11 And when they had received it, they murmured against the goodman of the house, of wealth are very great, but the grace of God can enable the wealthy to surmount every obstacle. Peter, ever foremost, took credit to himself and his brethren, as having forsaken all and followed Christ. Their "all," to be sure, amounted to very little—nets, boats, and other articles connected with their humble profession; but even these sufficed to test the character of the men. The same Power which enabled them promptly and cheerfully to sacrifice these, would have enabled them to resign great possessions.

Chap. XX. 1-16. The market anciently was a place of resort for business, the settlement of disputes, the delivery of popular orations, and the transaction of public affairs. The sixth, ninth, and eleventh hours, were 12, 3, and 5 in the afternoon, so that the party hired last had to work only an hour, when the day closed. The Jewish day commenced about six in the morning, and was reckoned at twelve hours. A celebrated traveller states, that entering one of these market-places, before sunrise, he beheld a numerous body of peasants assembled, with spades in their hands, wait-

14 Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this last even as unto thee.

15 Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil, because I am good?

16 So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.

17 ¶ And Jesus, going up to Jerusalem, took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them,

18 Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, 19 And shall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

20 ¶ Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.

21 And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left in thy kingdom.

22 But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able.

23 And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

24 And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

25 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the ing to be hired for the day to work in the surrounding fields, which struck him as a happy illustration of the words of this parable. The object of the parable is to correct the Jews, who were envious of the Gentiles. They desired to have a lasting monopoly of Divine favour and Gospel blessings; and nothing gave them more offence in the apostolic proceedings of Paul, than his claims on behalf of the Heathen world. Ver. 17-23. The case of Salome, and her sons James and John, strikingly exemplifies the working of human nature. The brothers must have been privy to their mother's proceeding, as we are told, in ver. 24, that when the ten heard of her suit to the Saviour, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren. Had she, carried away by her maternal feelings, fired by an unseemly and selfish ambition, acted independently of them, they would have been blameless. Her spirit was anything but creditable to her, and was imminently calculated to mar the harmony of the company. Her demand was enormous. Nothing less would serve her than that the two first places in the temporal kingdom for which she vainly looked, should be awarded to her sons. The occasion Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them.

26 But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister;

27 And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant:

28 Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, ^aand to give his life a ransom ^bfor many.

29 ¶ And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him.

30 And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way-side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

31 And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

32 And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, ^aWhat will ye that I shall do unto you?

33 They say unto him, ^dLord, that our eyes may be opened.

34 So ^eJesus had compassion on them, and ^ftoucheth their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.

sufficed to draw forth from the lips of the Master precious lessons of wisdom, which, while calculated to correct both her and them, served to regulate the feelings of the other apostles—constituting a valuable legacy of truth to every age. It is not in the nature of man, without much grace, to aspire to greatness by becoming the servant of his brethren. Ver. 29-34. The conduct of the multitude was unreflecting and cruel. Proper sentiments would have prompted them to interpose and petition on behalf of the poor blind men, who had now probably the first and the last chance of obtaining a blessing which Christ alone could bestow. The blind men, however, were not to be clamoured down. With them the case was desperate, and they acted with the decision which it required. When men seek after the Lord, they will find many more disposed to obstruct than to further their object. Let them turn the obstruction to account, by increasing their determination to save their souls. How great the contrast, in the present case, of the Saviour's conduct to that of the multitude, who must have felt ashamed at what they had done, and have stood self-condemned when they saw the poor men blessed with vision!

Chap. XXI. 1-22. The prophecy touching Zion's King seems to intimate that both the animals were mounted. It is, however, not uncommon with the Sacred Authors to employ the plural number for the singular; but there is nothing improper in supposing, that, in fulfilment of the prediction, for some reason suggested at the moment, both were used. Thus the King of Zion was borne along in the same way as the judges and kings of Israel had been up to the time of Solomon, all of whom employed the ass. It was reserved for a subsequent age to employ chariots and horses. The spreading of garments in the path of kings was customary in the East, as also was the acclamation of the people. "Hosanna to the son of David," amounts to a prayer for his preservation and prosperity. The language of the multitude, whether they perfectly understood its full import or not, was an emphatic reception of Jesus as the promised Messiah. The authority with which he immediately acted in the temple, was in harmony with his exalted character; while the exercise of his Divine power in healing all who came to him, was much calculated to confirm his mission. This outburst of popular enthusiasm, combined with the power and compassion dis-way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and said unto it, 'Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And presently the fig-tree withered away.

20 And when the disciples saw it, they marvelled, saying, 'How soon is the fig-tree withered away!

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig-tree, but also, if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done.

22 And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

23 ¶ And when he was come into the temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and said, 'By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?

24 And Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I in like wise will tell you by what authority I do these things.

25 The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, 'Why did ye not then believe him?

26 But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people: 'for all hold John as a prophet.

27 And they answered Jesus, and said, We cannot tell. And he said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

28 ¶ But 'what think ye? 'A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, 'Son, go work to-day in my vineyard.

29 He answered and said, 'I will not, but afterward he repented, and went.

30 And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, 'I go, sir; and went not.

31 Whether of them twain 'did the will of his father? They say unto him, 'The first. Jesus saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you.

33 ¶ Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-press in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country:

34 And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it.

35 And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another.

36 Again, he sent other servants more than the first: and they did unto them likewise.

37 But 'last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, 'They will reverence my son.

38 But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, 'This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance.

39 And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

40 When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

41 They say unto him, 'He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons.

42 Jesus saith unto them, 'Did ye never read in the scriptures, 'The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes!

43 Therefore say I unto you, 'The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to 'a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

44 And 'whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken: 'but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

45 And when the chief priests and Pharisees had heard his parables, 'they perceived that he spake of them.

46 But when they sought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, because they took him for a prophet.

CHAPTER XXII.

2 The marriage of the king's son. 11 The wedding-garment. 15 Of paying tribute. 23 Of the resurrection.

AND Jesus answered, 'and spake unto them again by parables, and said, played by the Saviour, sorely tried the chief priests and scribes, who were ready to fix on him a charge of impiety in receiving such homage. The reply so promptly given served to silence and to confound them. There might be more in the curse which fell upon the fig-tree than at first sight appeared. The tree has been considered a type or emblem of the Jewish nation, and especially of the scribes and Pharisees, who, notwithstanding their towering professions, were without fruit. The language of ver. 22 must be taken with Scriptural limitations. While nothing can be more comprehensive than the term "whatsoever," everything must be according to the Divine will, and in harmony with the Divine economy.

Ver. 23-46. The two sons represent the Pharisees and the publicans. Much was promised by the former, but nothing was done; whereas many of the latter that seemed hopeless, became the children of God. The parable of the householder was greatly fitted to expose the ingratitude and wickedness of the Jews. The particulars strikingly illustrate the great facts of their history, at the same time foreshadowing the calling of the Gentiles. The punishment fearfully indicates the results of impenitence. By falling on a great stone, a man may be seriously, though not incurably injured; but when a great stone falls on him, he is crushed and destroyed.

2 The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son,

3 And sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come.

4 Again, he sent forth other servants, saying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner: my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready; come unto the marriage.

5 But they made light of it, and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise:

6 And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them.

7 But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city.

8 Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy.

9 Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

10 So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.

11 ¶ And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding-garment:

12 And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding-garment? And he was speechless.

13 Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

14 For many are called, but few are chosen.

15 ¶ Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

16 And they sent out unto him their disciples, with the Herodians, saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man; for thou regardest not the person of men.

17 Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cesar, or not?

18 But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?

19 Shew me the tribute-money. And they brought unto him a penny.

20 And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription?

21 They say unto him, Cesar's. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Cesar the things which are Cesar's; and unto God the things that are God's.

22 When they had heard these words, they marvelled, and left him, and went their way.

23 ¶ The same day came to him the Sadducees, which say that there is no resurrection, and asked him, 24 Saying, Master, Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

25 Now there were with us seven brethren: and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother:

26 Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh.

27 And last of all the woman died also.

28 Therefore, in the resurrection, whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her.

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God.

30 For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven.

31 But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, 32 I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living.

33 And when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

34 ¶ But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together.

35 Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, 36 Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

Chap. XXII. 1-22. The Jews received the first invitation to the Gospel banquet from their own prophets to the days of John, and the second by the Saviour, his Apostles, and other disciples. The reference in ver. 7 to "armies" had an awful fulfilment, when the Romans destroyed the city, and slew an immense multitude of the inhabitants. The Arabs never put aside aught that has been set on the table; when they kill a sheep, they dress the whole of it, and call in their neighbours to consume the banquet. It is a common thing in the East for rich men to feast the poor, the maimed, and the blind. In Oriental festivities, the guests were expected to appear in an appropriate dress, which was generally a white robe. If a stranger happened to be among them who had not on a suitable garment, the master of the house would furnish one. We thus see with what frequency the Saviour had recourse to well-known usages among the people. Ver. 23-40. The question of the resurrection is settled by an appeal to Scripture. The language quoted clearly demonstrates that the souls of the departed survive—a truth which entirely overthrows the system of the Sadducees. The weighty words of our Lord might well impress the minds of his hearers. They presented an astonishing contrast to the teaching of the scribes in indicating perfect knowledge, while they exposed and withered the sophistry and the cavils of his enemies. The question of the lawyer led to the development of a great principle. The Jewish doctors differed in their opinions as to the position of various commandments, some giving the preference to one, some to another. The Lord Jesus shews that they all resolve themselves into one—the love of 37 Jesus said unto him, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

38 This is the first and great commandment.

39 And the second is like unto it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

40 On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

41 ¶ While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, 42 Saying, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, The son of David.

43 He saith unto them, How then doth David in spirit call him Lord, saying, 44 The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 'till I make thine enemies thy footstool?

45 If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?

46 And no man was able to answer him a word; neither durst any man, from that day forth, ask him any more questions.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 The scribes and Pharisees' good doctrine, but evil examples of life. 24 The destruction of Jerusalem foretold.

THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

2 Saying, The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat:

3 All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not.

4 For they bind heavy burdens, and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.

5 But all their works they do for to be seen of men: they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments,

6 And love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues,

7 And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.

8 But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.

9 And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven.

10 Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ.

11 But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant.

12 And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.

13 ¶ But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

14 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation.

15 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves.

16 Woe unto you, ye blind guides! which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor.

17 Ye fools, and blind! for whether is greater, the gold, or the temple that sanctifieth the gold?

18 And, Whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty.

19 Ye fools, and blind! for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that sanctifieth the gift?

20 Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon.

21 And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by him that dwelleth therein.

22 And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by him that sitteth thereon.

God and the love of man. This is the religion of heaven, and it ought to be the religion of the earth. This is the first and greatest commandment, and it involves the principle of every other. A man governed by love worketh no ill to his neighbour; and, therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law. Ver. 41-46. The answer to the Saviour's question shews the general view which then obtained concerning the relation of the expected Christ to David. On this point there is no dispute. The second question, however, confounded them. On no principle could it be correctly answered, other than that of the Divine as well as the human character of the Messiah. That granted, all was easy; that denied, all was perplexity.

Chap. XXIII. 1-33. At the feasts of the ancients, the guests did not sit on chairs, round tables, as with us, but reposed upon couches, something corresponding with our sofas, each couch accommodating three persons; and of course it was estimated the greatest honour for the guests to be placed upon the same couch with the master of the house. It corresponds with sitting on the right and left of the chairman at our banquets. The Pharisees were accustomed to walk about the public streets and in the market-places, where people assembled in large numbers, for the special purpose of obtaining the notice of the multitude, who stretched out the hand, uncovered the head, or bowed the knee. The Saviour directs his observations to the pride which prompted this course, and exposed it before the people. The injunction to call no man father, implies much. Men, the greatest and the best, are but men; and while entitled to respect and honour on the ground of wisdom, worth, and office, they are never to be put in the place of our Divine Master. The Saviour's exposure of the Pharisees was much fitted to exasperate them. He removed the veil, and revealed their hypocrisy in all its deformity. The combination of lengthened prayer with the plunder of poor widows, was calculated to rouse against them public indignation. By these means they imposed on the simple, and, when our Lord appeared, sat enthroned in the hearts of the multitude; but, by discovering their true character, he reduced them to their proper place. It was customary among the Jews to 23 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! ¹for ye pay tithe of mint, and anise, and cummin, and have ²omitted ³the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: ⁴these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

24 Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.

25 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! ¹for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

26 Thou blind Pharisee, ¹cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 The destruction of the temple foretold. 29 Of Christ's coming to judgment.

AND Jesus went out, and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him, for to shew him the buildings of the temple.

2 And Jesus said unto them, See ye not all these things? Verily I say unto you, ¹There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be ¹the sign of thy coming, and of ²the end of the world?

4 And Jesus answered and said unto them, ¹Take heed that no man deceive you:

5 For many shall come ¹in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

6 And ye shall hear of wars, and rumours of wars; see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, ¹but the end is not yet.

7 For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be ¹famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.

whiten their sepulchres, by way of ornament, as well as to prevent the danger of ceremonial pollution by too near an approach. The Rabbis carried the notion of danger from this cause so far, as to mark the surface of the ground under which their sepulchral caves extended. The graves of the great were distinguished by square rooms, which were kept clean whitewashed and beautified. Many of these continue to this day, presenting an impressive comment on the language of the Lord Jesus. Ver. 34-39. The whole of this discourse is stamped with grandeur such as none of the Prophets or the Apostles ever reached. Ver. 34, 35 are marked with peculiar authority. The prediction is terrible, displaying the inexpressible wickedness of the then existing generation. The apostrophe to Jerusalem is peculiarly affecting. In the East, birds of prey are constantly on the wing; it is therefore difficult to rear chickens, since at every moment they are in danger of being carried off. This peril keeps the mother continually upon the watch; and no sooner does she see them skimming along, than she gives a scream, and the brood run to her for protection.

Chap. XXIV. 1-28. Jewish historians tell us that the temple was built with stones of green and white marble, some of which were no less than 45 cubits long, 5 high, and 6 broad, or, according to our measurement between 60 and 70 feet in length! It is particularly worthy of remark, that when the Romans had taken Jerusalem, they not only destroyed the temple and the city, but dug up the foundations of both, thus realising the very words of the Lord Jesus, as well as fulfilling the prophecy of Micah, chap. iii. 12. The false Christs which appeared subsequently are here foretold. These men, by inciting insurrection, exasperated the Romans, and greatly enhanced the misery of the people. The rising of the nations here set forth was realised to the letter; the Jews and Syrians contended at Cæsarea about the right of the city, when the Jews were expelled, and 20,000 of them slain. The Jews retaliated, ravaging the cities and villages of the Syrians, and killing vast multitudes. The Syrians rejoined by taking signal vengeance. The calamities of the Apostles and their converts are here distinctly set forth, so that they were not taken unawares. The preaching of the Gospel of the kingdom, mentioned in ver. 14, has been largely fulfilled; but much remains still to be done. "The abomination of desolation" is at once explained by the standards of the 8 All ^hthese are the beginning of sorrows.

9 Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.

10 And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another.

11 And ^hmany false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many.

12 And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.

13 But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 And ^hthis gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; ^hand then shall the end come.

15 When ^hye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of ^hby Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand.)

16 Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains:

17 Let him which is on the house-top not come down to take any thing out of his house:

18 Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes.

19 And woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days!

20 But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, ^hneither on the sabbath-day:

21 For ^hthen shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be.

22 And ^hexcept those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but ^hfor the elect's sake those days shall be shortened.

23 Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not.

24 For ^hthere shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, ^hand shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.

25 Behold, I have told you before.

26 Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, ^hhe is in the secret chambers; believe it not.

27 For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also ^hthe coming of the Son of man be.

28 For whosoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together.

29 ¶ Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken:

30 And then shall appear ^hthe sign of the Son of man in heaven: ^hand then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall ^hsee the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.

31 And ^hhe shall send his angels with ^ha great sound of a trumpet, and they shall ^hgather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

32 ¶ Now learn ^ha parable of the fig-tree: When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh:

33 So likewise ye, ^hwhen ye shall see all these things, ^hknow that ^hit is near, even at the doors.

34 Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled.

35 ¶ Heaven and earth shall pass away, but ^hmy words shall not pass away.

36 ¶ But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only.

37 But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

38 For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, 39 And ^hknew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

40 Then shall two be in the field; ^hthe one shall be taken, and the other left.

41 Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

42 ¶ Watch therefore; ^hfor ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

43 But know this, that if the Goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.

44 Therefore ^hbe ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.

45 Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over

Roman army; for the Romans adored the eagles of their legions, and the images of their gods and their emperors, which were inscribed on the standards of the troops. According to the great Jewish historian, if all the calamities with which the world had been visited from the beginning were summed up, they would not equal those endured by the Jews. If this language be somewhat hyperbolic, there is still much truth in it. Never was nation put to such straits. About 1,100,000 perished in the siege, and multitudes elsewhere, so that the whole nation must have been cut off had not the period of their sufferings been shortened. Ver. 29-51. The "carcase" clearly means the Jewish nation, about, both morally and judicially, to expire; and the instruments of Divine vengeance are clearly the Roman armies, whose standards were the eagles. The scent of birds of prey in the East is very keen; anything in the way of offal will soon collect them. Should there be a dead elephant, or any other beast in the jungle, vast numbers of ravenous birds and animals hasten to the spot, contending for the prey. The angels, in ver. 31, have been viewed as the Ministers of the Word, who blow the Gospel trumpet, and gather the elect of God out of this wicked world. The events have been applied to the last day, which it has been his household, ^mto give them meat in due season?

46 ^aBlessed is that servant whom his lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

47 Verily I say unto you, ^oThat he shall make him ruler over all his goods.

48 But and ^pif that evil servant shall ^qsay in his heart, ^rMy lord delayeth his coming;

49 And shall begin ^tto smite his fellow-servants, ^uand to eat and drink with the drunken;

50 The lord of that servant shall ^vcome in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of,

51 And shall ^wcut him asunder, ^xand appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: ^ythere shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 The parable of the ten virgins, 14 and of the talents.
31 The description of the last judgment.

THEN shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, ^awhich took their lamps, and went forth to meet ^bthe bridegroom.

2 And ^cfive of them were wise, and five were foolish.

3 They that were ^dfoolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them:

4 But the wise took ^eoil in their vessels with their lamps.

5 While the bridegroom tarried, ^fthey all slumbered and slept.

6 And at midnight there was a cry made, ^gBehold, the bridegroom cometh; ^hgo ye out to meet him.

7 Then ⁱall those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps.

8 And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for our lamps are ^jgone out.

9 But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves.

10 And while they went to buy, ^kthe bridegroom came; and ^lthey that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut.

11 Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us.

12 But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, ^mI know you not.

13 Watch therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

14 ¶ For the kingdom of heaven is ⁿas a man travelling into a far country, ^{who} called his own servants, ^oand delivered unto them his goods.

15 And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey.

16 Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made ^{them} other five talents.

17 And likewise he that had ^{received} two, he also gained other two.

18 But he that had received one went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

19 After ^pa long time the lord of those servants cometh, and ^qreckoneth with them.

20 And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained besides them five talents more.

21 His lord said unto him, ^rWell done, ^{thou} good and faithful servant; ^{thou} hast been faithful over a few things, ^I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

22 He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents besides them.

23 His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; ^{thou} hast been faithful over a few things, ^I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

24 Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed:

25 And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, ^{there} thou hast ^{that is} thine.

26 His lord answered and said unto him, ^{Thou} wicked and slothful servant, ^{thou} knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed:

27 Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and ^{then} at my coming I should have received mine own with usury.

28 Take therefore the talent from him, and give ^{it} unto him which hath ten talents.

29 For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance:

thought is exclusively referred to. These, however, and much beside, are but speculations, the simple fact mentioned in ver. 34, that the whole was to be accomplished in that generation, suffices to settle the question. Whatever it was, it was limited to a given period; and, examined in that light, it can mean nothing more than the Saviour's providential care over his people.

Chap. XXV. 1-30. This beautiful parable was more impressive to the Jewish than it is now to the Gentile ear. Amongst them, after the marriage had been celebrated, the bridegroom conducted his bride in a procession in the evening to his own home. Female friends and relations were invited, and with lamps waited in company near the house till the bridegroom returned, when, after the customary congratulations, they joined the procession, and proceeded to his residence. The doors were then shut. The custom prevailed among the ancient Greeks and Romans, as it does still among the Hindus. Missionaries tell us that the bridegroom at a Hindu marriage, having entered the house, the door is immediately closed and guarded by sepoys, and after this there is no admission, however urgently pressed. Ver. 31-46. The allusion to the separation of the sheep from the goats would seem to be founded on the custom of the ancient shepherds to keep them in different flocks, but from him that hath not, shall be taken away even that which he hath.

30 And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

31 ¶ When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory:

32 And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:

33 And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.

34 Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world:

35 For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in:

36 "Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me.

37 Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?

38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?

39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

41 Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels:

42 For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink:

CHAPTER XXVI.

3 The rulers conspire against Christ. 14 Judas selleth him. 17 Christ eateth the passover. 47 He is betrayed by Judas.

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples,

2 Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified.

3 ¶ Then assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas,

4 And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him.

5 But they said, Not on the feast-day, lest there be an uproar among the people.

6 ¶ Now, when Jesus was in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, 7 There came unto him a woman having an alabaster-box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.

8 But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste?

9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.

10 When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me.

dividing the one from the other when they happened to mingle. It may further refer to the custom of the Jews, who placed those acquitted on the right hand of the Sanhedrin, and those that were condemned on the left. This solemn passage presents, in a very striking manner, the importance which attaches to practical godliness, more especially to compassion for distress, and the exercise of good offices in mitigating affliction among the faithful in Christ Jesus. Throughout the whole Scriptures, this view of personal piety receives special prominence. While James defines "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father," he represents it to consist in "visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction," and in "keeping ourselves unspotted from the world." The closing verse has been the subject of much discussion; a class of writers, sufficiently pleased with the perpetuity of eternal life, set themselves against the doctrine of everlasting punishment, apparently forgetful that the question is simply one of language. The same term is employed in the one case as in the other, and there is no authority whatever to limit the one to a fixed period, and extend the other through an endless eternity.

Chap. XXVI. 1-25. There is some difficulty about the person mentioned in ver. 7. It has been generally considered that it was Mary, and that the anointing is the same as that referred to in John xii. This view is supposed to meet a difficulty; it is deemed more probable than that, within the brief space of four days, the Saviour should have been twice anointed with so costly a perfume, that the same fault should be found with the action, and the same value set on the ointment, the same words used in defence of the woman, and all this in the presence of many of the same persons. It was customary for the guests to rest on couches at meals, and even at the Paschal Supper; this custom had long prevailed, although the Israelites were first commanded to eat it standing with their staves in their hands, as persons prepared to set out upon a journey. On what ground the express enactment was set aside it is impossible to ascertain. It has been thought that the Rabbis were the authors of the change, representing the recumbent posture as symbolic of their rest in Canaan: but it is perilous to take such liberties with the express injunctions of the sacred page. The principle once adopted, none can tell whither it may lead. It is the basis of Popery. It was customary for the Arabs to help themselves with their hands out of the same dish, and the fashion there prevails up to the present time. Although they use neither knife, fork, nor spoon, delicacy is not greatly violated, from the frequent ablutions which ten of him: ^pbut woe unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born.

25 Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said.

26 ¶ And as they were eating, ^qJesus took bread, and ¹blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; ^rthis is my body.

27 And ^she took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, ^tDrink ye all of it:

28 For this is ^umy blood of the new testament, which is ^vshed for many for the remission of sins.

29 But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

30 And when they had sung an ²hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

31 Then saith Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, ^wI will smite the Shepherd, ^xand the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad.

32 But after ^yI am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee.

33 Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.

34 Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

35 Peter said unto him, ^bThough I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewise also said all the disciples.

36 ¶ Then cometh Jesus with them unto ^ca place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

abound among them—they wash their hands before and after every meal. Ver. 26-46. We have here the Divine account of the institution of the Lord's Supper, presented with the simplicity which serves to expose the manifold errors which have, in the course of ages, gathered around the ordinance. They employed cake, not loaf, such as we use, which accounts for the term "breaking"—an act more symbolic of the awful event to be typified, than our custom of cutting the bread in portions. The bread was not "blessed" as our translators represent it, by introducing the word "it." By "blessing," is meant thanksgiving to God according to the Jewish practice, which had passed into the Christian Church. When the Lord said the bread was his body, he clearly meant nothing more than it signified or represented it. It is difficult to conceive of a greater outrage on language, reason, and common sense, than the Popish notion representing the bread as in very deed the flesh, and the wine as the blood of the Lord Jesus. With respect to the cup, it was given to all the Apostles, and in the churches established by them it was everywhere delivered to the people the same as the bread. Popery has no authority for withholding the cup, and there are few facts in the history of its misdeeds more palpably unscriptural and altogether indefensible. The Saviour calls the dispensation of his religion the New Covenant, in opposition to the Old, which was in its nature introductory and temporary. The blood of sacrifice was necessary to confirm the Old Testament, and the blood of Christ to confirm the New, the former being symbolic of the latter. The objects for which Christ died are described in ver. 28 as "many"—a term which has created some discussion. That it implies a multitude, is certain; nor is it denied by those who hold the doctrine of election by grace. Others view the term as synonymous with the whole human race. To form a right conception of this subject, the entire testimony of Scripture must be taken, and the result of that testimony doubtless is, that Christ Jesus "tasted death for every man," that he "gave himself a ransom for all," that "he is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." In harmony with this, he himself commanded his disciples to "preach the Gospel to every creature." God hath commanded all men everywhere to repent and to believe on his Son, whose atonement is sufficient for every soul of man, and it will prove efficient to every penitent believer. The hymn sung on the occasion was that which the Jews were enjoined to use on the night of the passover, which it is said was a portion of six psalms, comprised in the 118th to 118th inclusive. The warning the Saviour gave his disciples was well fitted to render them watchful, and the circumstance of their having failed, notwithstanding, would ever after work in them the spirit of humility and self-distrust. Arundell, who travelled much in Asia Minor, tells us that he found the cocks of Smyrna crowing in full chorus between eleven and twelve at night, and between one and two in the morning. So accurate were their instincts, that he said he could calculate the hour of the night with as much certainty by them as by his watch. The sufferings of the Saviour, in ver. 38, now began to rise upon him like a swelling flood. The language is 37 And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be ^asorrowful and very heavy.

38 Then saith he unto them, ^eMy soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me.

39 And he went a little farther, ^fand fell on his face, ^gand prayed, saying, ^hO my Father, ⁱif it be possible, ^jlet this cup pass from me: nevertheless, ^knot as I will, but as thou wilt.

40 And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, ^mWhat! could ye not watch with me one hour?

41 ⁿWatch and pray, that ye ^oenter not into temptation: ^pthe spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

42 He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy.

44 And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45 Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, ^qthe hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46 Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

47 ^rAnd while he yet spake, ^slo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people.

48 Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, ^tWhomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; hold him fast.

49 And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master; ^uand kissed him.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Friend, wherefore art thou come? Then came they and laid hands on Jesus, and took him.

51 And, behold, one of them which were with Jesus stretched out ^vhis hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high priest, and smote off his ear.

52 Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place: for all ^wthey that take the sword shall perish with the sword.

53 Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, ^xand he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?

54 But ⁿhow then shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be?

55 In that same hour said Jesus to the multitudes, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me.

56 But all this was done, ^othat the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. ^pThen all the disciples forsook him, and fled.

57 ^qAnd they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled.

58 But Peter followed him afar off unto the high priest's palace, and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end.

59 Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, ^rsought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death;

60 But found none: yea, though many false witnesses came, ^syet found they none. At the last came two false witnesses, 61 And said, This fellow said, ^tI am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days.

62 And the high priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? what ^uis it which these witness against thee?

63 But ^vJesus held his peace. And the high priest answered and said unto him, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be ^wthe Christ, the Son of God.

64 Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless, I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on ^xthe right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

65 Then the high priest rent his clothes, saying, ^yHe hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66 What think ye? They answered and said, ^zHe is guilty of death.

67 Then ^adid they spit in his face, and buffeted him; and others smote him with ^bthe palms of their hands, 68 Saying, Prophesy unto us, ^cthou Christ, Who is he that smote thee?

69 ^dNow Peter sat without in the palace: and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with ^eJesus of Galilee.

70 But ^fhe denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest.

71 And ^gwhen he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said awfully expressive:—"Sorrowful, even unto death"—a sorrow which threatened extinction—is an expression as original as it is affecting. In person, Christ had no sin, and could, therefore, have no sorrow; but the sins of his people began to take hold upon him, and the terrible hour which was drawing on brought his sufferings before his mind in all their intensity and terror. Ver. 47-75. The Saviour's words to Peter clearly shew, that wrongs for the sake of religion are not to be retaliated with violence, and that the kingdom of Christ is not to be extended by the sword. The Roman legion consisted of about 6000 soldiers, and twelve such legions were considered to constitute an effective army. The depravity of the high priest and his associates is strikingly manifested in the conduct of the trial. What they required and sought was, not true, but false testimony; nevertheless, to preserve appearances, it was necessary that even the false witnesses should agree, and their disagreement was a cause of peculiar perplexity. Where the truth is spoken, and the parties speak from personal knowledge, there is a certainty of substantial agreement; but in the case of falsehood, all is chance and hazard.

unto them that were there, °This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.

72 And again he denied ^pwith an oath, °I do not know the man.

73 And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, °Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee.

74 Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew.

75 And Peter °remembered the word of Jesus, which said unto him, Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. °And he went out, and wept bitterly.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Christ delivered to Pilate. 8 Judas hangeth himself. 33 Christ is crucified.

WHEN the morning was come, °all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death.

2 And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.

3 ¶ Then °Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, °repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders,

4 Saying, I have sinned, in that I have betrayed °the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

5 And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself.

6 And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, °It is not lawful for °to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

7 And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in.

8 Wherefore that field was called, The field of blood, unto this day.

9 (Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, °And they took the °thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they °of the children of Israel did value,

10 And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.)

11 ¶ And °Jesus stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest.

12 And when °he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing.

13 Then saith Pilate unto him, °Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee?

14 And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

15 ¶ °Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would.

16 And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas.

17 Therefore, when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, °or Jesus which is called Christ?

18 For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

19 ¶ When he was set down on the judgment-seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man; for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.

20 But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they °should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus.

21 The governor answered and said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas.

22 Pilate saith unto them, °What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ? They all say unto him, Let him be crucified.

23 And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified.

24 ¶ When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person; see ye to it.

25 Then answered all the people, and said, °His blood be on us, and on our children.

26 ¶ Then released he Barabbas unto Unanimity can only be secured by preconcerted arrangement. It is particularly noticeable, that "many false witnesses came," but the disagreements were such, that their testimony could not be acted upon, till at last two appeared, very probably speaking to order. The trial stands forth with matchless prominence for its destitution, not only of all justice and feeling, but even of all decency. The humiliation of our Lord now approached a climax, which was consummated on the cross.

Chap. XXVII. 1-66. Although the high priest and his associates had pronounced Jesus "guilty of death," yet the power of execution lay with the Romans, and it was therefore necessary that Pilate should both confirm the sentence and carry it out. Judas now began to recover from the deadly stupor into which Satan had thrown him, and when he saw the consequences of his conduct, he shuddered at what he had done. For the time, so excited was his cupidity that he thought of nothing but the reward. So it is with all persons driven headlong by Satan. They are intent only on gratification, and learn their folly and wickedness when too late. The repentance of Judas, however, was "unto death." As if feeling that there was no mercy for him, he sought none, but rushed on destruction, cutting short an existence he could no longer endure by his own hand! It is difficult to conceive aright of the effect of this terrible event. While treason could not be expiated by suicide, it yet sufficed to testify remorse and to proclaim innocence. It was eminently fitted to give a shock even to his ruthless employers, and to arrest the triumph of the ungodly, as well as to vindicate the honour of true religion. The reply of the priests and elders to Judas is one of terrible significance—"What is that to us? see thou to that!" Wretched man! That is all their thanks and all their sympathy! Miserable comforters! Thus it is, and thus it ever will be, that Satan and his servants treat their dupes and tools! Their end once them: and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

27 Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the ²common hall, and gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers.

28 And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe.

29 ¶ And when they had ¹platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, king of the Jews!

30 And ²they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

31 And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, ³and led him away to crucify him.

32 And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

33 ¶ And when they were come unto a place called ⁴Golgotha, that is to say, A place of a skull, 34 They ⁵gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: and when he had tasted ⁶thereof, he would not drink.

35 And ⁷they crucified him, and ⁸parted his garments, casting lots: ⁹that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

36 And, sitting down, they watched him there;

37 And set up over his head ¹⁰his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

38 Then were there two thieves crucified with him; one on the right hand, and another on the left.

39 ¶ And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads, 40 And saying, Thou ¹¹that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, ¹²come down from the cross.

44 The thieves also, which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth.

45 Now ⁵from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour.

46 And about the ninth hour ⁶Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!

47 Some of them that stood there, when they heard ⁷that, said, This man calleth for Elias.

48 And straightway one of them ran, and took a sponge, and filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

49 The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

50 ¶ Jesus, ⁸when he had cried again with a loud voice, ⁹yielded up the ghost.

51 And, behold, ¹⁰the vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent;

52 And the graves were opened; and ¹¹many bodies of the saints which ¹²asleep arose, 53 And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

54 Now, when the centurion, and they that were with him watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, ¹³Truly this was the Son of God.

55 And ¹⁴many women were there beholding afar off, which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him:

56 Among which was Mary Magdalene, and ¹⁵Mary the mother of James and accomplished, they leave their instruments to the consequences. The appropriation of the blood-money, while it was a fulfilment of an important Scripture, shewed how hypocritically they contrived to mingle the highest crime with an ostentatious philanthropy. A mistake has occurred in the transcription, which ascribes the passage to Jeremiah, instead of to Zechariah xi. 12, 13. The testimony borne by Pilate's wife is very remarkable. Her dream so affected her, that she felt constrained to communicate with her husband even on the judgment-seat, testifying that the Prisoner was a "just man," and imploring him to have nothing to do with the matter. This testimony had doubtless a great effect on the judge; but he was overborne by the cruel clamour of the priests and elders. He, nevertheless, maintained a resolute conflict with them; and, on yielding, he took water and washed his hands, uttering the emphatic language, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person; see ye to it." The conduct of Pilate is intensely contradictory: at the same moment he proclaims the innocence of the Prisoner, he signs his death-warrant! The mockery which followed is unparalleled. The dress, the crown, the reed, and the homage, all harmonise in wickedness and cruelty, lending special emphasis to the language of Isaiah the Prophet. Malefactors were always crucified naked, and their garments were a perquisite to the executioners. In the present case, they divided among them the separate articles of clothing, and for the rest, as it did not admit of division, they cast lots; thus fulfilling to the letter an important prediction in the Psalms. The darkness which covered the terrible scene extended beyond the confines of Judea. The fact was recorded in the annals of other nations as a thing of marvel. Dionysius, in Egypt, it is reported, noticed it as something which testified to the suffering of Deity, or which threatened the dissolution of the world. The rending of the temple vail was a circumstance full of significance. There were two vails—one to the entrance into the Holy Place, and the other between that and the sanctuary, called the inner vail, which is here intended. The rent signified the virtual abolition of the Old Testament Dispensation, and the distinction between the Jews and the Gentiles. The monopoly of the seed of Abraham was at an end, and henceforth it would be seen that God was no respecter of persons. It is to be noted, that the graves which opened, and the bodies which were raised, were those of the saints, not of the wicked, who entered the Holy City, and appeared unto many. No other cir-

59 And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

3 His "countenance was like lightning, and "his raiment white as snow:

4 And for fear of him "the keepers did "shake, and became as dead men.

5 And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that "ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

6 He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. "Come, see the place where the Lord lay:

7 And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

8 And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy, and did run to bring his disciples word.

9 ¶ And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, "All hail. And they came "and held him by the feet, and "worshipped him.

10 Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

11 ¶ Now, when they were going, behold, "some of the watch came into the city, and shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.

12 And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, 13 Saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept.

14 And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you.

15 So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

cumstance attending this awful event would naturally produce such terror and consternation. Their impression on the public mind could never be obliterated. What became of these bodies we are not told, and all reasoning on the subject is useless. These spirits of the just, having performed their office on this unparalleled occasion, might conduct their bodies back again to their resting-place, and return to the Paradise of God, leaving their dust to repose till the morning of the resurrection; or, for aught that we can tell, they were glorified and taken to heaven. The probabilities, however, on behalf of the former view are much the stronger. The testimony of the centurion is valuable, as that of an upright and competent witness, and hence the Holy Spirit has honoured it with a record. His name is withheld, but his evidence is embalmed to the end of time. The great solicitude of the chief priests and the Pharisees about the preservation of the body has its value. Nothing was left undone that could be accomplished to ensure safety, and yet the body was removed. Vain are all the projects of men for preventing the accomplishment of the purposes of God!

Chap. XXVIII. 1-18. Some critics have attempted to soften the expression, "a great earthquake," by viewing it simply as relating to a commotion, or confusion among the soldiers, caused by the angel's appearance. The suggestion violates alike common sense and inspiration. The prevailing signification of the term is nothing less than an earthquake, in the common acceptation. But why attempt to abate its force, by altering its character? Does not the act well accord with the advent of an angel on an occasion so august and memorable? The precautions of the chief priests went for nothing; before the glory of the celestial visitant, "the soldiers became as dead men." How tender and touching the Saviour's address to his devoted friends, who had come to do homage to his dust! How great the honour which their intended good offices received! The elders, reckless of truth, suggested falsehood for the concealment of their confusion. It is, however, sometimes difficult at once to lie, and to preserve consistency. The soldiers were instructed to testify to an event which took place while they slept, and of which, consequently, supposing its truth, they could know nothing! Ver. 19, 20. These words are momentous, as touching on the Persons of the Godhead, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—one in Name, Essence, Immortality, Omnipotence, Omnipresence, Omnipotence, Power, and Glory—a distinction clearly set forth in the rite of baptism, by which they are proclaimed as the one living and true God. The injunction touching the spread of the Gospel, presents a glorious view of the aspect which it bears to the human family. As the "Head of the Heathen," the Lord Jesus enjoins

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MARK.

There is reason to believe that the Gospel of Mark was written about the year 65. It is distinguished by some peculiarities: from the omission of much that was calculated to interest the Jews, it is supposed that Mark had in view mainly the Gentile believers. Again, while minutely recording the miracles of Jesus, he presents but little of his discourses. He also sets forth various circumstances and matters passed over by Matthew.

CHAPTER I.

1 John the Baptist's office. 9 Jesus is baptized, 12 tempted, 14 preacheth, 16 calleth Peter and others, 32 and cureth many.

THE ^abeginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, ^bthe Son of God;

2 As it is written in the prophets, ^cBehold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

3 The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 John ^adid baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance ^rfor the ^aremission of sins.

5 And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all ^bbaptized of him in the river of Jordan, ^aconfessing their sins.

6 And John was clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey;

7 And preached, saying, ^bThere cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.

8 I indeed ^ahave baptized you with water: but ^ahe shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

9 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, ^athat Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10 And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens ^aopened, and the Spirit, like a dove, descending upon him:

his servants to go and make converts of his subjects, minutely instructing them in the knowledge and obedience of his laws. This command is common to the true Church of God, whatever its external aspects of polity, office, or ordinance. It is also abiding, until the great work shall have been accomplished.

Chap. I. 1-13. In the East, it was customary for men of distinction about to travel to send messengers before them, telling the people to prepare the way. In cases of great dignity, some swept the road, others spread their garments, others formed arches and festoons. The baptism of repentance is designated such, because the duty of repentance was the great topic of John's ministration, and baptism its seal. Those who did not repent were not baptized, so that baptism was the line of 11 And ^athere came a voice from heaven, saying, ^aThou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

12 ¶ And immediately ^athe Spirit driveth him into the wilderness.

13 And he was there in the wilderness forty days ^atempted of Satan; and was with the wild beasts: ^aand the angels ministered unto him.

14 Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, ^apreaching the gospel of the kingdom of God.

15 And saying, The time is fulfilled, and ^athe kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.

16 ¶ Now, as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw ^aSimon, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: (for they were fishers.)

17 And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become ^afishers of men.

18 And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him.

19 And when he had gone a little farther thence, he saw ^aJames the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets.

20 And straightway he called them: and they left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

21 And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath-day ^ahe entered into the synagogue, and taught.

22 And they were astonished at his demarcation between the penitent and the impenitent; although, doubtless, then, as now, there were those who submitted to baptism without renouncing their sins, and there might be some who were the subjects of compunction, who had not the courage to offer themselves for baptism. The Saviour was said to be with the wild beasts, inasmuch as they were the only settled inhabitants of the wilderness. But if the territory was divided between wild beasts and their Lord, angels were present to dignify the scene and to obey his behests. The precise import of this angelic ministration it is impossible for us to understand; but it must have been something which conduced to his comfort and dignity. Ver. 14-45. The doctrine of repentance, and its necessity to the forgiveness of sin, are very clearly brought out in the present chapter. True repentance is always connected with doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

23 ¶ And there was in their synagogue ^aa man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out, 24 Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, ^athe Holy One of God.

25 And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

26 And when the unclean spirit had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

27 And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? ^bfor with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him.

28 And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

29 And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

30 But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever; and anon they tell him of her.

31 And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

32 ¶ And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils.

33 And all the city was gathered together at the door.

34 And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; ^cand suffered not the devils to ^aspeak, because they knew him.

35 And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed.

36 And Simon, and they that were with him, followed after him.

37 And when they had found him, they said unto him, ^dAll men seek for thee.

38 And he said unto them, ^eLet us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth.

39 And he preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils.

40 ¶ And there came ^fa leper to him, beseeching him, and ^gkneeling down to him, and saying unto him, ^hIf thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

CHAPTER II.

1 Christ healeth one sick of the palsy, 14 calleth Matthew, 15 and eateth with publicans and sinners.

AND ^aagain he entered into Capernaum after some days; ^band it was noised that he was in the house.

2 And ^cstraightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive ^dthem; no, not so much as about the door: ^eand he preached the word unto them.

3 ¶ And they come unto him, ^fbringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four.

4 And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay.

5 When Jesus ^gsaw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy ^hsins be forgiven thee.

6 But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts,

7 Why doth this man thus ⁱspeak blasphemies? ^jwho can forgive sins but God only?

8 And immediately, when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts?

9 Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, ^kThy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk?

10 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,)

11 I say unto thee, ^lArise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house.

true faith; the Saviour, as the object of the Father's love, is the hiding-place of his people. To be in him by faith, is to be in the ark of the covenant; danger is far away and it never can come nigh. The faith through which righteousness is imputed always purifies the heart and regulates the life, demonstrating the truth of the Scripture, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature."

Chap. II. 1-13. The uncovering of the roof of an Eastern house was a simple process. The roof, which was flat, was formed of boards, which might be easily separated to allow of the dropping of a couch. Moreover, they generally have but a ground floor, or at most one upper storey, and being built round a court, it is customary to fix cords from the parapet walls of the flat roofs and to stretch a covering to shelter the inmates in hot weather. The rolling back of this covering may, therefore, have been all that was intended; but whether that, or removing the boards of the roof, the process was not difficult. The best proof that Jesus had power to forgive sins, was to prove that he had power to banish

12 And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

13 ¶ And he went forth again by the sea-side; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them.

14 And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of ^oAlpheus sitting at the ¹receipt of custom, and said unto him, ^pFollow me. And he arose and followed him.

15 And it came to pass, that, ^qas Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him.

16 And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?

17 When Jesus heard ^rit, he saith unto them, ^sThey that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: ^tI came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

18 And ^uthe disciples of John and of the Pharisees used to fast: and they come and say unto him, Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not?

19 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bride-chamber fast while the bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast.

20 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

21 No man also seweth a piece of ^vnew cloth on an old garment; else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse.

22 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred: but new wine must be put into new bottles.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, that he went through the corn-fields on the sabbath-day; and his disciples began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn.

CHAPTER III.

1 The withered hand healed. 13 The apostles chosen. 22 The scribes convinced of blasphemy. 31 Who are Christ's relations.

AND he entered again into the synagogue; and there was a man there which had ^ea withered hand.

2 And they watched him, whether he would heal him on the sabbath-day; that they might accuse him.

3 And he saith unto the man which had the withered hand, Stand forth.

4 And he saith unto them, ^fIs it lawful to do good on the sabbath-days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill? But they held their peace.

5 And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the ^ghardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, ^hStretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

6 And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

7 But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea: and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judea,

8 And from Jerusalem, and from Idumea, and from beyond Jordan; and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.

9 And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him because of diseases under circumstances which baffled human skill and the virtue of human medicine. Ver. 14-23. The promptitude with which Levi and the others obeyed the call to follow the Saviour, is very remarkable. No bribe was held forth, no bounty offered; they simply received the commandment, and forthwith, forsaking all, they followed him. There is much in the case of this paralytic to encourage the friends of the unconverted to bring them under the Gospel. Those who do not hear cannot believe; but where there is hearing, there may be faith. There are few things in which Christians are more at fault; they are seldom apathetic or wanting in duty in matters which appertain to the bodily health; but they come sadly short in that which interests the immortal soul. What is here wanted is faith to enable them to deal with the invisible; that once possessed, the claims of the body, whatever the affliction, would be considered as very secondary, and almost insignificant, compared with those of the soul. The Sabbath was all-important in its own place; but there was a higher law than even that of the Sabbath; it was made for man, not man for it, and therefore works of necessity were not forbidden; whatever was essential to the support or preservation of life, or the mitigation of suffering, was the proper duty of that day.

Chap. III. 1-30. The presence of the Saviour, with his words of wisdom and his healing power, always produced a commotion. There was in his name as attraction which brought people from every quarter, either to listen to his instructions, or to receive benefit from his miracles of mercy. The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, mentioned in ver. 29, has been already referred to. The point, so far as the Holy Scriptures throw light upon it, consists in the malice of those who withstand the evidence of truth, and refuse to acknowthe multitude, lest they should throng him.

10 For he had healed many; insomuch that they ²pressed upon him for to touch him, ³as many as had plagues.

11 And ¹unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art ²'the Son of God.

12 And he straitly charged them that they should not make him known.

13 ¶ And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him.

14 And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, 15 And to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils.

16 And Simon he surnamed Peter;

17 And James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James; (and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, The sons of thunder;)

18 And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew, and Thomas, and James the son of Alphaeus, and Thaddeus, and Simon the Canaanite, 19 And Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him: and they went ²into an house.

20 ¶ And the multitude cometh together again, so that they could not so much as eat bread.

21 And when his ⁴friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: for they said, ⁵'He is beside himself.

22 ¶ And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, ⁶'He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils.

23 And he called them unto him, and said unto them ¹'in parables, ²'How can Satan cast out Satan?

24 And if a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand.

25 And if ¹'a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand.

26 And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end.

27 No man can enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house.

28 Verily I say unto you, ³'All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme;

29 But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, ¹but is in danger of eternal damnation:

30 Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit.

31 ¶ There came then his brethren and his mother, and, standing without, sent unto him, calling him.

32 And the multitude sat about him; and they said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee.

33 And he answered them, saying, Who is my mother, or my brethren?

34 And he looked round about on them which sat about him, and said, ²'Behold my mother and my brethren!

35 For whosoever shall ³'do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother.

CHAPTER IV.

³ The parable of the sower; ¹⁴ the meaning thereof. ²⁶ Of the seed growing secretly; ³⁰ and of the mustard-seed.

AND ¹'he began again to teach by the sea-side: and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, ²so that he entered into a ship, and sat in the sea; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land.

2 And he taught them many things by parables, and said unto them ³'in his doctrine,

3 Hearken; Behold, ⁴'there went out a sower to sow:

4 And it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way-side, ⁵and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up.

5 And some fell on ⁶'stony ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth:

6 But when ⁷'the sun was up, it was scorched; and, because it had no root, it withered away.

7 And some ⁸'fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up and choked it, and it yielded no fruit.

8 And other ⁹'fell on good ground, and did yield fruit that sprang up and increased; and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred.

9 And he said unto them, ¹⁰'He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

ledge the miracles of Christ as being wrought by the power of God. This was assuredly the crime of the Pharisees, to whom the Lord applied his reproof. In our day this may not be done in the primary sense, but it may, in the secondary, by persons who oppose the doctrine and persecute its believers. All such are essentially guilty of this sin, and are excepted from pardon so long as they continue in that state, since the benefits of the Lord Jesus extend to none who do not repent of their transgressions, confess, and forsake them, and seek for mercy. Peculiar peril attends the rejection of evidence; perseverance in this case, while it hardens the heart, will inevitably exclude the soul from the paradise of God. While without shedding of blood there is no remission, even that blood itself will be unavailing for pardon, without "repentance toward God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ." Ver. 31-35. From this we learn that the Saviour's mother, with the rest of her family, were so interested in the proceedings of the Lord Jesus as to attend him. They naturally sought to be admitted, and with this view sent him a message, which elicited an answer, shewing his infinite superiority to the domestic and the local. The one grand ultimate event he had come to achieve was to restore mankind to obedience. This was the end of his death and the descent of the Holy Spirit. When the Father's will is done on earth as it is in heaven, then will the economy of redemption have subserved its highest objects.

Chap. IV. 1-25. The parable of the sower has been already referred to, as teaching us to take heed how we hear, and carefully to scrutinise our own hearts, to see

10 ¶ And when he was alone, they that were about him, with the twelve, asked of him the parable.

11 And he said unto them, Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God: but unto them that are without, all these things are done in parables:

12 That seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them.

13 And he said unto them, Know ye not this parable? and how then will ye know all parables?

14 ¶ The sower soweth ¹the word.

15 And these are they by the way-side, where the word is sown; but, when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

16 And these are they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness;

17 And ^mhave no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended.

18 And these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, 19 And the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful.

20 And these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty-fold, some sixty, and some an hundred.

21 ¶ And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a ¹bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick?

22 For ²there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad.

23 If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

24 And he saith unto them, ^oTake heed what ye hear. With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you; and unto you that hear shall more be given.

25 For he that hath, to him shall be given; and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

26 ¶ And he said, ^pSo is the kingdom that we have not received the grace of God in vain. None other of the parables comprehend so large an amount of character. To some extent it comprises all who hear the Word. Ver. 26-29. The parable of the springing seed is adapted to teachers, preachers, and pastors. Once sown, it may spring where they do not see it, and even after they have been gathered to their fathers' sepulchres. No labour is lost, since the Divine purpose is always served. It proves a saviour of life unto life, or of death unto death. The progress of the Divine 28 For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.

29 But when the fruit is brought forth, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30 ¶ And he said, ^qWhereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

31 It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth:

32 But when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it.

37 And ^tthere arose a ^ugreat storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full.

39 And he arose, and ^wrebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

40 And he said unto them, ^xWhy are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have ^yno faith?

41 And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, ^zWhat manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?

life is finely exemplified by the blade, the ear, and the full corn in the ear. Ver. 30-41. The parable of the mustard-seed is peculiarly cheering, symbolizing as it does the progress of the kingdom of Christ upon the earth. At one time the least of little things, it has gone on from that day to this expanding itself, until at length it will encompass the globe, and stamp with a heavenly impress the whole human family.

ship, immediately there met him ^aout of the tombs a man ^bwith an unclean spirit, 3 Who had ^chis dwelling among the tombs; and no man could bind him, no, not with chains:

4 Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces: neither could any man tame him.

5 And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones.

6 But when he saw Jesus afar off, ^che ran and worshipped him,

7 And cried with a loud voice, and said, ^dWhat have I to do with thee, Jesus, ^ethou ^fSon of the most high God? ^gI adjure thee by God, ^hthat thou torment me not.

8 (For he said unto him, ^bCome out of the man, ⁱthou unclean spirit.)

9 And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is ^jLegion: for we are many.

10 And he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country.

11 Now there was there, nigh unto the mountains, a great herd of swine feeding.

12 And ^kall the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them.

13 And forthwith Jesus gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine; and ^lthe herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand,) and were choked in the sea.

14 And ^mthey that fed the swine fled, and told ⁿit in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done.

15 And they come to Jesus, and see ^ohim that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind; and they were afraid.

16 And they that saw ^pit told them how it befell to him that was possessed with the devil, and ^qalso concerning the swine.

17 And they began ^rto pray him to depart out of their coasts.

18 And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil ^cprayed him that he might be with him.

19 Howbeit Jesus suffered him not; but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee.

20 And he departed, and began to publish in ^dDecapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

21 ¶ And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, much people gathered unto him; and he was nigh unto the sea.

22 And, behold, there cometh one of the ^erulers of the synagogue, Jairus by name; and when he saw him, ^fhe fell at his feet, 23 And ^gbesought him greatly, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death: ^hI pray thee, come and ⁱlay thy hands on her, that she may be healed; and she shall live.

24 And Jesus ^jwent with him; and much people followed him, and thronged him.

25 ¶ And a certain woman, which had ^kan issue of blood twelve years,

26 And ^lhad suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was ^mnothing bettered, but rather grew worse,

27 When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and touched his garment:

28 For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole.

29 And straightway the ⁿfountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in ^oher body that she was healed of that plague.

30 And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that ^pvirtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes?

31 And his disciples said unto him, ^qThou seest the multitude thronging thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?

32 And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing.

33 But the woman, fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, is very remarkable; all the devils appear to have known the Saviour, and are uniformly forward to acknowledge him. "Jesus, thou Son of the most high God," was language which could not fail to produce a deep effect on every auditor. In these cases, men, as compared with devils, appear to disadvantage. They were slow to understand, backward to believe and to confess: the devils believed, confessed, and trembled. The destruction of so great a multitude of swine entailed a heavy loss on the proprietors; but He who gave had a right to take away. The event was eminently calculated to inspire dread in the minds of the people, and also to excite general attention. In perfect harmony with this, the people prayed the Lord to depart out of their coasts, shewing that they did not ascribe the wonderful event to chance, but to its proper source. When they saw the creatures rushing over precipices into the sea, they were convinced that an occurrence so fearful could only be explained by the supposition of an unseen influence.

Ver. 21-43. The prayer of Jairus was short but sincere, and full of faith, and therefore successful. The example is encouraging to parents. Were they to pray as fervently for the souls of their offspring as did Jairus for the body of his beloved daughter, they would not pray in vain. We should have youthful converts in countless multitudes, the glory of the churches, and the joy of their parents. The poor afflicted woman, mentioned in ver. 25, presents an impressive emblem of persons who have gone about, with great labour and at much expense, to establish their own righteousness, while all the time they have only got further and further from God and the true spirit of religion. Before this poor woman came to the Saviour, she had spent upon physicians all that she had, while her malady was still gaining upon her; but coming to him without money and without price, she at once obtained a cure. How simple, yet how believing and confiding her language—"If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole!" According to came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth.

34 And he said unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.

35 ¶ While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's house certain which said, Thy daughter is dead; why troublest thou the Master any further?

36 As soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, Be not afraid, only believe.

37 And he suffered no man to follow him, save Peter, and James, and John the brother of James.

38 And he cometh to the house of the ruler of the synagogue, and seeth the tumult, and them that wept and wailed greatly.

39 And when he was come in, he saith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep? the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth.

40 And they laughed him to scorn. But when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying.

41 And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, Talitha-cumi; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, (I say unto thee,) arise.

42 And straightway the damsel arose, and walked; for she was of the age of twelve years. And they were astonished with a great astonishment.

43 And he charged them straitly that no man should know it; and commanded that something should be given her to eat.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Christ is contemned of his countrymen. 45 He walketh on the sea.

AND he went out from thence, and came into his own country; and his disciples follow him.

2 And when the sabbath-day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue; and many hearing him were astonished, saying, From whence hath this man these things? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands?

3 Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, her faith so was it to her. With respect to the virtue which had gone out of him, and his remarks concerning it, the words were employed for the benefit of the bystanders. He knew right well what had been done, and who had been benefited. The act was his own as directly as in the case of any other of the multitudes he healed. There is one noticeable difference between the Saviour's cures and those of his Apostles: no power or virtue went out of them for healing purposes; on the contrary, they ascribed their cures directly and exclusively to the Lord Jesus.

Chap. VI. 1-6. It reflects but little credit on human nature, that a prophet has no honour in his own country, among his own kin, and in his own house. It ought to be the reverse; there, if anywhere, candour should be and of Judas, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at him.

4 But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house.

5 And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them.

6 And he marvelled because of their unbelief. And he went round about the villages, teaching.

7 ¶ And he called unto him the twelve, and began to send them forth by two and two; and gave them power over unclean spirits;

8 And commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only; no scrip, no bread, no money in their purse:

9 But be shod with sandals; and not put on two coats.

10 And he said unto them, In what place soever ye enter into an house, there abide till ye depart from that place.

11 And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for that city.

12 And they went out, and preached that men should repent.

13 And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

14 ¶ And king Herod heard of him; (for his name was spread abroad;) and he said, That John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him.

15 Others said, That it is Elias. And others said, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.

16 But when Herod heard thereof, he said, It is John, whom I beheaded: he is risen from the dead.

17 For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife; for he had married her.

18 For John had said unto Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife.

exercised and kindness shewn. It is still too much the habit of people to reserve their good words and good offices for strangers, magnifying their virtues, and furthering their interests, even to the neglect of their own flesh and blood. Ver. 7-13. It required some faith on the part of the disciples to go forth without scrip, bread, or money; but the result shewed them that their Master had been before them, opening up their way, and preparing friends to receive them. He who could give the commission, and along with that the power, to cast out devils, and to heal the sick, required no other passport. Such works would multiply friends, and procure comfort in abundance. Ver. 14-29. Herod, notwithstanding his wickedness, was not wholly without a conscience, which smote him for the murder of John; he believed in the resurrection of the dead. The language

19 Therefore ^aHerodias had ^aa quarrel against him, and would have killed him; but she could not:

20 For Herod ^afeared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and ^aobserved him; and when he heard him, he did many things, ^aand heard him gladly.

21 And when a convenient day was come, that Herod, on ^ahis birth-day, made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee;

22 And when ^athe daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod, and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee.

23 And he sware unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom.

24 And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, ^aThe head of John the Baptist.

25 And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me, by and by in a charger, the head of John the Baptist.

26 And the king ^awas exceeding sorry; yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her.

27 And immediately ^bthe king sent ^aan executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the prison, 28 And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother.

29 And when his disciples heard of it, ^athey came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

30 ¶ And ^athe apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, ^aboth what they had done, and what they had taught.

31 And he said unto them, ^aCome ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.

32 And they departed into a desert place by ship privately.

33 And the people saw them departing, and many ^aknew him, and ran a-foot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him.

34 ¶ And Jesus, when he came out, ^asaw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, ^abecause they were as sheep not having a shepherd: ^aand he began to teach them many things.

35 And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed;

36 Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat.

37 He answered and said unto them, ^aGive ye them to eat. And they say unto him, ^aShall we go and buy two hundred ^apennyworth of bread, and give them to eat?

38 He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see. And when they knew, they say, ^aFive, and two fishes.

39 And he commanded them to make all sit down by companies upon the green grass.

40 And they sat down in ranks, ^aby hundreds, and by fifties.

of ver. 20 is peculiarly remarkable. The king, with all his power, "feared John," though helpless and friendless, "knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and observed him." Goodness is power: that "virtue is awful," was a maxim of heathen wisdom. Ver. 30-33. The apostles lost no time in giving an account of their mission, which they seem to have executed with diligence and fidelity. Their compassionate Master immediately withdrew with them into solitude, for the purpose of rest and of conference. Ver 34-46. The matter presented in these verses exemplifies the importance of order. It had been all but impracticable to have dealt with such a multitude in their aggregate capacity; but, placed in companies, they were served with ease, certainty, and regularity. Order and system are alike necessary in things civil and things sacred. Ver. 47-56. Here our Lord appears in a new aspect, remarkably suited to impress his disciples with his true character, and to confirm their faith in his power and mission. It comes out here that the miracle of the loaves had been thrown away upon the disciples. Their hearts were still hardened. No amount of miracle will soften the stone which lies in the human breast. Divine grace alone can open the way for divine truth. Again the work of healing began; and on this occasion Christ put forth his wondrous power to the utmost. None of the multitude that came, or were brought by their friends, returned without the coveted blessing. Throughout villages, cities, and country, the display of misery on the one hand, and of mercy on the other, was wonderful. These facts supply a most cheering illustration of the power of the Gospel, and the benevolence of its Author, who will

50 (For they all saw him, and were troubled:) and immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, Be of good cheer: ^bit is I; be not afraid.

51 And he went up unto them into the ship; ^cand the wind ceased: ^dand they were sore amazed in themselves beyond measure, and wondered.

52 For ^ethey considered not the miracle of the loaves: for ^ftheir heart was hardened.

53 ¶ And when they had passed over, they came into ^gthe land of Gennesaret, and drew to the shore.

54 And when they were come out of the ship, straightway they ^hknew him, 55 And ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was.

56 And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, ⁱthey laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might touch if it were but ^kthe border of his garment: and as many as touched ^lhim were made whole.

CHAPTER VII.

1 The Pharisees find fault with the disciples for eating with unwashen hands. 14 Meat defileth not a man.

THEN came together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem.

2 And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with ¹defiled (that is to say, with unwashen) hands, they found fault.

3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash ²their hands ³oft, eat not, holding ⁴the tradition of the elders.

4 And when they come from the market, ⁵except they wash, they eat not. And many other things there be which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and ⁶pots, brassen vessels, and of ⁷tables.

5 Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands?

6 He answered and said unto them, ⁸Well hath Esaias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people ⁹honoureth me with ¹⁰their lips, but their heart is far from me.

7 Howbeit, in vain do they worship me, teaching ¹¹for doctrines the ¹²commandments of men.

8 For, laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.

9 And he said unto them, ¹Full well ye ²reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition.

10 For Moses said, ³Honour thy father and thy mother; and, ⁴Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death:

11 But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free.

12 And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother;

13 Making ⁵the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye.

14 ¶ And when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand:

15 There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: ⁶but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man.

16 If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

17 And when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable.

18 And he saith unto them, ⁷Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, ⁸it cannot defile him;

19 Because ⁹it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats!

20 And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man.

21 For from within, ¹⁰out of the heart of men, proceed ¹¹evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders,

22 Thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, ¹²An evil eye, blasphemy, ¹³pride, ¹⁴foolishness:

24 ¶ And from thence he arose, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and entered into an house, ¹⁶and would have no man know ¹⁷it: but he could not be hid.

Chap. VII. 1-13. The Pharisees, as men, were not without their good points: they were remarkable for cleanliness. But while much busied in the application of water to cups, pots, vessels, and tables, they were careless about their own hearts. Like whitened sepulchres, all was beautiful without, but within were dead men's bones and all uncleanness. Ver. 14-23. Our Lord is here careful to shew that no moral defilement can be derived from external objects; that it is from the heart that evil thoughts and affections proceed; and that therefore the primary consideration in the matter of morality relates to the heart. That right, the walk and conversation will never be far wrong. Ver. 24-30. The case of this woman has in every age been celebrated, as presenting a beautiful instance of parental impetuosity. While the subject of strong faith, she acquitted herself with admirable propriety, and received from the Lord of all an answer to her prayer as a token of special approbation. Ver. 31-37. The blessing bestowed here was duly appreciated; and the gratitude was such, that the recipient of the benefaction could not be silent.

27 But Jesus said unto her, "Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs.

28 And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: "yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs.

29 And he said unto her, For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter.

30 And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

31 ¶ And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of ^bDecapolis.

32 And they ^cbring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech; and they beseech him to put his hand upon him.

33 And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue;

34 And, ^dlooking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, ^eEphphatha, that is, ^fBe opened.

35 And ^gstraightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.

36 And he charged them that they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it;

37 And were beyond measure astonished, saying, He hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Christ feedeth the people miraculously. 10 He refuseth to give a sign to the Pharisees.

IN those days the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them,

2 I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat;

3 And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, ^hthey will faint by the way: for divers of them came from far.

4 And his disciples answered him, ⁱFrom whence can a man satisfy these ^jseen with bread here in the wilderness?

5 And he asked them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven.

21 And he said unto them, How is it that ye do not understand?

22 ¶ And he cometh to Bethsaida; and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him.

23 And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his

Others joined him in glorifying his Benefactor. They resolved that the deed should not be done in a corner, for, notwithstanding their gratitude and admiration, the more they were urged to conceal, the more they made it known. The result of this was highly satisfactory. The people, with laudable candour, united to celebrate the excellence of the Lord's working, by declaring, "He hath done all things well."

Chap. VIII. 1-21. It is impossible for us to form any adequate conception of the interest excited by the Lord Jesus in the days of his flesh. The idea of a vast multitude, gathered together from all parts of the country, remaining with him three days and nights without provisions, suggests the intensity of their eagerness to listen to his wonderful words. They seem to have been so excited, that the necessities of nature in a great measure ceased to be felt. The leaven of Herod would appear to have been that of the Sadducees, as it is rendered in Matthew. If a man is known by his company, this association speaks but little for the spirit and character of the ruler. Herod exemplified the Scripture, "The wicked walk on every side, when the vilest of men are exalted." Ver. 22-38. Things now began to assume a hands upon him, he asked him if he saw ought?

24 And he looked up, and said, 'I see men as trees, walking.

25 After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up; and he was restored, and saw every man clearly.

26 And he sent him away to his house, saying, Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

27 ¶ And Jesus went out and his disciples into the towns of Cesarea Philippi: and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am?

28 And they answered, John the Baptist: but some say, Elias; and others, One of the prophets.

29 And he saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Peter answereth and saith unto him, 'Thou art the Christ.

30 And he charged them that they should tell no man of him.

31 ¶ And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.

32 And he spake that saying openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him.

33 But when he had turned about and looked on his disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, 'Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men.

34 ¶ And when he had called the people unto him, with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

35 For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it.

36 For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?

37 Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

38 Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he

CHAPTER IX.

1 Jesus transfigured. 30 He foretold his death and resurrection; 33 and giveth diverse instructions to his disciples.

AND he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.

2 ¶ And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves: and he was transfigured before them.

3 And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them.

4 And there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus.

5 And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

6 For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid.

7 And there was a cloud that overshadowed them: and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, 'This is my beloved Son: hear him.

8 And suddenly, when they had looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead.

10 And they kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another what the rising from the dead should mean.

11 ¶ And they asked him, saying, Why say the scribes that Elias must first come?

12 And he answered and told them, Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all things; and how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be set at nought.

13 But I say unto you, That Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.

serious aspect; the Saviour could no longer conceal from his disciples the events which were fast approaching, and hence, with great tenderness, by hints and more enlarged communications, he prepared them for the hour of trial. He had a most perfect conception of the work which the Father had given him to do. He travelled, so to speak, with the prophecies in his hand, carefully noting the fulfilment of point after point, which inspired men had written concerning him. Death, therefore, did not take him unawares: he witnessed its gradual approach, and stood prepared for the awful moment when his soul should be made an offering for sin! The example supplies a lesson which should not be lost upon his people. They who remember their latter end, and often think upon it, are in the way of being best prepared to bow their heads, and to give up their spirits into the hands of their heavenly Father.

Chap. IX. 1-30. These paragraphs have been already considered in the Notes on Matthew. It is, however, proper to notice, that the disciples were perplexed about the import of rising from the dead. The doctrine of the resurrection was still a thing of mystery, very imperfectly comprehended by the Jews. Ver. 31-50. Ver. 49 has given occasion to considerable discussion, and the variety of opinions which have obtained concerning it, shews how men of equal learning and piety may differ in judgment. The differences in some respects, however, as usual, are without distinction, consisting of words rather than ideas. In expounding Scripture, it is always proper to attend to the context, which, in the present 14 ¶ And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them.

15 And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and, running to him, saluted him.

16 And he asked the scribes, What question ye¹ with them?

17 And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, I have brought unto thee my son, which hath² a dumb spirit;

18 And whosoever he taketh him, he² teareth him; and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and they could not.

19 He answereth him, and saith, 'O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? Bring him unto me.

20 And they brought him unto him: and when he saw him, straightway the spirit tare him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed, foaming.

21 And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child.

22 And oft-times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us.

23 Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

24 And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.

25 When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him.

26 And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him: and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead.

27 But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose.

28 And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out?

29 And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting.

30 ¶ And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee; and he would not that any man should know it.

31 For he taught his disciples, and said unto them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day.

32 But they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him.

33 ¶ And he came to Capernaum: and, being in the house, he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

34 But they held their peace: for by the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest.

35 And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all.

36 And he took a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them, 37 Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.

38 ¶ And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and we forbade him, because he followeth not us.

39 But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me.

40 For he that is not against us is on our part.

41 For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward.

42 And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it is better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea.

43 And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched;

44 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

45 And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched;

46 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

47 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell-fire;

48 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

instance, will be of use in determining the question. As all sacrifices under the law, in being prepared for the fire, were salted, so the sacrifice of a right hand, foot, or eye—anything that principle might require—was necessary, that the service offered might be acceptable to God. It is not the offering, but the motive, that determines its value, and hence integrity is that which salts whatever we present to God. Let repentance be sincere, faith cordial, producing love and service, and the living sacrifice thus presented, as salted with salt, will, without fail, be accepted. Salt has been viewed as signifying the doctrine of grace and the Word of the Lord, propriety

Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

CHAPTER X.

2 Touching divorce. 13 Little children brought to Christ. 23 The danger of riches.

AND he arose from thence, and cometh into the coasts of Judea by the farther side of Jordan: and the people resort unto him again; and, as he was wont, he taught them again.

2 ¶ And the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, "Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him.

3 And he answered and said unto them, "What did Moses command you?

4 And they said, Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away.

5 And Jesus answered and said unto them, For the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept:

6 But from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female.

7 For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife;

8 And they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh.

9 What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

10 And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter.

11 And he saith unto them, "Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her.

12 And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

13 ¶ And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them; and his disciples rebuked those that brought them.

14 But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

15 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.

16 And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

17 ¶ And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?

18 And Jesus said unto him, "Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God.

19 Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and mother.

20 And he answered and said unto him, Master, all these have I observed from my youth.

21 Then Jesus, beholding him, loved him, and said unto him, "One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up the cross, and follow me.

22 And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved: for he had great possessions.

23 ¶ And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

24 And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God!

25 It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they were astonished out of measure, saying among themselves, "Who then can be saved?

27 And Jesus, looking upon them, saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible.

28 ¶ Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee.

29 And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's.

30 But he shall receive an hundred-fold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life.

31 But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

32 ¶ And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them: and they were amazed; and as they followed, they were afraid. And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him,

33 Saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn him of speech, conversion, holiness of heart and life, and these, doubtless, are connected with it, although they do not constitute it.

Chap. X. 1-27. Marriage, from the first, has been a Divine institution—the source of unutterable good to man. It was originally intended to further human happiness, and wherever it fails to do so, the blame rests with the individuals. It is either the most happy or the most miserable state of existence. Ver. 28. 52. In ver.

45, the Saviour is very explicit touching the ransom his life was to constitute. By that only could the sins of men be expiated, and the "law magnified and made honourable." No error is so fatal as that which views the death of the Lord Jesus, not as an atonement, but a mere example of patience, obedience, and love. To separate his sacrifice from the Divine law, is to contradict the direct intimations of Scripture, and to mock the expectations of men. The example of Bartimeus will remain to the end of the world an encouragement to to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles:

34 And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him; and the third day he shall rise again.

35 ¶ And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire.

36 And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you?

37 They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory.

38 But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?

39 And they say unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized:

40 But to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared.

41 And when the ten heard it, they began to be much displeased with James and John.

42 But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them.

43 But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister:

44 And whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all.

45 For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

46 ¶ And they came to Jericho: and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples, and a great number of people, blind Bartimeus, the son of Timeus, sat by the highway-side begging.

47 And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

48 And many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

49 And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called. And they call the blind man, saying unto him, Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee.

50 And he, casting away his garment, rose, and came to Jesus.

51 And Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight.

52 And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Christ rideth with triumph into Jerusalem. 12 He curseth the fruitless fig-tree.

AND when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,

2 And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him.

3 And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

4 And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met; and they loose him.

5 And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt?

6 And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

7 And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him.

8 And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

10 Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.

11 And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the even-tide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

12 ¶ And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry:

13 And seeing a fig-tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to persevering importunate supplication. Christians have not, because they ask not, or because they ask amiss. Let them, therefore, ask in faith, nothing doubting, and no good thing will be withheld from them.

Chap. XI. 1-33. The subject of the popular rejoicing here referred to has already occurred, and been commented on. The barren fig-tree, viewed as symbolical of the mere formality of the Jewish Church, is fraught with wisdom. Where no fruits are borne, the tree, no longer answering its purpose, is only fit to be hewn down; it cumbereth the ground, occupying the place of something better. But the principle which applied to the Jewish people, applies to every one of the people of God under the New Testament dispensation. They, in their particular spheres, are all trees of righteousness of the Lord's right hand planting; and he is glorified in proportion to the quantity of good fruit they severally it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet.

14 And Jesus answered and said unto it, ^bNo man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.

15 ¶ And they come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

16 And would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.

17 And he taught, saying unto them, Is it not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves.

18 And the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy him: for they feared him, because all the people was astonished at his doctrine.

19 And when even was come, he went out of the city.

20 ¶ And in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots.

21 And Peter, calling to remembrance, saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig-tree which thou cursedst is withered away.

22 And Jesus answering, saith unto them, Have faith in God.

23 For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith.

24 Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.

25 And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any; that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses.

26 But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.

27 ¶ And they come again to Jerusalem; and as he was walking in the temple, there come to him the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders.

28 And say unto him, By what authority doest thou these things? and who 30 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? answer me.

31 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then did ye not believe him?

32 But if we shall say, Of men; they feared the people: for all men counted John, that he was a prophet indeed.

33 And they answered and said unto Jesus, We cannot tell. And Jesus answering, saith unto them, Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The parable of the vineyard. 13 Touching the payment of tribute, 18 and the resurrection. 41 The widow and her two mites.

AND he began to speak unto them by parables. A certain man planted a vineyard, and set an hedge about it, and digged a place for the wine fat, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country.

2 And at the season he sent to the husbandmen a servant, that he might receive from the husbandmen of the fruit of the vineyard.

3 And they caught him, and beat him, and sent him away empty.

4 And again he sent unto them another servant; and at him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and sent him away shamefully handled.

5 And again he sent another; and him they killed, and many others; beating some, and killing some.

6 Having yet therefore some son, his well-beloved, he sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son.

7 But those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours.

8 And they took him, and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard.

9 What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do? He will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others.

10 And have ye not read this scripture, bear. According to the degree in which this is realised, the truth of the Gospel is vindicated, and the mercy of the Lord has answered its purpose. It was the object of him who bought them with his blood, that they should become a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

Chap. XII. 1-27. From these verses it clearly appears that the doctrine of the resurrection was not wholly unknown, however inoperative it might be from want of faith in the great truth. The Saviour's words, so aptly quoting the testimony of Moses, were calculated to settle the question, and to bring it home to the judgment and the consciences of his hearers. Ver. 28-44.

It is no marvel if the Pharisees hated the Lord Jesus, for his so clearly revealing their true character, and exposing them before the multitude in the market-place. They were ambitious of honour, not from God, but from their fellow-creatures, and they had their reward. The Treasury was the place where the chests stood that contained the sacred money. According to the testimony borne, there were thirteen of them—six for voluntary contributions and free-will offerings, and the rest for other objects. They stood in the second court of the temple, having inscriptions intimating the use to which the offerings were applied. The aspect of the thing would seem to have borne somewhat of a resemblance ^aThe stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner :

11 This ^cwas the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes?

12 And they sought to lay hold on him, but feared the people : for they knew that he had spoken the parable against them : and they left him, and went their way.

13 ¶ And they send unto him certain of the Pharisees and of the Herodians, to catch him in his words.

14 And when they were come, they say unto him, Master, 'we know that thou art true, and carest for no man; for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth: Is it lawful to give tribute to Cesar, or not?

15 Shall we give, or shall we not give? But he, knowing their hypocrisy, said unto them, Why tempt ye me? Bring me ¹a penny, that I may see it.

16 And they brought it. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? And they said unto him, Cesar's.

17 And Jesus answering, said unto them, 'Render to Cesar the things that are Cesar's, ²and to God the things that are God's. And they marvelled at him.

18 ¶ Then come unto him the Sadducees, which ¹say there is no resurrection; and they asked him, saying, 19 Master, Moses wrote unto us, ²'If a man's brother die, and leave his wife *be-*hind him, and leave no children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

20 Now ¹there were seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and dying left no seed.

21 And the second took her, and died, neither left he any seed: and the third likewise.

22 And the seven had her, and left no seed: last of all the woman died also.

23 In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of them? for the seven had her to wife.

24 And Jesus answering, said unto them, ²'Do ye not therefore err, ³'because ye know not the scriptures, ⁴'neither the power of God?

25 For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; ⁵'but are as the angels which are in heaven.

26 And as touching the dead, that they rise; have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, ⁶'I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?

27 He ⁷'is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living: ye therefore do greatly err.

28 ¶ And one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all?

29 And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord:

30 And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment.

31 And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these.

32 And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: ⁸'for there is one God; and there is none other but he:

33 And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, is more than all whole burnt-offerings and sacrifices.

34 And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, ⁹'Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. ¹⁰'And no man after that durst ask him any question.

35 ¶ And Jesus answered and said, while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes that Christ is the son of David?

36 For David himself said ¹¹'by the Holy Ghost, ¹²'The LORD said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

37 David therefore himself calleth him Lord; and whence is he then his son? And the common people heard him gladly.

38 ¶ And he said unto them in his doctrine, ¹³'Beware of the scribes, ¹⁴'which love to go in long clothing, and love salutations in the market-places,

39 And ¹⁵'the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts;

40 Which devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayers: these shall receive greater damnation.

41 ¶ And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast ¹⁶money into the treasury: and many that were rich cast in much.

42 And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two ¹⁷mites, which make a farthing.

43 And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more to the boxes in our great Post-Offices. The rich men appear to have given largely, if not in proportion to their means. This is the more gratifying, since they are under the temptation to compare their gifts with those of their poorer neighbours, rather than with their own ample fortunes. It is proper, however, that men should view the matter as God does. His eye institutes no comparison other than that of the ability with which he has entrusted them. Of those to whom much is given, much will be required. The poor widow, by her gift, has been celebrated to the end of the world. She little thought whose Eye was upon her when she cast in her in than all they which have cast into the treasury :

44 For all they did ^ccast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even ^dall her living.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 The destruction of the temple. 9 Persecutions for the gospel. 14 Great calamities to the Jews. 24 Of Christ's coming to judgment; 32 the hour of it uncertain.

AND as he went out of the temple, one of his disciples saith unto him, Master, see what manner of stones and what buildings are here!

2 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? ^athere shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, over against the temple, Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, asked him privately, 4 Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled?

5 And Jesus answering them, began to say, ^bTake heed lest any man deceive you:

6 For ^cmany shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; ^dand shall deceive many.

7 And ^ewhen ye shall hear of wars, and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for such things ^fmust needs be; but the end shall not be yet.

8 For ^gnation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: ^hthese are the beginnings of ⁱsorrows.

9 But take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten: and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, ^jfor a testimony against them.

10 And the gospel must first be published among all nations.

11 But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, ^ktake no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatsoever ^lshall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, ^mbut the Holy Ghost.

12 Now ⁿthe brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son; and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death.

13 And ^oye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: ^pbut he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 ¶ But when ye shall see ^qthe abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing where it ought not, (let him that readeth understand,) ^rthen let them that be in Judea flee to the mountains:

15 And let him that is on the house-top not go down into the house, neither enter therein, to take any thing out of his house:

16 And let him that is in the field not turn back again for to take up his garment.

17 But woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days!

18 And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter.

19 For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation, which God created, unto this time, neither shall be.

20 And except that the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved: but ^sfor the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened the days.

21 And then, ^tif any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or, lo, he is there; believe him not:

22 For false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, ^uif it were possible, even the elect.

23 But ^vtake ye heed: ^wbehold, I have foretold you all things.

24 ¶ But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light,

25 And the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken.

26 And then shall they see ^xthe Son of man coming in the clouds, with great power and glory.

27 And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together ^yhis elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven.

28 Now ^zlearn a parable of the fig-tree; When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near:

29 So ye, in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors.

30 Verily I say unto you, ^{aa}That this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done.

mites. While her means were small, her heart was large; and the motive by which her deed was prompted was graciously approved. In public contribution, it is admonitory to the rich, and encouraging to the poor, to remember that the eyes of the Lord God witness their proceedings, and mark the motives which accompany them.

Chap. XIII. 1-37. The havoc and desolation predicted in this chapter have been realised to the full. The facts are fixed in the page of history by the hand of heathen historians, and from that page modern infidelity can never erase them. In the record of the past there is nothing more terrible; but it is a thing of nought compared with analogous events, which are still to come, when the history of our world shall have been completed, and all that have been shall be summoned into life to receive according to the deeds done in the body, and when this sublunary habitation shall be burned up! In those days, cautions were given to the faithful, relative to the coming danger. With respect to the future, men are alike informed. Everything is set forth in a manner the most clear and intelligible. He who desires to escape the wrath to come, need not 31 ^aHeaven and earth shall pass away: ^bbut my words shall not pass away.

32 ¶ But of that day, and that hour, knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, ^cneither the Son, but the Father.

33 Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is.

34 For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch.

35 ^dWatch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning;

36 Lest, coming suddenly, ^ehe find you sleeping.

37 And what I say unto you, ^fI say unto all, Watch.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 A conspiracy against Christ. 3 A woman poureth ointment on his head. 10 Judas selleth, 43 and betrayeth him. 66 Peter thrice denieth him.

AFTER two days was the feast of ^gthe passover, and of unleavened bread: and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death.

2 But they said, ^hNot on the feast-day, ⁱlest there be an uproar of the people.

3 ¶ And being in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster-box of ointment of ^jspikenard, very precious; and she brake the box, and poured it on his head.

4 And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?

5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred ^kpence, and have been given to the poor. ^lAnd they murmured against her.

6 And Jesus said, ^mLet her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.

7 For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: ⁿbut me ye have not always.

8 She ^ohath done what she could: she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.

9 Verily I say unto you, ^pWhosoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, ^qthis also that she hath done shall be spoken of for ^ra memorial of her.

10 ¶ And ^sJudas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests, to betray him unto them.

11 And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to give him money.

And ^lhe sought how he might conveniently betray him.

12 ¶ And the first day of unleavened bread, when they ^mkilled the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare, that thou mayest eat the passover?

13 And he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him.

14 And whosoever he shall go in, say ye to the goodman of the house, ⁿThe Master saith, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

15 And ^ohe will shew you a large ^pupper room furnished and prepared: there make ready for us.

16 And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

17 And in the evening he cometh with the twelve.

18 And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, ^qOne of you which eateth with me shall betray me.

19 And they began to be sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, ^rIs it I? and another said, ^sIs it I?

20 And he answered and said unto them, ^tIt is one of the twelve, that dippeth with me in the dish.

21 The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him; ^ubut woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! ^vgood were it for that man if he had never been born.

22 ¶ And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat: ^wthis is my body.

23 And he took the cup, and ^xwhen he had given thanks, he gave it to them: ^yand they all drank of it.

24 And he said unto them, ^zThis is my blood of the new testament, ^{aa}which is shed for many.

25 Verily I say unto you, ^{ab}I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it ^{ac}new in the kingdom of God.

26 ¶ And when they had sung an ^{ad}hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

27 And Jesus saith unto them, ^{ae}All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the Shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered.

28 But ^{af}after that I am risen, I will go before you into Galilee.

29 But Peter said unto him, ^{ag}Although all shall be offended, yet ^{ah}will not I.

mistake the way. Let him repent of his transgressions, and receive the record which God hath given concerning his Son, and in that tremendous day he shall have boldness, for he will stand complete in the Lord Jesus Christ, and secure from condemnation.

Chap. XIV. 1-42. The last Supper is the most solemn event in connexion with the Passover that ever occurred in our world. The Saviour and the traitor partaking of the same meal, presents an image of the most affecting character. The hand that dipped with the Lord in say unto thee, That this day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.

31 But he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise. ^aLikewise also said they all.

32 ¶ And ^athey came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I shall pray.

33 And he taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy;

34 And saith unto them, ^aMy soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and watch.

35 And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.

36 And he said, ^aAbba, Father, ^aall things are possible unto thee; ^atake away this cup from me: ^anevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37 And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? ^acouldst not thou watch one hour?

38 ^aWatch ye, and pray, lest ye enter into temptation: ^athe spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak.

39 And again ^ahe went away, and prayed, and spake the same words.

40 And when he returned, he found them asleep again; (for their eyes were heavy;) ^aneither wist they what to answer him.

41 And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, ^aSleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, ^athe hour is come; behold, ^athe Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

42 Rise up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

43 ¶ And immediately, ^awhile he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, ^aand with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders.

44 And he that betrayed him had given them ^aa token, saying, ^bWhomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; take him, ^aand lead him away safely.

45 And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, ^aMaster, Master; and kissed him.

46 And ^athey laid their hands on him, and took him.

47 And one of them that stood by drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his ear.

48 And Jesus answered and said unto them, ^aAre ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and with staves to take me?

49 I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and ye took me not: ^abut the scriptures must be fulfilled.

50 And ^athey all forsook him, and fled.

51 And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; and the young men laid hold on him:

52 And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked.

53 ¶ And ^athey led Jesus away to the high priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests, and the elders, and the scribes.

54 And ^aPeter followed him afar off, even into the palace of the high priest: and he sat with the servants, and warmed himself at the fire.

55 And the chief priests and all the council ^asought for witness against Jesus, to put him to death; and found none.

56 For many bare false witness against him; but their witness agreed not together.

57 And there arose certain, ^aand bare false witness against him, saying, 58 We heard him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another ^amade without hands.

59 But ^aneither so did their witness agree together.

60 And the high priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

61 But ^ahe held his peace, and answered nothing. Again, the high priest asked him, and said unto him, ^aArt thou the Christ, ^athe Son of the Blessed?

62 And Jesus said, ^aI am: and ye shall see ^athe Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

63 Then the high priest ^arent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses?

64 Ye ^ahave heard the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death.

65 And ^asome began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to say unto him, Prophecy: and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

66 ¶ And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh ^aone of the maids of the high priest:

the dish was the same hand that received the price of blood! The term "Abba," translated "Father," is the first utterance of the new-born soul: it is the language of adoption. Ver. 48-72. The linen cloth referred to in ver. 51, is explained by the customs which prevail in Arabia and Palestine, where the poorer people have nothing but a blanket or sheet wrapped around the body. The term "nakedness," therefore, is to be understood comparatively; it implied the lighter portion of dress without the upper garment. The cruel incidents set forth in ver. 65, shew of what human nature is capable. They treated the Son of God in our nature much as they would a condemned criminal, whose head was covered with a sack. On the present occasion, it would seem as if only a handkerchief or bandage was placed over the eyes; but the treatment, as connected with a pretended dispensation of justice, was inhuman in the highest degree. When Christians suffer wrongfully, and when insult is added to injury, it may encourage patience to remember the treatment of the 67 And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with ^aJesus of Nazareth.

68 But ^bhe denied, saying, I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest. And he went out into the porch; ^cand the cock crew.

69 And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is ^done of them.

70 And he denied it again. And a little after, they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art ^eone of them: ^ffor thou art a Galilean, and thy speech agreeth ^gthereto.

71 But ^hhe began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak.

72 And ⁱthe second time the cock crew. And ^jPeter called to mind the word that Jesus said unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. ^kAnd ^lwhen he thought thereon, he wept.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Jesus, brought bound and accused before Pilate, is delivered to be crucified, 27 hangeth between two thieves, 42 and is honourably buried.

AND straightway in the morning the chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes, and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried ^mhim away, ⁿand delivered ^ohim to Pilate.

2 And Pilate asked him, ^pArt thou the King of the Jews? And he, answering, said unto him, Thou sayest ^qit.

3 And the chief priests accused him of many things; but he answered nothing.

4 And Pilate asked him again, saying, ^rAnswerest thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against thee.

5 But Jesus yet answered nothing; so that Pilate marvelled.

6 ^s¶ Now at ^tthat feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired.

7 And ^uthere was ^vone named Barabbas, ^wwhich lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection.

8 And the multitude, crying aloud, began to desire ^xhim to do as he had ever done unto them.

9 But Pilate answered them, saying, ^yWill ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

10 For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him for envy.

11 But the chief priests moved the 12 And Pilate answered and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do ^uunto him ^vwhom ye call the King of the Jews?

13 And they cried out again, Crucify him.

14 Then Pilate said unto them, ^wWhy, what evil hath he done? ^xAnd they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.

15 And so Pilate, ^ywilling to content the people, released Barabbas unto them, and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged ^zhim, to be crucified.

16 ^a¶ And the soldiers led him away into the hall, called Pretorium; and they call together the whole band.

17 And ^bthey clothed him with purple, and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his ^chead, 27 And ^swith him they crucify two thieves; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left.

28 And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith, And he was numbered with the transgressors.

29 ^t¶ And they that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest ^uit in three days, 30 Save thyself, and come down from the cross.

Lamb of God, whose holiness was perfect, and whose life, from the commencement to the close of his public ministry, was crowded with miracles of mercy.

Chap. XV. 1-47. Barabbas has been not inaptly viewed as an emblem of those for whom the Saviour suffered: in his character he was a rebel against the government, he had committed a capital crime, and every way he deserved death. The Lord Jesus, while innocent, was seized; Barabbas, though guilty, was set at liberty. He was acquitted, and Jesus condemned.

So it is, that "he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows." The inscription on the Cross is entitled to special notice. It has been, without any very obvious reason, represented by some writers as an act of contempt on the part of Pilate. So far as the record goes, however, there is no levity connected with it. It seems rather an act to which he was prompted, perhaps, by a higher hand. The peremptory emphasis with which he maintained his course, when it was sought to correct him, shewed that, whether intelligently or not, he attached importance to the deed: "What I have written, 31 Likewise also the chief priests, mocking, said among themselves, with the scribes, ^bHe saved others; himself he cannot save.

32 Let ^cChrist the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. ^dAnd they that were crucified with him reviled him.

33 ¶ And when the sixth hour was come, there was ^edarkness over the whole land until the ninth hour.

34 And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, ^fEloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, ^gwhy hast thou forsaken me?

35 And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, Behold, ^hhe calleth Elias.

36 And one ran and filled a sponge full of vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink, saying, Let alone; let us see whether Elias will come to take him down.

37 And ⁱJesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost.

38 And ^jthe vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom.

39 ¶ And when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

40 There were also ^kwomen looking on afar off: among whom was ^lMary Magdalene, and ^mMary the mother of James the less and of ⁿJoses, ^oand ^pSalome;

41 (Who also, when he was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him; and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem.

42 ¶ And now, ^qwhen the even was come, (because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath,)

43 Joseph of Arimathea, an honourable counsellor, ^rwhich also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus.

44 And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and, calling ^sunto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead.

45 And when he knew ^tit of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

1 Christ's resurrection. 19 He appeareth to Mary Magdalene and others; 15 sendeth forth the apostles, 19 and ascendeth into heaven.

AND when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.

2 And ^yvery early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

3 And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?

4 And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away; for it was very great.

5 And ^zentering into the sepulchre, they saw ^aa young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted.

6 And he saith unto them, ^bBe not affrighted. ^cYe seek ^dJesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: ^ehe is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.

8 And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man, for they were afraid.

I have written." Notwithstanding that it mortified the pride of the chief priests and elders, it announced the great fact, that this very person who hung on the cross was the King of the Jews, and that they, both small and great, would in due season find themselves at his judgment-seat. That inscription, pointing to the throne, connected the cross with the crown. That his people may reign with him, they, when required, must be prepared cordially and boldly to suffer with him. Sharing his contempt, they will share his glory.

Chap. XVI. 1-20. These women of Galilee have done themselves immortal honour by their devoted adherence to their Lord and Master under every variety of condition. When he finished his course and gave up his spirit into the hands of his Father, they were present beholding his sorrows and mingling their sympathetic tears. They attended the body to its brief resting-place, and determined to do further honour by embalming it in a more costly and appropriate manner. The last rites of sepulture were necessarily performed in haste; the body was enrolled in nothing but a mixture of myrrh and aloes brought by the faithful Nicodemus, who did the best he could under the circumstances. Their zeal secured for them a distinguished and incomparable privilege. It will be matter of sweet and holy remembrance to these devoted saints throughout eternity, that they were the first to repair to the sepulchre and to announce his resurrection. While they were the most honoured of women, the angel who apprised them of the fact was the most honoured of the heavenly host. Is it improbable that they and he have adoringly conferred on the subject in Paradise? Among the facts of the Gospel, one of the most stupendous and glorious is that of the Resurrection. This fact has been attested in a manner which hardly admits of being strengthened. It is im-form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

13 And they went and told it unto the residue; neither believed they them.

14 ¶ Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

15 And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

16 He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST LUKE.

Luke, as a companion of Paul in his travels, enjoyed superior privileges, and obtained distinction among the Churches. Viewed as a whole, he is more copious than the other Evangelists, more especially concerning the priestly office of Christ. It may be inferred, from his mode of writing, that his Gospel was intended for the Gentiles, who required the explanations which are everywhere supplied. We have here discourses, miracles, and parables, which are not found in the other Evangelists, while there are some omissions of facts recorded in them. Luke refers largely to the Old Testament, pointing to predictions concerning Christ which have been actually fulfilled.

Abia: and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elisabeth.

6 And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless.

7 And they had no child, because that Elisabeth was barren; and they both were now well stricken in years.

8 And it came to pass, that, while he executed the priest's office before God in the order of his course, 9 According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord.

10 And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the time of incense.

11 And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord standing on the right side of the altar of incense.

possible to conceive of evidence more commanding, harmonious, and every way satisfactory. Although believers have not seen the grave itself, yet they have all the evidence of which the case admits, that in very deed the Lord Jesus rose according to his own promise and the testimony of the prophets. His resurrection is the pledge of that of his people; it therefore behoves them to look for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the Great God and our Saviour, who shall change our vile bodies and fashion them like unto his glorious body. The commission here given to the disciples, to go and fill the world with his Gospel, was accompanied with a promise of a peculiar and appropriate character. These circumstances fully account for the marvellous success of the Gospel in primitive ages. The simple fact, that they went forth and preached, "The Lord working with them," explains everything, and solves all difficulties.

Chap. I. 1-25. Zacharias was chosen by lot to burn incense. The high priest did so, on special occasions, by right of succession, in the Holy of Holies, into which the common priesthood could not enter. Zacharias belonged to a course; the high priest was of no course, but acted as an individual. These several courses of Temple-service commenced on the Sabbath, and continued till the next Sabbath. The priests were divided into twenty-four classes, and Abia belonged to the eighth. A small bell intimated the entrance of the priest into the sanctuary to burn incense, when every one who heard it without offered up prayer in silence. It will thus be seen, that the practice which prevails in Roman Catholic worship is derived from the Temple-service. Angelic appearance, for a long period, was unknown in Judea. There had been neither prophecy nor angelic ministrations for four hundred years; the Messiah, however, was approaching, and appropriate precursors were employed to prepare his way. When the Lord is about to confer a blessing, he frequently excites in the breast of the 12 And when Zacharias saw him, he was troubled, and fear fell upon him.

13 But the angel said unto him, Fear not, Zacharias: for thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Elisabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John.

14 And thou shalt have joy and gladness; and many shall rejoice at his birth.

15 For he shall be ¹great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be ²filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb.

16 And ³many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God.

17 And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient ⁴to the wisdom of the just; ⁵to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

18 ¶ And Zacharias said unto the angel, Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years.

19 And the angel answering, said unto him, ¹I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to shew thee these glad tidings.

20 And, behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, ²because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season.

21 And the people waited for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple.

22 And when he came out, he could not speak unto them: and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple; for he beckoned unto them, and remained speechless.

23 And it came to pass, that, as soon as the days of his ministration were accomplished, he departed to his own house.

24 And after those days his wife Elisabeth conceived, and hid herself five months, saying, 25 Thus ¹hath the Lord dealt with me in the days wherein he looked on me, ²to take away my reproach among men.

26 ¶ And in the sixth month ³the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, 27 To ⁴a virgin espoused to a man, whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary.

28 And the angel came in unto her, and said, ¹Hail, thou that art ²highly favoured, ³the Lord is with thee: ⁴blessed art thou among women.

29 And when she saw him, ⁵she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind ⁶what manner of salutation this should be.

30 And the angel said unto her, ⁷Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favour with God.

31 And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, ⁸and shalt call his name JESUS.

32 He shall be great, and shall be called ⁹the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall ¹⁰give unto him the throne of his father David:

33 And he shall reign over ¹¹the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

34 Then said Mary unto the angel, ¹²How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?

35 And the angel answered and said unto her, ¹³The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also ¹⁴that holy thing, which shall be born of thee, shall be called ¹⁵the Son of God.

36 And, behold, thy cousin Elisabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren.

37 For ¹⁶with God nothing shall be impossible.

38 And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

39 ¶ And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill-country with haste, into a city of Juda;

40 And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth.

41 And it came to pass, that, when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb; and Elisabeth ¹⁷was filled with the Holy Ghost:

42 And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, ¹⁸Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

43 And whence is this to me, that the mother of ¹⁹my Lord should come to me?

44 For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

45 And blessed is she that ²⁰believed: for there shall be a performance of those recipient a desire of it. So it was in the case of Zacharias. The expression, "Thy prayer is heard," clearly intimates that the subject in question had been a matter of earnest supplication. The language of the angel concerning John was peculiarly fitted to excite great expectations: he was to go before the Lord in the spirit and power of Elias, distinguished by the same zeal and exalted purity. His office, too, was one of special moment. The "turning of the hearts of the fathers to the children," was a great work at once for the Church and for the nation, since whatever made for domestic unity and happiness, tended to promote both religion and social welfare. Ver. 28-56. The angel's second visit was more remarkable than the first; Mary's composure on receiving the intelligence was very remarkable. So far from being awed into speechlessness, she listened attentively, and inquired with modest intelligence concerning the matter communicated to her. The deportment of the angel was distinguished by dignity and tenderness. He gave her all needful explanation, adding, at the same time, the important fact which referred to the condition of Elisabeth. As if determined to test the matter, she forthwith made a visit to Elisabeth, when she found matters to be precisely as the angel had said. The language of Elisabeth is remarkable for its beauty, spirituality, love, and gratitude. The passage, properly things which were told her from the Lord.

46 ¶ And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord,

47 And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.

48 For he hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

49 For he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name.

50 And his mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation.

51 He hath shewed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

52 He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree.

53 He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away.

54 He hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy;

55 As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever.

56 And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

57 ¶ Now Elisabeth's full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son.

58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her.

59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.

60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.

61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.

63 And he asked for a writing-table, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marvelled all.

64 And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.

65 And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill-country of Judea.

68 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, 69 And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;

70 As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began;

71 That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;

72 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant,

73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,

74 That he would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, 75 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.

76 And thou, child, shalt be called the Prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;

77 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people, by the remission of their sins,

78 Through the tender mercy of our God; whereby the day-spring from on high hath visited us, 79 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

80 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel.

CHAPTER II.

1 Augustus taketh all the Roman empire. 6 Christ's nativity; 21 his circumcision. 28, 36 Simeon and Anna prophesy of Christ.

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

2 (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.)

understood, has in it a very striking evangelical bearing, exhibiting the overflowing grace of God to the helpless sons of men, and exposing the fatality of self-righteousness. The sojourn of Mary was a lengthened one, extending to three months. These two cousins, at that time, occupied an extraordinary and unparalleled position—the one destined to be the mother of the forerunner of the Lord, and the other of the Lord himself. Little did the great around them, who scarcely heeded their existence, conceive of the importance which attached to their persons and their condition. Ver. 57-80. It was customary among the Jews, when they circumcised a child, to give him his name, apparently from the fact, that when God circumcised Abram, the father of the faithful, he gave him a new name. The song of Zacharias, when his mouth was opened, corresponded with that of Mary; it was full of evangelical sentiment—a burst of Gospel truth. It clearly shews that salvation from our enemies is to be followed by the service of our Divine Deliverer in holiness and righteousness, and that salvation is connected with the remission of sins, and all that flows from the tender mercy of our God.

Chap. II. 1-27. Cesar Augustus became Emperor twenty-nine years previous to the birth of Christ, and died fourteen years after. He received his name, Cesar, from the great Julius Cesar by adoption. Those of the family subsequently bore the same designation, and afterwards the line of the Cesars to the close. It was customary to speak of the Roman Empire as “all the world,” since it was then the seat of the chief power on earth. The Saviour being born at the time of this

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

4 And ^bJoseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, (because he was of the house and lineage of David,)

5 To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

6 ¶ And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

7 And ^cshe brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 ¶ And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping ^dwatch over their flock by night.

9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, ^eand the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, ^fI bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be ^gto all people.

11 For ^hunto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, ⁱwhich is Christ the Lord.

12 And this ^jshall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

13 And suddenly there was with the angel ^ka multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 14 ^lGlory to God in the highest, ^mand on earth peace, ⁿgood will toward men.

15 And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the ^oshepherds said one to another, ^pLet us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

16 And they came with haste, and ^qfound Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

17 And when they had seen ^rit, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

18 And all they that heard ^sit wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

19 But Mary kept all these things, and pondered ^tthem in her heart.

20 And the shepherds returned, ^uglorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 ¶ And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, ^ahis name was called JESUS, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

22 And when ^bthe days of her purification, according to the law of Moses, were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present ^chim to the Lord;

23 (As it is written in the law of the Lord, ^dEvery male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;)

24 And to offer a sacrifice, according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons.

25 ¶ And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man ^ewas just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the ^fHoly Ghost was upon him.

26 And ^git was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen ^hthe Lord's Christ.

27 And he came ⁱby the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law,

28 Then took he him up in his arms, ^jand blessed God, and said,

29 Lord, ^know lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word:

30 For ^lmine eyes have seen thy salvation,

31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people;

32 A ^mlight to lighten the Gentiles, ⁿand the glory of thy people Israel.

33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.

34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this ^ochild is set for the fall ^pand rising again of many in Israel; and ^qfor a sign which shall be spoken against;

35 (Yea, ^ra sword shall pierce through thy own soul also,) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

36 ¶ And there was one Anna, ^sa prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of ^tAser: she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity;

37 And she ^uwas a widow of about four-enrolling, was probably himself registered, together with Joseph and Mary, as a subject of the Roman Empire; and if so, he was born in the form of a servant. Jesus is called "the first-born." The accommodation furnished to the mother of the child was the meanest possible, fully harmonising with the humility of his position. Ver. 23-52. The song of Simeon is remarkable for its piety, faith, and foresight. It had been revealed to him that he should not die till he had seen the Messiah; and having realised this exalted privilege, he inferred that the hour of his departure was come, and therefore he supplicated dismissal. By salvation, he means the Saviour, through whom it flowed to a lost world. The venerable saint clearly understood, through the Spirit, that Jesus would be rejected by the nation, who looked for a temporal Messiah, and that such rejection would prove its ruin. His address to Mary, in ver. 35, was deeply affecting, and required time to explain it; but when she stood by the Cross, and beheld her expiring Son, these words found therein a terrible illustration! The Lord Jesus, by his ministration, miracles, and death, would illuminate the thoughts, purposes, and spirit of many people in divers classes. While Simeon might be viewed as representing his own sex, Anna, with equal spirituality, represented hers. This eminent saint was one of a company of the faithful, who looked for redemp-score and four years, which departed not from the temple, ¹but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.

38 And she, coming in that instant, ¹gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that ²looked for redemption in ³Jerusalem.

39 ¶ And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth.

40 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom; and ¹the grace of God was upon him.

41 ¶ Now his parents ¹went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the pass-over.

42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom of the feast.

43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.

44 But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.

46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

47 And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.

48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.

49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about ²my Father's business?

50 And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

51 And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother ¹kept all these sayings in her heart.

52 And ¹Jesus increased in wisdom and ²stature, ³and in favour with God and man.

CHAPTER III.

1 John's preaching and baptism; 15 his testimony of Christ. 19 Herod imprisoneth John. 21 Christ is baptized; 23 his genealogy.

NOW, in the fifteenth year of the reign of ¹Tiberius Cesar, ²Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and ³Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and ⁴his brother Philip tetrarch of Iturea and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the tetrarch of Abilene,

2 ¹Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, ²the word of God came unto John, the son of Zacharias, in the wilderness.

3 And he came into all the country about Jordan, ¹preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins;

4 As it is written in the book of the words of Esaias the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, ¹Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

5 Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways ¹shall be made smooth;

6 And ¹all flesh shall see the salvation of God.

7 Then said he to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you ¹to flee from the wrath to come?

8 Bring forth therefore ¹fruits ²worthy of repentance; and begin not to say within yourselves, ³We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, That God is able ⁴of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

9 And ¹now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

10 And the people asked him, saying, What shall we do then?

11 He answereth and saith unto them, ¹He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise.

12 Then came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do?

13 And he said unto them, ¹Exact no more than that which is appointed you.

tion in Jerusalem; and, like Simeon, she too had a distinct intimation, the moment she beheld the promised Child, that he was the Holy One of Israel. The men went up to Jerusalem three times a-year, to the feasts of the Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles, but the women were not required to accompany them; Mary's visit, therefore, was voluntary. If the sight of the infant Saviour produced so much gratitude, love, and hope, what may not be expected to flow from the facts of his history as now presented to us in the New Testament Scriptures?

Chap. III. 1-38. This was the fifteenth year of Tiberius Cesar's principality, but only the thirteenth of his sole monarchy, as he had been joint Emperor with Augustus two years previous to his death. After the death of Herod the Great, the kingdom was divided into four parts or Tetrarchies, but distributed among three rulers, over one of which Herod Antipas reigned. The law of Moses provided for only one High Priest. Annas sustained the office for eleven years, and on being deposed by the Roman governor, Caiaphas, his son-in-law, took his place. It seems probable that the authority of Annas with the people continued after his deposition, which may explain the conjoint mention of his name with that of Caiaphas. It has been suggested that Annas was the High Priest, and Caiaphas his deputy; but the High Priest had no such assistance, and none was allowed to take his place, unless in the case of sickness or incapacity. The dispensation of John was one of preaching repentance, connected with the administration of baptism to all who professed to be sorry for their sins, and to desire mercy of the Lord, through the coming Saviour. John did not develop the doctrine of the Scriptures as to his person, character, and work, but he said enough to point public attention to his speedy advent, and the exalted character he would bear, as well as to the infinitely superior nature of his personal ministrations. A 14 And¹ the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do? And he said unto them, ²Do violence to no man, neither ³accuse any falsely; ⁴and be content with your ⁵wages.

15 ¶ And as the people were in ⁶expectation, and all men ⁷mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not;

16 John answered, saying unto them all, ⁸I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: ⁹he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, ¹⁰and with fire:

17 Whose ¹¹fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, ¹²and will gather the wheat into his garner; ¹³but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable.

18 And many other things, in his exhortation, preached he unto the people.

19 ¶ But Herod the tetrarch, being reprov'd by him for Herodias his brother Philip's wife, and for all the evils which Herod had done, 20 Added yet this above all, that he shut up John in prison.

21 ¶ Now, when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, ¹that Jesus also being baptized, ²and praying, ³the heaven was opened,

22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape, like a dove, upon him; and a voice came from heaven, which said, ⁴'Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.

23 ¶ And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli,

24 Which was the son of Matthat, which was the son of Levi, which was the son of Melchi, which was the son of Janna, which was the son of Joseph,

CHAPTER IV.

1 Christ's temptation and victory. 14 He beginneth to preach. 16 The people of Nazareth admire him. 33 He cureth divers sick.

AND ¹Jesus, being ²full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, ³and veil is drawn over the early history of our Lord, concerning whom only a few facts are revealed to us. The first thirty years, therefore, are comparatively a blank, which serves all the more to exalt the wonderful course which was to follow. The ministration of John, although the mere forerunner, was accompanied with a power which more or less agitated the whole country. We have no means of exactly ascertaining the extent of his success in the conversion of men, but that it was very great is indisputable. Whithersoever the Lord in his subsequent journeys went, he probably met with some who had heard the preaching of John, and who were, therefore, prepared for his coming. The long chain of generations which connects Adam with Jesus, comprised a countless multitude of immortal beings all depraved, with the depravity more or less developed, and presenting a mournful contrast to the first and second Adam, both of whom were sinless, shining in the beauties of holiness. This depravity is the basis of the doctrine of regeneration. A new kingdom is to be formed of subjects bearing the image both of the first Adam as he came from the hands of his God, and the second Adam, the Lord from heaven. Perfection is one: the respective images of both were identical. What a world had this been had all flesh continued to bear the image of Adam in his primal state! What knowledge, purity, love, devotion, beauty, felicity! How humbling, how appalling the contrast which our sin-stricken, diseased, wretched, revolted, dying race presents! But through Divine mercy, a world is yet to be, with a population of inconceivable millions, in which that glorious image shall be borne, and where all the attributes of perfection will be developed to the full. May every reader of these lines become the subject of it!

Chap. IV. 1-32. The service of the synagogue largely consisted in the reading of the Sacred Scriptures. The words of the Saviour were, of course, in harmony with was led by the Spirit into the wilderness.

2 Being forty days ⁴tempted of the devil. And in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

3 And the devil said unto him, "If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.

4 And Jesus answered him, saying, It is written, "That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

5 And the devil, ⁶taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

6 And the devil said unto him, "All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them, for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.

7 If thou therefore wilt ¹worship me, all shall be thine.

8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, "Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him ¹only shalt thou serve.

9 And he ^mbrought him to Jerusalem, and set him ⁿon a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence:

10 For it is written, "He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee;

13 And ^rwhen the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

14 ¶ And Jesus ^rreturned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.

15 And he taught in their synagogues, ¹being glorified of all.

16 ¶ And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and stood up for to read.

17 And there was delivered unto him ^rthe book of the prophet Esaias: and when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written,

18 The ^rSpirit of the Lord ^supon me, because he hath ^ranointed me ^sto preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me ^sto heal the broken-hearted, ^sto preach deliverance to the captives, ^sand recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, 19 ⁴To preach the acceptable year of the Lord.

20 And he closed the book, and he gave ^{it} again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him.

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

22 And all bare him witness, and wondered at the ^ogracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, "Is not this Joseph's son?"

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, "Physician, heal thyself: whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country.

24 And he said, Verily I say unto you, ^hNo prophet is accepted in his own country.

25 But I tell you of a truth, ¹many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, ^kwhen the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land;

26 But unto none of them was Elias sent, ¹save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman ^{that was} a widow.

27 And many lepers were in Israel in the time of ^mEliseus the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving ⁿNaaman the Syrian.

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath.

29 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the ²brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong.

30 But he, ^opassing through the midst of them, went his way, 31 And ^pcame down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and ^qtaught them on the sabbath-days.

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power.

33 ¶ And in the synagogue there was a man which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, 34 Saying, ^rLet us alone; ^rwhat have we to do with thee, ^{thou} Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; ^sthe Holy One of God.

35 And ^tJesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had ^uthrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not.

36 And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word the prophecy he had read concerning himself, which had been written upwards of 700 years previously. The Saviour's example in the regularity of his attendance on the instituted means of grace deserves the special notice of his people. The proverb, "Physician, heal thyself," is one of great point and force under ordinary circumstances. It was natural that the people should wish to partake of the benefits of the miraculous power which had been put forth elsewhere. But the cause lay in themselves. It redounded but little to the honour of human nature, that "no prophet should be accepted in his own country;" the fact, however, is undoubted. Envy possesses a power sufficient to blind the understanding and harden the heart. The statement that the miracles of Elijah and of Eliseus were performed, not on their fellow-countrymen, but on foreigners, filled them with wrath. A little while ago, they were all admiring at his "gracious words;" but now, nothing will is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out.

37 And the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about.

38 ¶ And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house: and Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her.

39 And he stood over her, and rebuked the fever; and it left her: and immediately she arose and ministered unto them.

40 ¶ Now, when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.

41 And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ, the Son of God. And he, rebuking them, suffered them not to speak: for they knew that he was Christ.

42 And when it was day, he departed, and went into a desert place; and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them.

43 And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent.

44 And he preached in the synagogues of Galilee.

CHAPTER V.

1 Christ teacheth out of Peter's ship. 4 A miraculous draught of fishes. 12 The leper cleansed. 18 The palsy healed. 27 Matthew called.

AND it came to pass, that, as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Genesaret,

2 And saw two ships standing by the lake: but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets.

3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

4 Now, when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

5 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and satisfy them but his destruction! Can anything more strikingly illustrate the instability and the worthlessness of popular applause? Human nature, as the fit happens to seize it, can either admire or execrate without cause. Nothing is so offensive to it as the mention of Divine sovereignty.

Chap. V. 1-26. The turn given in ver. 10 to the employment of Peter is very beautiful: "Henceforth thou shalt catch men!" The Gospel net is a striking emblem of the process of evangelical teaching, and is elsewhere adopted in illustration of that work. While in every age and country the common people have been foremost to attend to matters of religion, they have never, unless urged on by their superiors in position, persecuted its propagators. The persecutions of the Jews were prinhave taken nothing: nevertheless, at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes; and their net brake.

7 And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.

8 When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord.

9 For he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken:

10 And so was also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men.

11 And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed him.

12 ¶ And it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold a man full of leprosy; who, seeing Jesus, fell on his face, and besought him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

13 And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately the leprosy departed from him.

14 And he charged him to tell no man: but go, and shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing, according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

15 But so much the more went there a fame abroad of him: and great multitudes came together to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities.

16 ¶ And he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed.

17 And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem; and the power of the Lord was present to heal them.

18 ¶ And, behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.

19 And when they could not find by cipally promoted by the Scribes, Pharisees, and High Priests; while those of the Gentiles have sprung either from the Popish priesthood, or from the ministers of a spurious Protestantism. Missionaries, both home and foreign, teachers, preachers, and pastors, have often much to discourage them; but their duty is to rest upon principle, doing what they are commanded, and leaving the result to the Lord of the vineyard. If it comport with his pleasure, they will receive proof, in due season, that they have not spent their strength in vain and for nought. But should it be otherwise, let them rest assured that all is well. Many faithful and laborious men, who have had but little to cheer them in time, will meet with satisfactory fruits in eternity. The record of what has been done in other days by the Divine Spirit, through the preaching of the Word, has often what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the house-top, and let him down through the tiling, with his couch, into the midst before Jesus.

20 And when he saw their faith, he said unto him, 'Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.

21 And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? 'Who can forgive sins but God alone?

22 But when Jesus perceived their thoughts, he, answering, said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?

23 Whether is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?

24 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go unto thine house.

25 And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own house, glorifying God.

26 And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to-day.

27 ¶ And after these things he went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, 'Follow me.

28 And he left all, rose up, and followed him.

29 ¶ And Levi made him a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans, and of others, that sat down with them.

30 But their scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners?

31 And Jesus answering, said unto them, 'They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick.

32 I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

33 ¶ And they said unto him, Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink?

34 And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bride-chamber fast while the bridegroom is with them?

35 But the days will come, when the

CHAPTER VI.

1 Concerning the disciples plucking the ears of corn on the sabbath. 13 Christ chooseth the twelve, 17 healeth divers diseases, 20 and preachteth.

AND it came to pass on the second sabbath after the first, that he went through the corn-fields; and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.

2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath-days?

3 And Jesus, answering them, said, Have ye not read so much as this, what David did, when himself was an hungred, and they which were with him;

4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the shew-bread, and gave also to them that were with him; which it is not lawful to eat but for the priests alone?

5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

6 ¶ And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into the synagogue and taught: and there was a man whose right hand was withered.

7 And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath-day; that they might find an accusation against him.

8 But he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose, and stood forth.

9 Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing; Is it lawful on the sabbath-days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it?

10 And looking round about upon them been the means of confirming faith, and increasing piety. Intelligence, also, of what has been done in other places in our own day is often attended with the best effects. There is no reading more adapted to nourish piety and invigorate zeal than Missionary intelligence. Ver. 27-39. There is no fear of Christians, whose faith stands, not in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God, ever turning from the truth as it is in Jesus to the fanatical systems which occasionally prevail in different ages and countries, to the discredit of humanity. The true Gospel is its own witness; and wherever its power is experienced upon the heart, it makes short work with all arguments on behalf of superstition and infidelity. It knows in whom it has believed, and is proof against all the cunning of imposture. The Gospel makes its appeal alike to the understanding and the heart; and personal piety, of the highest order, requires the appropriate exercise both of the understanding and of the affections.

Chap. VI. 1-19. The first Sabbath was that which occurred on the second day of the feast of the Passover, the second Sabbath was the next, and the first of the seven that were to precede the feast of Pentecost. The crime of the rich was not the preserving of wealth, but trusting in it. Many of the wealthiest have been all, he said unto the man, ^bStretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

11 And they were filled with madness; and communed one with another what they might do to Jesus.

12 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God.

13 And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose ^atwelve, whom also he named ^aApostles;

14 Simon, (whom he also named Peter,) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15 ^mMatthew and ⁿThomas, ^oJames the son of ^pAlpheus, and ^qSimon called Zelotes, 16 And ^rJudas the brother of James, and ^sJudas Iscariot, which also was the traitor.

17 ¶ And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea-coast of Tyre and Sidon, ^twhich came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

19 And the whole multitude ^usought to touch him: ^vfor there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

20 ¶ And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, Blessed be ye poor: ^wfor yours is the kingdom of God.

21 Blessed are ye that hunger now: for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh.

22 Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, ^xfor the Son of man's sake.

23 Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy; for, behold, ^yyour reward is great in heaven: ^zfor in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

24 But woe unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation.

25 Woe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you! for ^{aa}so did their fathers to the false prophets.

amongst the holiest of mankind; but they have been free from covetousness, which is idolatry. To be "full" was to be satisfied with the things of the earth, setting light by those of heaven. Ver. 20-49. It is impossible that, as a rule, the wicked should speak well of the righteous. They have often done so of the benevolence, the liberality, and the humanity of godly men; and they have also testified generally to the worth and excellence of their characters; but the principles in which their virtues originated, and by which their characters were formed, were objects of their abhorrence. But it has often happened that even their excellencies and their good works have not sufficed to shelter them from slander, calumny, and murder! It requires wisdom and piety rightly to carry out the principle that "the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." The 27 ¶ But I say unto you which hear, ^dLove your enemies, ^edo good to them which hate you, 28 Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

29 And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek, offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak, forbid not to take thy coat also.

30 Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

31 And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

32 For ^fif ye love them which love you, ^gwhat thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them.

33 And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same.

34 And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again.

35 But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, ^hand ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.

36 Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

37 Judge not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven:

38 Give, and it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For ⁱwith the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again.

39 And he spake a parable unto them, Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch?

40 The disciple is not above his master: but every one ^jthat is perfect shall be as his master.

41 And ^kwhy beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, ^lbut perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

42 Either, how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in

Lord's day, while partly an end—a great commemorative institution—is also a means to something further. It is to no purpose that the wicked observe it as did the ancient Pharisees; but under the influence of Gospel truth and the Divine teaching, it becomes a day the best of all the seven! The heart communes with its God, and with his spiritual children, in the ordinances of the sanctuary, while pleasure is sought and found in works of faith and labours of love, inclusive of everything that appertains to necessity and mercy. Although miracles cannot now be wrought like those of the Saviour, the spirit of his mighty acts may still be exemplified; and as his works opened a path for his words, so the benevolence of Christians is an excellent preparative for their lessons. Of the countless all-important things which dropped from the lips of the Saviour in public and in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye.

43 For "a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit; neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

44 For every tree is known by his own fruit: for of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble-bush gather they ²grapes.

45 A good man, out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man, out of the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh.

46 ¶ And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?

47 Whosoever ¹cometh to me, and ²heareth my sayings, and ³doeth them, I will shew you to whom he is like:

48 He is like a man which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock: and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it; for it was founded upon a rock.

49 But he that heareth, and doeth not, is like a man that, without a foundation, built an house upon the earth; against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell; and the ruin of that house was great.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was ^fworthy for whom he should do this:

5 For ^ghe loveth our nation, ^hand he hath built us a synagogue.

6 Then ⁱJesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends to him, saying unto him, Lord, ^jtrouble not thyself; for I am not worthy that thou shouldst enter under my roof:

private, few are more precious than the injunction, "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." We have here a volume. The rule is so just, that it commends itself to every soul not perverted by sin or selfishness.

Chap. VII. 1-35. By the Lord's "visiting" is meant his shewing them mercy by sending among them a representative of his power and grace, performing miracles for their welfare. God was justified by the people's approval of John's lessons, and their acknowledgment of his mission, by submitting to his baptism. The bulk of the 7 Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: ^mbut say in a word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto ⁿone, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth ^oit.

9 When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

10 And they that were sent, returning to the house, ^pfound the servant whole that had been sick.

11 ¶ And it came to pass the day after, that ^qhe went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now, when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, ^rthe only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

• 13 And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, ^sWeep not.

14 And he came and touched the ^tbier: and they that bare ^uhim stood still. And he said, ^vYoung man, I say unto thee, Arise.

15 And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. ^wAnd he delivered him to his mother.

16 And there came a fear on all: and ^xthey glorified God, saying, That ^ya great prophet is risen up among us; and, That ^zGod hath visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.

18 ¶ And the disciples of John shewed him of all these things.

19 And John calling ^{aa}unto him two of his disciples, sent ^{ab}them to Jesus, saying, ^{ac}Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

21 And in the same hour he cured many of ^{ad}their infirmities and ^{ae}plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that ^{af}were blind he gave sight.

22 Then Jesus, answering, said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that leading men, Pharisees and lawyers, despised John, and rejected his instructions. The lawyers were men whose special work it was to interpret the laws of Moses, and accordingly they claimed for themselves superior consideration, and were much looked up to by the people. The spirit of humanity was frequently manifested by masters under the Jewish dispensation, who seemed to look on their servants almost as their children or relations. The example is excellent, and demands Christian consideration. It often occurs that servants are far from their home, with few or no friends; and in those cases, when afflictions occur, it behoves their employers to the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, *the dead are raised, ^bto the poor the gospel is preached.

23 And ^cblessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

24 ¶ And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness for to see? ^dA reed shaken with the wind?

25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously apparelled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts.

26 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yes, I say unto you, ^eand much more than a prophet.

27 This is he of whom it is written, ^fBehold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I say unto you, ^gAmong those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist; ^hbut he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.

29 And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, ⁱjustified God, being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But the Pharisees and lawyers ^jrejected the counsel of God ^kagainst themselves, being not baptized of him.

31 ¶ And the Lord said, ^lWhereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like?

32 They are like unto children sitting in the market-place, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept.

33 For John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, ^mHe hath a devil.

34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!

35 But ⁿWisdom is justified of all her children.

36 ¶ And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat.

37 And, behold, a woman in the city, ^cwhich was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster-box of ointment, 38 And stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

39 Now when the Pharisee, which had bidden him, saw it, he spake within himself, saying, ^dThis man, if he were a prophet, ^ewould have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him; for she is a sinner.

40 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

41 There was a certain creditor which had two debtors; the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42 And ^fwhen they had nothing to pay, ^ghe frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most?

43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.

45 Thou ^hgavest me no kiss: but this woman, since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46 My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

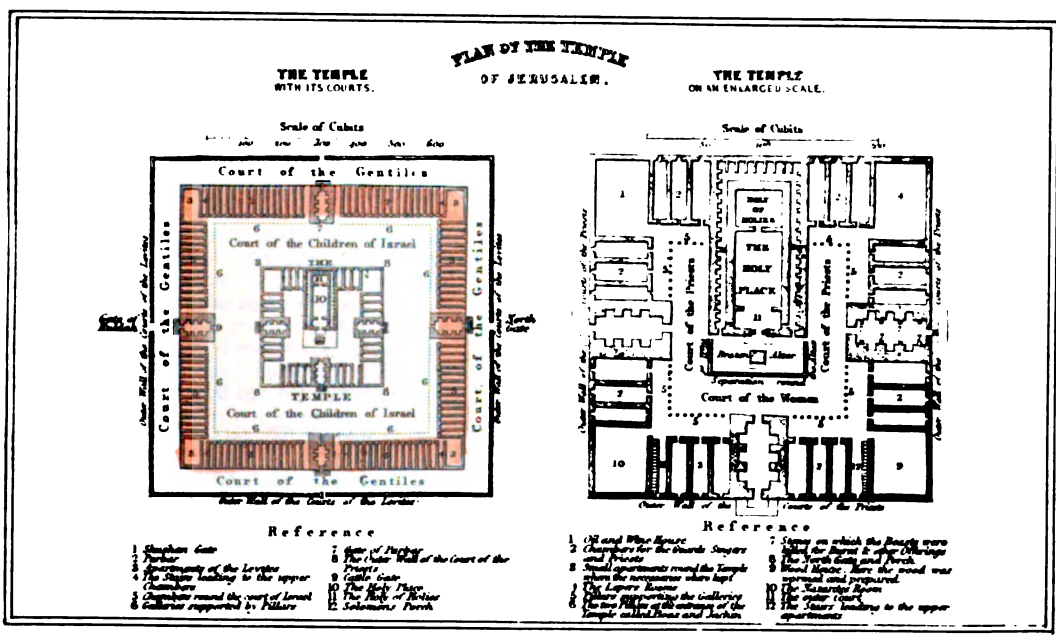

47 Wherefore, I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

48 And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.

49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, ⁱWho is this that forgiveth sins also?

manifest towards them all possible tenderness, and to resort to appropriate means for the recovery of that health which to them is everything. The case of the widow of Nain is amongst the most interesting facts recorded in the Gospels. An only son, if loving and dutiful, is, under any circumstances, an object of the tenderest regard to the parents, when both are alive; but to a widow, such a son is above all price. His loss, therefore, is a calamity of no common order, and his interment one of the most painful spectacles that can meet the human eye. It moved even the Son of God himself. Seldom does the Saviour's example commend itself with greater force to the hearts of his people, than on the present occasion. When he saw the poor widow as she moved along, following the corpse of her departed son, and bathed in tears, he had compassion on her, and said, "Weep not." The injunction, apart from the miracle which he was about to perform, would have been cruel; but, in the gracious exercise of his almighty power, he soon dried up her tears by removing their cause, although it is probable the wonderful result led to a fresh burst, not of grief, but of joy. The Saviour's dealings with his people are sometimes difficult to explain. Occasionally, as in the case before us, he interferes immediately, turning night into day, and sorrow into joy. At other times, he leaves them under heavy calamities, which may seem hardly compatible with love; but in the end, his wisdom is always justified by his people, who never fail joyfully to testify that "he hath done all things well." Ver. 36-50. The scene presented is one of peculiar tenderness. Few objects afforded a greater contrast than did the spirit of the Pharisee and that of the penitent. According to custom, it behoved a host to furnish water to guests on their arrival, to salute them with a kiss of charity, to anoint their hair with olive oil, and to shew them other attentions, bespeaking esteem and confidence. Simon, in the present case, neglected all these acts of politeness, which rendered the

CHAPTER VIII.

¹ Women minister unto Christ. ⁴ The parable of the sower, 16 and of the candle. ²⁶ The legion of devils cast out.

AND it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God; and the twelve were with him,

2 And certain women, which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils,

3 And Joanna the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance.

4 ¶ And when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he spake by a parable :

5 A ^ssower went out to sow his seed: and as he sowed, some fell by the way-side; and it was trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it.

6 And some fell upon a rock; and as soon as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it lacked moisture.

7 And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprang up with it, and choked it.

8 And ^bother fell on good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit ^can hundred-fold. And when he had said these things, he cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

9 ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, What might this parable be?

10 And he said, Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables; ^dthat seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.

11 ¶ Now the parable is this; ^eThe seed is the word of God.

12 Those ^fby the way-side are they that hear: ^gthen cometh the devil, and taketh away the word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved.

13 They on the rock ^hare they, which, when they hear, ⁱreceive the word with joy; ^jand these have no root, ^kwhich for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.

14 And that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares, and riches, and pleasures of ^lthis life, ^mand bring no fruit to perfection.

15 But that on the good ground are they, which in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, ⁿkeep it, and ^obring forth fruit with patience.

16 ¶ No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

17 For ^pnothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither ^qany thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad.

18 Take heed therefore how ye hear: for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he ^rseemeth to have.

19 ¶ Then came to him ^shis mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the press.

20 And it was told him ^tby certain which said, Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee.

21 And he answered and said unto them, ^uMy mother and my brethren are these ^vwhich hear the word of God, and do it.

22 ¶ Now it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a ship with his disciples: and he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth.

23 But as they sailed, he fell asleep: and there came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled ^wwith water, and were in jeopardy.

24 And they came to him, and awoke him, saying, ^xMaster, Master, we perish! Then ^yhe arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water: and they ceased, and there was a calm.

25 And he said unto them, ^zWhere is your faith? And they, being afraid, wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him.

26 ¶ And they arrived at ^{aa}the country of the Gadarenes, which is over against Galilee.

27 And when he went forth to land, there ^{ab}met him out of the city a certain man which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in ^{ac}any house, but in the tomba.

conduct of the woman the more remarkable. She kissed the Saviour's feet, washing them with her tears, and anointing them with precious ointment. The conduct of these parties remarkably corresponded with the contrast presented by their hearts and characters. In every work done to the Saviour, the prior consideration is the state of the heart. Where affection is great, the smallest deeds are precious in his esteem, and the humblest endeavours to promote his glory are well received.

Chap. VIII. 1-25. Woman, while the chief ornament of Christianity, has ever taken the lead in works of charity. Were no works of faith or labours of love to be performed except by the hands of men, the mighty machine of Christian philanthropy would, in most cases, be feebly worked. It is worthy of notice, also, that throughout the heathen world Christianity has been the prime emancipator of woman from the cruel and degrading thralldom in which she had been held. The Gospel restored her to her own place, as man's companion, comfort, and glory. The Saviour, by speaking parables, fulfilled Scripture, as well as presented beautiful lessons, which will retain their charm to the end of the world. The spiritual scope and practical bearing of the Saviour's Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, torment me not.

29 (For he had ^acommanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. For oftentimes it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains, and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.)

30 And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said, ^bLegion: because many devils were entered into him.

31 And ^cthey besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.

32 And there was ^dthere an herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they ^ebesought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. And ^fhe suffered them.

33 Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: ^gand the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

34 When they that fed them saw what was done, ^hthey fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country.

35 Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, ⁱsitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

36 They also which saw it told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.

37 ¶ Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about ^jbesought him to depart from them: for they were taken with great fear. And he went up into the ship, and returned back again.

38 Now the man, out of whom the devils were departed, besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away, saying, 39 Return to thine own house, and shew how great things God hath done unto thee. And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city how great things Jesus had done unto him.

40 And it came to pass, that, when Jesus was returned, ^kthe people gladly received him: for they were all ^lwaiting for him.

41 ¶ And, behold, ^mthere came a man named Jairus, and he was a ruler of the synagogue; ⁿand he fell down at Jesus' feet, ^oand besought him that he would come into his house:

language is everywhere most manifest. Those stand first in his esteem who hear his words, and do them. Mere verbal adoration is treated, not as homage, but as hypocrisy. Godly people are frequently in peril; the ungodly often share the danger, and are saved on their account. Wherever he is, there is safety for all who have confidence in his power, love, and truth, and repose in his sovereign mercy. Ver. 28-36. Confidence in the Lord never goes without its reward. 1 Christ sendeth out his apostles. 7 Herod is desirous to see him. 12 Christ feedeth five thousand. 26 His transfiguration. 37 He healeth the tunatick.

without benefit, exercised faith in Jesus, and obtained the blessing she longed for. Health and sickness, death and life, are alike under his control. When human power is no longer availing, a fit opportunity is furnished to the Son of God to display omnipotence in the exercise of mercy.

Chap. IX. 1-22. Our Lord began sometimes to teach his disciples confidence. It required some faith to proceed upon a preaching enterprise without staff, scrip,

3 And he said unto them, Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece.

4 And whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart.

5 And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them.

6 And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where.

7 ¶ Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead;

8 And of some, that Elias had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again.

9 And Herod said, John have I beheaded: but who is this of whom I hear such things? And he desired to see him.

10 And the apostles, when they were returned, told him all that they had done. And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city, called Bethsaida.

11 And the people, when they knew, followed him: and he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing.

12 ¶ And when the day began to wear away, then came the twelve, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals; for we are here in a desert place.

13 But he said unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they said, We have no more but five loaves and two fishes; except we should go and buy meat for all this people.

14 (For they were about five thousand men.) And he said to his disciples, Make them sit down by fifties in a company.

15 And they did so, and made them all sit down.

16 Then he took the five loaves, and the two fishes; and, looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude.

17 And they did eat, and were all filled: and there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets.

18 ¶ And it came to pass, as he was alone praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am?

19 They answering, said, John the Baptist; but some say, Elias; and others say, that one of the old prophets is risen again.

20 He said unto them, But whom say ye that I am? Peter answering, said, The Christ of God.

21 And he straitly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing;

22 Saying, The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day.

23 ¶ And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me.

24 For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it.

25 For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be cast away?

26 For whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels.

27 But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God.

28 ¶ And it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter, and John, and James, and went up into a mountain to pray.

29 And as he prayed, the fashion bread, or money, or a change of garments. They nevertheless had the necessary confidence, and it was justified by the results. Their message opened for them both doors and hearts; men who could "everywhere heal the sick" would not want for funds; and so, wherever the Gospel has been received in its life-giving and enriching power, its subjects will be forward to promote the comfort of those who have been the instruments of their salvation. Ver. 23-27. The intimation here given may well make the ears of multitudes to tingle. Many, calling themselves Christians, are yet ashamed of the Saviour's words! Professing to be alive, the proofs of life are wanting! The modern distinction of the congregation, as opposed to the church, or the assembly of believers, is fraught with peril. The apostles knew nothing of congregations as settled separate bodies. The congregation ought to stand to the church in the same relation as the fresh fuel which surrounds the furnace does to its glowing centre, by which it is regularly absorbed and assimilated. They are hearers that they may become believers, and, as believers, "doers of the word." The apostles had no idea of large bodies of people remaining associated with churches till the day of their death—mere hearers, standing aloof from the churches and their ordinances, and occupying a sort of middle ground between them and an infidel world. It is the duty of all who hear the truth to receive it; and the proof of their doing so is, their "following the Lord fully." Ver. 28-36. This was one of the sublimest scenes of our Lord's personal history. It was necessary that it should be attested by two or three witnesses, and accordingly Peter, John, and James were led to the mount for that purpose. It is worthy of special notice, that the transfiguration occurred in the act of prayer. Moses and Elias descended from heaven to hold the interview which now took place, when they conversed with him of the decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem. It was in all respects a sublime moment, fraught with unutterable awe and glory to the disciples. From this it is clear that the spirits of the just knew what was about to take place on the earth; and, doubtless, the mission of Moses and Elias was the occasion of extraordinary interest in the heavenly world. The sleep with which the apostles were overtaken was probably supernatural, for suitable reasons. But at the proper moment they were awoken, that they might see and hear for themselves, and at the time appointed testify to the Church and to the world the events of that wonderful of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering.

30 And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias :

31 Who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem.

32 But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep : and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here : and let us make three tabernacles ; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias : not knowing what he said.

34 While he thus spake, there came a cloud and overshadowed them : and they feared as they entered into the cloud.

35 And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, ^mThis is my beloved Son ; ⁿhear him.

36 And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

37 ¶ And it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

38 And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, I beseech thee, look upon my son ; for he is mine only child :

39 And, lo, a spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out ; and it teareth him that he foameth again ; and, bruising him, hardly departeth from him.

40 And I besought thy disciples to cast him out ; and they could not.

41 And Jesus, answering, said, ^oO faithless and perverse generation ! ^phow long shall I be with you, ^qand suffer you ? Bring thy son hither.

42 And as he was yet a coming, the devil threw him down, and tare him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.

43 ¶ And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But, while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, 44 Let these sayings sink down into your ears : ^rfor the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.

45 But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not : and they feared to ask him of that saying.

46 ¶ Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest.

47 And Jesus, ^rperceiving the thought of their heart, took a child, and set him by him, 48 And said unto them, ^sWhosoever shall receive this child in my name, receiveth me ; and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth him that sent me : for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

49 ¶ And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name ; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not : ^tfor he that is not against us is for us.

51 ¶ And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, 52 And ^usent messengers before his face : and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, ^vwilt thou that we command ^wfire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did ?

55 But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, ^xYe know not what manner of spirit ye are of.

56 For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

57 ¶ And it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain man said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests ; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee ; but let me first go bid them farewell which are at home at my house.

night ; for it seems probable that it occurred during that season, which added all the more to its impressiveness and grandeur. Ver. 37-62. The disciples were sometimes baffled in the matter of dealing with evil spirits ; but to the Saviour, the obedience was prompt and uniform. The mighty power of God in such cases was very impressively exercised, and the effects produced necessarily great. If anything could redeem the folly of the disciples, it was the frankness and the candour with which they confessed it. That a body of men so circumstanced should have entered into disputes as to individual superiority, is very extraordinary ; it shewed how little they had profited from their unparalleled advantages. The violence they were disposed to exercise towards those who did not associate with them, still more strikingly illustrated the unhallowed spirit which governed them. Nothing could be more incongruous with Christ's mission than the calling down of fire to devour their fellow-creatures. How strong his rebuke !—it might well fill them with shame

CHAPTER X.

1 The seventy disciples sent forth, and admonished.
41 Martha reprehended.

AFTER these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place whither he himself would come.

2 Therefore said he unto them, *The harvest truly is great, but ^bthe labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest.

3 Go your ways: behold, ^cI send you forth as lambs among wolves.

4 Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes; and salute no man by the way.

5 And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house.

6 And if ^dthe son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again.

7 And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give: ^efor the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house.

8 And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you:

9 And heal the sick that are therein; and say unto them, ^fThe kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

10 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, 11 Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

12 But I say unto you, ^gThat it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

13 ¶ Woe ^hunto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! ⁱfor if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon which have been done in you, they had a great while ago ^jrepented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.

14 But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment, than for you.

15 And thou, Capernaum, which art

16 He that ¹heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me.

17 ¶ And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name.

18 And he said unto them, ²I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven.

19 Behold, ³I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; ⁴and nothing shall by any means hurt you.

20 Notwithstanding, ⁵in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because ⁶your names are written in heaven.

21 ¶ In that hour ⁷Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

22 ⁸All ⁹things are delivered to me of my Father: ¹⁰and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and ¹¹he to whom the Son will reveal him.

23 ¶ And he turned him unto ¹²his disciples, and said privately, ¹³Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see:

24 For I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

25 ¶ And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

26 He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou?

27 And he, answering, said, ¹⁴Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; ¹⁵and thy neighbour as thyself.

28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: ¹⁶this do, and thou shalt live.

29 But he, willing to justify himself, and confusion; but how like himself and his mission!

Chap. X. 1-20. Luke alone records this important circumstance of the appointment of the seventy—a number which corresponds with the elders of Moses, mentioned in Num. xi. 16-30. Instructions were given to these seventy substantially the same as had been given to the Apostles in the last chapter. In the present case, however, the Lord Jesus is more copious and minute, entering into a detail of the events with which they might lay their account. The journey gave to those who performed it the utmost satisfaction; they were delighted with the exercise of the new power which they possessed over devils; but their Master speedily checked them, by an intimation that gifts were not to be confounded with grace. The prime ground for rejoicing was, the record of their names in the Book of Life. This weakness still attaches to human nature, which often sends forth longings to be great rather than to be good, and a desire to shine rather than to burn. Happily all may burn, though all may not shine; and on the former, rather than the latter, depends both personal safety and happiness, as well as usefulness in the kingdom of Christ. With strong faith and burning fervour, and a thorough knowledge of the Scriptures, much may be realised in the service of Christ; whereas without these, talents the most powerful and polished, commanding boundless admiration, may be exercised with little benefit to the salvation of men and the glory of Christ. Ver. 21-42. Our Lord was careful, at an early period of his ministry, to accustom his disciples to lessons illustrative of the sovereignty of grace. Persons taking a loose and distant view of the commandments may suppose they have substantially kept them; but when they look closely at the subject and into their own hearts, and apply the former to the latter in its thoughts and intentions, they will soon make discoveries that it is perilous to rest their said unto Jesus, "And who is my neighbour?"

30 And Jesus, answering, said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

31 And by chance there came down a certain priest that way; and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.

32 And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.

33 But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him.

34 And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

35 And on the morrow, when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him: and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36 Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

37 And he said, "He that shewed mercy on him." Then said Jesus unto him, "Go, and do thou likewise."

38 ¶ Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village: and a certain woman, named Martha, received him into her house.

39 And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.

40 But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

41 And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things;

42 But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

CHAPTER XI.

2 Christ teacheth to pray. 14 He casteth out a dumb devil. 37 He reproveth the Pharisees, scribes, and lawyers.

AND it came to pass, that, as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth.

3 Give us day by day our daily bread.

4 And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil.

5 And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves;

6 For a friend of mine is in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him?

7 And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee.

8 I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth.

9 And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

10 For every one that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened.

11 If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?

12 Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion?

13 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father salvation on the perfection of their obedience. Practical godliness has far more to do with humility and philanthropy than many people suppose. Doctrinal knowledge is good; minute attention to all that appertains to the ordinances and commandments of the Lord externally, is praiseworthy; but as the essence of the Gospel is the compassion of God to man, so the essence of piety is the love of man to his fellow-creature. The most remarkable diversities of taste and temperament will be found in the same family. Martha and Mary supply a striking illustration. Such differences are compatible with the greatest excellences. These sisters, each in her place, were highly praiseworthy. Martha followed the bent of her active temperament, which eminently fitted her for domestic usefulness; Mary, more sympathetic and sentimental, forgetful of the business of the house, lost herself in listening to the gracious words of her Divine Lord. Christian families in these days present multitudes of instances of like worth combined with like diversities: Martha superintends all matters of the domestic circle, where she is ever watching, managing, and controlling, morning, noon, and night; while a Mary collects for societies, visits the sick, teaches the Sunday-school, and otherwise abounds in works of faith and labours of love. Both are needful—both are honourable. Let each have the love and respect which are due, forasmuch as each worthily fills the niche she was destined to occupy.

Chap. XI. 1-23. Not a few important points in the Sacred Scriptures come forth quite incidentally, being nowhere comprehended in the regular narrative. One of these is the fact that John taught his disciples to pray. This statement involves a principle of extensive application. John presumed, as a matter of course, that his disciples would be men of prayer, and accordingly he gave them special instruction on that all-important exercise. So public were these instructions, and so well known was the fact, that the disciples here employ it to fortify their own request. The disputes which have obtained concerning the form here presented are useless, and not to edification. All that was intended was clearly to set forth an outline or exhibition of principles adapted to that period, which it was left to the disciples give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

14 ¶ And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people wondered.

15 But some of them said, ¹He casteth out devils through ²Beelzebub the chief of the devils.

16 And others, tempting him, sought of him a sign from heaven.

17 But he, ¹knowing their thoughts, said unto them, ²Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth.

18 If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? because ye say that I cast out devils through Beelzebub.

19 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, ¹by whom do your sons cast them out? therefore shall they be your judges.

20 But if I with ¹the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt ²the kingdom of God is come upon you.

21 When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace:

22 But when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils.

23 He ¹that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth.

24 When ¹the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, ²he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my house whence I came out.

25 And when he cometh, ¹he findeth it swept and garnished.

26 Then goeth he, and taketh to him seven other spirits more wicked than himself; and they enter in, and dwell there: ¹and the last state of that man is worse than the first.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, ¹Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked.

28 But he said, ¹Yea, rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

29 ¶ And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say, ¹This is an evil generation: they seek a sign; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet.

30 For ¹as Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.

31 The ¹queen of the south shall ²rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, ³a greater than Solomon is here.

32 The men of Nineve shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, ¹a greater than Jonas is here.

33 No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under ¹a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

34 The ¹light of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light; but when ²thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness.

35 ¹Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

36 If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when ¹a bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

37 ¶ And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat.

38 And when the Pharisee saw it, ¹he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner.

39 And the Lord said unto him, ¹Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; ²but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

of Christ in further ages, under the guidance of the Divine Spirit, to develop and apply during the ever-varying circumstances of the Christian life, properly blending them with the perfected light of the Apostolic Epistles. Our Lord is particularly emphatic on the importance of importunity in prayer. Prayer is a matter in which far more depends on the spirit than on the letter of the exercise. The expression may be very defective, and yet the prayer be such as has power with God. In prayer, the doctrinal element ought, of course, to be Scripturally correct and thoroughly evangelical, but the great and distinguishing feature ought to be sentiment, emotion, expression of desire, direct intercourse with God. Mere meditation is not prayer; Scripture exposition is not prayer; general observation is not prayer; polemical discussion is not prayer; the enunciation of a creed is not prayer. All these, however, and much besides of a kindred character, have too frequently occupied the place of prayer, to the serious detriment of edification. The very life and soul of prayer is, direct intercourse with God; which, however, admits of the utmost variety of thought and expression.

As an example of this direct address, the Lord's Prayer is perfect. Devotion makes no account of rhetoric. The attempt at offering "an eloquent prayer" is an abomination. Everything declamatory, and all that savours of display, is an outrage. Simplicity, humility, devoutness, few words and many things, strong faith and strong feelings—these are among the prime qualities of true devotion. Christians do well to consider the importance which the Saviour attaches to prayer for the Holy Spirit, since on his indwelling presence and almighty power everything turns. This gift may be viewed in two lights—as immediate inspiration in the breasts of the Prophets and Apostles; and as awakening, convincing, converting, preserving, consoling, and sanctifying power in the souls of men. It were exceedingly to be desired, that believers should familiarise their minds with the subject of prayer in all its aspects. From the neglect of this the Church suffers much. Prayers are often presented of a character not in harmony with the facts of the case, and wholly unfitted to edify. At one time the supplication is deficient; it is the duty of Christians to pray, not for a mere "influence," virtue, 40 Ye fools, ^a did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also?

41 But rather give alms ^a of such things as ye have; and, behold, ^a all things are clean unto you.

42 But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue, and all manner of herbs, ^a and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, ^a and not to leave the other undone.

43 Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets.

44 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

45 Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also.

46 And he said, ^a Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

47 Woe unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them.

48 Truly ye bear witness that ye allow the deeds of your fathers: ^a for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres.

49 Therefore also said ^a the wisdom of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, ^a and some of them they shall slay and persecute:

50 That ^a the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation;

51 From the blood of Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, It shall be required of this generation.

52 Woe unto you, lawyers! ^a for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye enter not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye ^a hindered.

53 And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began ^a to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things;

54 Laying wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

CHAPTER XII.

1 To avoid hypocrisy and fearfulness in publishing Christ's doctrine. 13 To beware of condoumen, 22 and over-carefulness. 41 The faithful and wise steward.

IN the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, ^a Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy.

2 For ^a there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known.

3 Therefore, ^a whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the house-tops.

4 And I say unto you, my friends, ^a Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.

5 But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: ^a Fear him, which after he hath killed, hath ^a power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.

6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, ^a and not one of them is forgotten before God?

7 But ^a even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.

8 Also I say unto you, ^a Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also ^a confess before the angels of God:

9 But ^a he that denieth me before men, ^a shall be denied before the angels of God.

10 And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven.

11 And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say:

12 For ^a the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.

13 ¶ And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

or power, which a Deist or a Socinian may do, but for the Eternal Spirit. At another time it is in excess; we are not authorised to pray for "direct inspiration" to aid us either in prayer or in preaching. Good men, however, frequently pray in social meetings as if the days of direct inspiration had not passed away, but as if we lived in Apostolic times. In this, as in everything, wisdom is profitable to direct. That the service may be "reasonable," it must be conducted by reason, under the guidance of the Holy Scriptures.

Chap. XII. 1-40. In every age, the temptations have been strong to disown the Lord Jesus before the ungodly. It has ever been a condition of quiet, honour, and favour—all of which would frequently have been sacrificed, often with liberty, and even life, by a bold avowal of faith in the Son of God. There are few things more injurious to the cause of Christ than shrinking cowardice; and hence the guilt and danger of those who, while professing to believe, yet deny him before men. It is expressly intimated, therefore, that those who do so will be denied by him before the Father and his holy angels, which will be their eternal undoing. The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost is a subject which has excited not a little controversy, and much painful solicitude; but the words are simple. If due attention be paid to the connexion in which they stand in Matthew, it will be clearly seen that, by "the sin against the Holy Ghost," is meant the malicious and obstinate ascription to the Devil of the miraculous operations of the Holy Spirit. Multitudes of conscientious and devoted disciples of the Lord Jesus have been needlessly troubled, lest they 14 And he said unto him, °Man, °who made me a judge or a divider over you?

15 And he said unto them, °Take heed, and beware of covetousness: °for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

16 And he spake a parable unto them, saying, °The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

17 And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul, °Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; °take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

20 But God said unto him, °Thou fool, this night °thy soul shall be required of thee: °then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?

21 So is °he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not °rich toward God.

22 ¶ And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, °Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The °life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

24 Consider the ravens: for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have store-house nor barn; and God feedeth them. °How much more are ye better than the fowls?

25 And °which of you, with taking thought, can add to his stature one cubit?

26 If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, °why take ye thought for the rest?

27 Consider the lilies, how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, °that Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these.

28 If then God so clothe the grass, °which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, °O ye of little faith?

29 And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, °neither be ye of doubtful mind.

30 For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and °your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things.

31 But °rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you.

32 Fear not, °little flock; for °it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

33 Sell that ye have, and give alms; °provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.

34 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

35 Let your loins be girded about, and °your lights burning;

36 And ye yourselves like unto °men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding; that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately.

37 °Blessed are those servants, whom the lord, when he cometh, shall find watching: verily I say unto you, That he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.

38 And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

39 And this know, that if the goodman of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through.

40 °Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

41 ¶ Then Peter said unto him, °Lord, speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all?

42 And the Lord said, °Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make °ruler over his household, °to give them their portion of meat in due season?

43 Blessed is that servant, °whom his lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

44 Of a truth I say unto you, °That he will make him ruler over all that he hath.

45 But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens, °and to eat and drink, and to be drunken;

46 The °lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will °cut him in sunder, °and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers.

47 And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, should have committed this awful sin; but if they will examine the subject as here set forth, these fears will at once be quelled. No danger can result to them from this quarter. With whatever shortcomings they may be chargeable, they are not guilty of this tremendous crime. Ver. 41-59. A spirit of slumber is natural to man, and this circumstance accounts for the frequency and urgency with which believers are exhorted to watch and to pray. For a period after conversion, where convictions have been very deep, and the peace of God, consequent upon faith, has corresponded with it, the spirit of vigilance frequently continues to be displayed; but by degrees, as the soul becomes familiar with its new position, and its principal enemies have been overcome, a sense of danger diminishes, and watchfulness gives place to security. This too frequently continues, until the consequence be realised, in the return of an evil heart of unbelief, often ending in departure, more or less gross, from the path of life, whereby conscience is defiled, and the Gospel dishonoured.

neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.

48 But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. ^cFor unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required; and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

49 ¶ I am ^ccome to send fire on the earth; and what will I if it be already kindled?

50 But ^cI have a baptism to be baptized with; ^band how am I ^cstraitened till it be accomplished!

51 Suppose ^cye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division:

52 For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three.

53 The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.

54 ¶ And he said also to the people, ^bWhen ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is.

55 And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat; and it cometh to pass.

56 Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it ^cthat ye do not discern this time?

57 Yea, and ^cwhy even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?

58 ¶ When thou goest with thine adversary to the magistrate, ^cas thou art in the way, ^bgive diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him, lest he hale thee to the judge, ^cand the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison.

59 I tell thee, ^bthou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last ^cmite.

CHAPTER XIII.

THERE were present at that season some that told him of ^cthe Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.

2 And Jesus, answering, said unto them, ^bSuppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things?

3 I tell you, Nay: but, ^cexcept ye repent, ^cye shall all likewise perish.

4 Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were ^csinners above all men that dwell in Jerusalem?

5 I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable: A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard: ^cand he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

7 Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these ^cthree years I come seeking fruit on this fig-tree, and find none: ^ccut it down; ^bwhy cumbereth it the ground?

8 And he, answering, said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it:

9 And if it bear fruit, well; and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

10 ¶ And ^che was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath.

11 And, behold, there was a woman which had ^aa spirit of infirmity ^beighteen years, and was ^bbowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art ^bloosed from thine infirmity.

13 And he laid his hands on her: ^cand immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

14 And the ruler of the synagogue answered ^bwith indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath-day, and said unto the people, ^cThere are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath-day.

15 The Lord then answered him, and said, ^cThou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?

16 And ought not this woman, ^cbeing a daughter of Abraham, ^cwhom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, ^cbe loosed from this bond on the sabbath-day?

17 And when he had said these things, ^call his adversaries were ashamed: ^cand all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

18 ¶ Then said he, ^cUnto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto shall I resemble it?

19 It is like a grain of mustard-seed,

Chap. XIII. 1-22. Sudden death or destructive calamity is no proof of peculiar wickedness. Human nature, however, is so constituted as to be much disposed to draw this conclusion. When the heathen beheld the viper spring from the fire, and seize on the apostle, they concluded that he had been a murderer, whom vengeance suffered not to live, although he had escaped the dangers of the deep. They expected every minute that he should have fallen down dead; but when he shook it off, and received no harm, they concluded that he was Divine. Among the parables few are more important than that of the fig-tree. It speaks to the conscience of Christians of all conditions—each of whom, as a tree of righteousness planted by the Lord's own hand, ought to bring forth in abundance fruit unto holiness—that they may see the consequences of barrenness. Such a profession is incompatible with the full enjoyment of salvation. The best proofs of faith and of love are their effects on the heart and life. Ver. 23-35. The addresses of the Lord Jesus always assume man's accountability for the deeds done in the body, and consequently his possession of a free uncontrolled will. He here exhorts men to which a man took, and cast into his garden; and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it.

20 ¶ And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God?

21 It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 And he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying toward Jerusalem.

23 ¶ Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few that be saved? And he said unto them, 24 °Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.

25 When °once the Master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, °Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are:

26 Then shall ye begin to say, °We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.

27 But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are: °depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.

28 There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in °the kingdom of God, and °you yourselves thrust out.

29 And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.

30 And, behold, °there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.

31 ¶ The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence: for Herod will kill thee.

32 And he said unto them, Go ye and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day °I shall be perfected.

33 Nevertheless, I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the day following: °for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XIV.

7 Christ teacheth humility, 12 and to feed the poor. 16 The parable of the great supper. 26 Who cannot be Christ's disciples.

AND it came to pass, as he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the sabbath-day, that they watched him.

2 And, behold, there was a certain man before him which had the dropsy.

3 And Jesus, answering, spake unto °the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, °Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-day?

4 And they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go;

5 And answered them, saying, Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath-day?

6 And °they could not answer him again to these things.

7 ¶ And he °put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms; saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room, lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

enter in at the strait gate, as if nothing was wanting but the will so to do. He everywhere connects means with ends, forgiveness with repentance, and salvation with faith. The Lord Jesus himself, his prophets and apostles, knew nothing of those refinements which have distinguished modern times, by which preachers of the Word have been forbidden to exhort men either to repentance or to faith, on the ground that it would interfere with the free grace of the Gospel! Such addresses as theirs would never have led men to deny their obligation or their ability either to repent or to believe. Where the Gospel is preached according to the analogy of faith, such pernicious assertions and groundless assumptions will never be heard; and where they unhappily exist, the only method of rooting them up is to preach the Word in all its pureness and fulness, teaching every man and warning every man, in order to the presentation of every man perfect before God.

Chap. XIV. 1-24. In the East, there is much ceremony in arranging guests at the festive board. It is no uncommon thing for parties, because of their rank, to be compelled to move up higher—an act, however, which, it may be supposed, is not offensive, since it is a tribute to their social position; the thing that is here meant by “worship.” Such injunctions as those comprised in ver. 12-14, must be understood with obvious limitations. Nothing can be more natural than for friends and relatives to meet around the social board, thus cementing friendship, and strengthening the ties which bind them together. Our Lord himself attended such feasts. The great thing that is enjoined, is compassion towards the poor, and the happiness which will result from displaying kindness to those who can make no return. Usages in the East are so indelible, that existing customs, in many things, suffice to explain those which prevailed among the Jews thousands of years ago. The practice in 12 ¶ Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompence be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

15 And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

16 Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17 And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

18 And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

19 And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20 And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21 So that servant came, and shewed his lord these things. Then the master of the house, being angry, said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22 And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.

23 And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.

China at this moment strikingly illustrates the case of the supper. A card is sent on the evening before the entertainment, another on the morning of the day, and a third when everything is ready. It is stated, that the invitation is not considered sincere until renewed three or four times in writing. In the purchase of oxen, great pains are taken to "prove" them, and in this process neighbours and friends are called in to assist; the animals are tried whether they plough softly, steadily, and strongly, and thus they are put on all their paces. It is common in the East for travellers, not intending to tarry in a place, to take their refreshment under a hedge by the roadside, and it was such as these that were to be invited to the neglected feast. The term "compulsion" here signifies merely persuasion, entreaty urgently pressed. This parable has been often used, with great propriety, in relation to the Gospel: when the Jews rejected it, it was offered to the Gentiles. Ver. 25-35. The words here set forth concerning the hatred of parents must be explained by other Scriptures, and allowance must be made for the figure of Eastern language. Literally, to hate parents, or partners, or children, would be crime: the love of all these, and of our fellow-men, is among the chief commandments. By these clear matter-of-fact injunctions, then, we are to be guided, and not by a single strong expression. Nothing more is meant here than preference where they and Christ come into competition. If they stand between us and the Saviour—if the consequence of our embracing, loving, and serving him be the forfeiture of their favour—then there is no room for a moment's hesitation; at all hazards, and at all costs, we must obey our Lord, and save our souls! It is well that they who begin a profession should make up their minds to difficulties, and, in many cases, to sacrifice and suffering. In our days, and our country, indeed, there is not much demanded in this way; but it is otherwise in lands where the Gospel is first introduced. In Popish countries, too, the difficulties are great, and the dangers certain, of sincerely embracing the truth, and boldly professing it. Even in Protestant nations, where the form exists without the power of godliness, it often involves considerable trial to become a decided convert, and to act in conformity with principle and conscience. By "salt" is to be understood personal godliness, and by "the loss of savour" a departure from the Lord by an evil heart of unbelief. While the words touch all Christians, they specially point to teachers, preachers, and pastors. The savour gone among these, all is gone. Usefulness is at an end, and until the savour be restored they will only be cumberers of the ground.

Chap. XV. 1-10. The publicans and sinners were objects of contempt and hatred to the Pharisees, whose proud traditions prevented their receiving such persons mured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.

3 ¶ And he spake this parable unto them, saying,

4 What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

5 And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

6 And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost.

7 I say unto you, That likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.

8 ¶ Either what woman, having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it?

9 And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbours together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.

10 Likewise, I say unto you, There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

11 ¶ And he said, A certain man had two sons:

12 And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living.

13 And not many days after, the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living.

14 And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.

17 And when he came to himself, he said, How now hired servants of my father's have bread enough, and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

18 I will arise, and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against Heaven, and before thee, 19 And am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

20 And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him.

21 And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against Heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son.

22 But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:

23 And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry:

24 For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

25 Now his elder son was in the field: and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard musick and dancing.

26 And he called one of the servants, and asked what these things meant.

27 And he said unto him, Thy brother is come; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound.

28 And he was angry, and would not go in: therefore came his father out, and entreated him.

29 And he, answering, said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee; neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment; and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends:

30 But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf.

31 And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine.

32 It was meet that we should make into their houses, or eating with them in public. The object of the parable was to instruct and reprove these men, whose conduct had more of nature than of grace in it, who were more concerned for their own honour and pride than for the glory of the Most High. The repentance of sinners is a great event in both worlds—the only thing, probably, which, with respect to man, gives joy to angels. The repentance referred to, means nothing less than an entire change of the whole course of life—a turning from sin with unfeigned abhorrence—a confession of it at the footstool of mercy—and an imploring of pardon through the blood of the Atonement. Were men really righteous, they would not need repentance. Christ himself testified that he came not to call the righteous but sinners to it: strictly speaking, there were no righteous men to call. He said it was not the whole that needed a physician, but they that were sick. Ver. 11-32. The parable of the prodigal son is one of the most beautiful in Scripture, since nothing so impressively and tenderly exhibits the nature of the Gospel salvation, both as it regards the prodigal and his father.

The drapery of this, as well as the other parables, must not be converted into facts and doctrines. The things here presented under figures, are elsewhere abundantly exhibited in the plainest language. One of its objects is to reprove the Pharisees, and to encourage the trembling penitent in his approach to God. The entire parable is pervaded by a current of evangelical sentiment, which, rightly understood, will strengthen faith and encourage confidence. It is so full of beauty, that any attempt at exposition would rather debase than exalt it. It makes a direct appeal to the heart through the medium of the understanding. The elder son is the only drawback to the beauty of the picture, and yet it possesses great value as illustrative of the utter selfishness of human nature. Instead of joy, he was filled with envy, and he even so far forgot the proprieties of the occasion as to wound the feelings of his father, and to pour scorn on his returning brother. Let every prodigal who may read these lines without loss of time rise and go to his Father, who will cast out none who come to him by faith.

merry, and be glad: ^bfor this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Of the unjust steward. 14 The hypocrisy of the covetous Pharisees reproved. 19 The rich man and Lazarus the beggar.

AND he said also unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man which had a steward; and the same was accused unto him that he had ^awasted his goods.

2 And he called him, and said unto him, ^bHow is it that I hear this of thee? ^cgive an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward.

3 Then the steward ^dsaid within himself, What shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed.

4 I am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses.

5 So he called every one of ^ehis lord's debtors unto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord?

6 And he said, An hundred ^fmeasures of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly, and write fifty.

7 Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred ^gmeasures of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write four-score.

8 And the lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely: for ^hthe children of this world are in their generation wiser than ⁱthe children of light.

9 And I say unto you, ^jMake to yourselves friends of the ^kmammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you ^linto everlasting habitations.

10 He that is ^mfaithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much: and ⁿhe that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much.

11 If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous ^omammon, who will commit to your trust the true ^priches?

12 And if ye have not been faithful in ^qthat which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?

14 ¶ And the Pharisees also, who were covetous, heard all these things: and they derided him.

15 And he said unto them, ^oYe are they which justify yourselves before men; but ^pGod knoweth your hearts: ^qfor that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God.

23 And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and ^xseeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

25 But Abraham said, ^ySon, ^zremember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can ^{aa}they pass to us, that ^{ab}would come from thence.

27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore,

Chap. XVI. 1-12. The unjust steward, while a bad man, displayed considerable forethought. His luxurious style of living had incapacitated him for the labours of agriculture, and he was too proud to beg; he therefore determined to carry the wicked work of robbery still further. This course could only be commended on the ground of its worldly prudence; for while eminently adapted to accomplish his object, it was utterly opposed to the authority of God, and to the rights of men. In one view only is he an example: if a man so wicked was so much concerned to provide for the little hour of life that might still remain to him, how reprehensible it is in the children of light to neglect their interests for eternity! It might be supposed that they would strain every nerve, and employ every moment, with all the means at their disposal, to glorify God, and thus to lay up for themselves a good foundation against the time to come. Ver. 13-18. The law and the prophets were the great source of popular instruction to the ancient Church, till the appearance of John, when the dispensation received an accession of light. From that period, "the kingdom of God" began to be preached; and while the Pharisees and the scribes opposed and despised, numbers of all classes and conditions hastened to John's baptism, confessing their sins, and avowing their faith in the Saviour, whom John announced as at hand. Ver. 19-31. The parable of Lazarus and the rich man is one of awful sublimity, embracing in its wide circumference all the pious poverty and all the godless wealth of the world. There is no virtue, however, in mere poverty, and there is no guilt in honestly acquired and rightly used opulence. Multitudes of the one class have perished, and multitudes 11 The ten lepers. 20 Of the kingdom of God, and the coming of the Son of man.

THEN said he unto the disciples, It is impossible but that offences will come: but woe unto him through whom they come!

2 It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones.

3 ¶ Take heed to yourselves: If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him.

4 And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him.

5 ¶ And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith.

6 And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye might say unto this sycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.

7 But which of you, having a servant plowing or feeding cattle, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go and sit down to meat?

10 So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.

12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off:

13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

14 And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.

15 And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God.

16 And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan.

17 And Jesus, answering, said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

18 There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

19 And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way, thy faith hath made thee whole.

20 ¶ And when he was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them, and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation:

of the other are numbered with the spirits of the just. Everything turns on the state of the heart. In meditating on this parable, attention must be paid to its Gospel principles rather than to its figurative diction. The neglect of this has led to much useless speculation.

Chap. XVII. 1-10. The doctrine of repentance in its relation to forgiveness, is here clearly set forth. This is one of those subjects which are very extensively misunderstood. Good men frequently talk in a strain of utter variance with the Word of God. The doctrine is this: sins against God, and against men, when truly repented of, obtain forgiveness. God himself never rejects the penitent; and it is at man's peril to refuse pardon to an erring, but penitent, fellow-creature. There is no instance in Scripture, however, in which God is represented as forgiving without repentance; and there is no example of an injunction to men to forgive the impenitent. Such is the Divine arrangement; but it has been extensively overlooked. Tender-hearted and generous people are often heard saying of those who have greatly wronged them, and who have never repented, "Well, I forgive them." This is deemed a high exercise of piety. The error does not stop here; such people are often forward to exhort the injured among their friends, to "forgive" the transgressor, who, it may be, is not only impenitent, but actually heaps again on him fresh injuries! Now, although praised by well-meaning, but unreflecting people as a noble display of religion, nothing can be more at variance with Scripture. Such people, when corrected, will often complain of the corrector's want of "Christian charity," and accuse him of malice, apparently oblivious of the Saviour's own words, and indifferent to the Saviour's own conduct. He himself only forgives the penitent. Such a course is, moreover, at variance with reason. From the essential nature of the act, and the constitution of the human mind, it is impossible, in the true sense of the expression, to forgive an impenitent person. You may pity him, you may forbear to punish him, you may even return good for evil to the uttermost, but you cannot forgive him. The act of forgiveness signifies not only the cancelling of the guilt of the wrong-doer, and the consequent extinction of the emotions of displeasure which his deeds excited, but also the restoration of the confidence which had been lost, and the rekindling of the love which had been cooled towards him. All this is involved in forgiveness, whether human or Divine. Ver. 11-19. The miracle of the lepers is one of the most interesting upon record. Their conduct strikingly illustrates one of the worst features of human nature—ingratitude even under the heaviest load of benefaction. When they cried to the Lord for mercy, they cried together—not a voice was silent; but when the miracle was performed, and the blessing obtained, heedless, heartless, thankless, nine out of ten went about their business without a thought of their Divine Benefactor. Only one poor Samaritan returned, in humble, grateful pro-lo there! for, behold, ^mthe kingdom of God is ²within you.

22 ¶ And he said unto the disciples, The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it.

23 And they shall say to you, See here! or, see there! go not after them, nor follow them.

24 For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day.

25 But first must he suffer many things, and be ²rejected of this generation.

26 And ^oas it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in ^pthe days of the Son of man.

27 They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark; and the flood came, and destroyed them all.

28 Likewise also, as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded;

29 But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all.

30 Even thus shall it be ^qin the day when the Son of man is revealed.

31 In that day, he which shall be upon the house-top, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back.

32 ^rRemember Lot's wife.

33 Whosoever shall seek to save his life, shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life, shall preserve it.

34 I tell you, ^sin that night there shall be ^ttwo men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left.

35 Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

36 ^uTwo men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

37 And they answered and said unto him, Where, Lord? And he said unto them, ^vWheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.

2 Saying, There was in a ¹city a judge, ^bwhich feared not God, neither regarded man:

3 And there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary.

4 And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man;

5 Yet ^cbecause this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.

6 And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith.

7 And shall not God ^davenge his own elect, ^ewhich cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?

8 I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless, ^fwhen the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?

9 ¶ And he spake this parable unto certain ^gwhich trusted in themselves ^hthat they were righteous, ⁱand despised others:

10 Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican.

11 The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not ^jas other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.

12 I ^kfast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

13 And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as ^lhis eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, ^mGod be merciful to me a sinner.

14 I tell you, this man went down to his house ⁿjustified rather than the other: for ^oevery one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

15 ¶ And they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them: but when ^phis disciples saw it, they rebuked them.

16 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, ^qSuffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: ^rfor of such is the kingdom of God.

17 Verily I say unto you, ^sWhosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.

18 ¶ And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, ^twhat shall I do to inherit eternal life?

19 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? none is good, save one, that is, God.

tration, to acknowledge the mercy conferred upon him. The circumstance drew from our Lord the remarkable observation contained in ver. 18. This ingratitude, therefore, is an evil against which it behoves all the children of God to be on their guard. Ver. 20-37. The picture here drawn may well move the stoutest heart. It points, not to the past, but to the future, depicting, by anticipation, a state of things to which all flesh will one day be both witnesses and parties.

Chap. XVIII. 1-17. It is remarkable that, in proportion as things are important, their performance is difficult. This is strongly illustrated in prayer; and hence the pains the Saviour takes to inculcate importunity. No occasion is lost of exposing the hypocrisy of the Pharisees, and encouraging the humble penitent. No danger is greater than that of self-righteousness; while in the case of deep contrition, there is often a proneness to despair. The loving character of the Messiah comes forth upon all occasions. His treatment of the poor, the stranger, and little children, bespeaks the unutterable tenderness of his heart. Ver. 18-30. The present

20 Thou knowest the commandments, "Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother.

21 And he said, "All these have I kept from my youth up.

22 Now, when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing; sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me.

23 And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful: for he was very rich.

24 And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he said, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

25 For it is easier for ^aa camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they that heard it said, Who then can be saved?

27 And he said, "The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.

28 ¶ Then Peter said, "Lo, we have left all, and followed thee.

29 And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, 30 Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting.

31 ¶ Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.

32 For he shall be ^adelivered unto the Gentiles, and shall be ^bmocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on:

33 And they shall scourge him, and put him to death; ^cand the third day he shall rise again.

34 And they understood none of these things: and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

35 ¶ And it came to pass, that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the way-side begging:

36 And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant.

37 And they told him, that Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 The publican Zaccheus. 11 The ten pieces of money. 29 Christ rideth into Jerusalem, 41 and sweepeth over it. 45 He purgeth the temple.

AND Jesus entered and passed through Jericho.

2 And, behold, there was a man named Zaccheus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.

3 And ^ahe sought to see Jesus who he was; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature.

4 And he ran before, and climbed up into ^aa sycamore-tree to see him: for he was to pass that way.

5 And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, "Zaccheus, make haste, and come down; ^afor to-day I must abide at thy house.

6 And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully.

7 And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.

8 And Zaccheus stood, and said unto the Lord, "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man ^bby false accusation, ^cI restore him four-fold.

9 And Jesus said unto him, ^bThis day is salvation come to this house, forso-much as he also is a son of Abraham.

10 For ^athe Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

11 ¶ And as they heard these things, he added, and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because ^athey case serves very impressively to illustrate the hold the world has on human nature. The ruler seemed sincere, and anxious, upon his own terms, to secure eternal life; and hence, when the true test was applied, he sank under it. He loved earth more than heaven; his riches imperilled his soul! Like many who have lived in every age, he desired to serve both God and Mammon—to possess in the fullest sense both worlds—to be one of those the Psalmist describes as men who "have their portion in this life," and one of those who are "rich towards God." Ver. 31-43. Our Lord was accustomed, in speaking of his person, character, and work, to refer to the Scriptures of the Prophets: his hearers, therefore, had the means of testing everything by an appeal to the written Word. The disciples exhibited the blindness of their countrymen, notwithstanding the unparalleled advantages they possessed. They were altogether unacquainted with the true character their Messiah was to sustain, and the nature of the kingdom he was to set up. This ignorance continued till the happy hour when they were endued with a power from on high, which corrected their prejudice, purified their hearts, and prepared them for the great duty of converting the world.

Chap. XIX. 1-11. In the East, hospitality is a sacred rite. There are no places for public entertainment; the "rest-houses" are only open places to shelter passengers from the sun and rain. The stranger, therefore, on passing through a village, and seeing a respectable house, and finding the master, puts out his hand, merely saying,—"A pilgrim," or "A traveller." He is then asked to be seated, and after a few questions about his jour-thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.

12 He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.

13 And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come.

14 But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.

15 And it came to pass, that, when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

16 Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17 And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant: because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.

18 And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.

19 And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.

20 And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin:

21 For I feared thee, because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou laydest not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.

22 And he saith unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:

23 Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?

24 And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.

25 (And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.)

26 For I say unto you, That unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

29 And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples, 30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which, at your entering, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.

31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him.

32 And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.

35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 And as he went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen, 38 Saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven and glory in the highest.

39 And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he answered and said unto them, I tell you, that if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.

41 ¶ And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, 42 Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

ney, his wants are supplied. We have few instances of a change of heart so rapid and so thorough as that of Zaccheus. He received the Lord with joy, and that joy had in it an evangelical principle. The power of the Master clearly accompanied the words, "Come down," enlightening and renovating him in a moment. While he believed with the heart, in a manner the most open and sincere, he confessed with the mouth to facts which always furnish the surest test of sincerity. The last demon to be cast out by the grace of God is covetousness. The idea, therefore, of a wealthy man giving half his property to the poor, and restoring fourfold to all whom, in the course of his profession or business, he has injured, is certainly such as to command the most entire confidence in the truth of the contrition of the man that could so speak and act. Ver. 12-27. It is supposed that there is here an allusion to the kings of Judah going to Rome to receive investiture from the emperors, and then returning in the full glory of royal power. The principle of giving to those who have, is one founded in human nature. Men of wealth and station everywhere act in the same way towards their officers and dependants at the present hour. In proportion as people prove themselves trustworthy, they receive further tokens of confidence; whereas, when the reverse is the case, a contrary course is pursued. Ver. 28-40. It will be observed with what care the Saviour, throughout his public life, provides for the fulfilment of the predictions of the prophets concerning himself. The time was now come to fulfil the language of a particular prophecy, and the means were at hand. The colt and the children immediately appeared, and the region rang with, "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven, and glory in the highest!" Ver. 41-48. We have here the Saviour casting a glance of compassion into the future, and anticipating the terrible events which awaited his people, which were all present and palpable to his omniscient eye. But amidst reproach

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, 44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; ¹because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.

45 And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;

46 Saying unto them, It is written, My house is the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves.

47 And ²he taught daily in the temple. But the chief priests, and the scribes, and the chief of the people, sought to destroy him;

48 And ¹could not find what they might do: for all the people ²were very attentive to hear him.

CHAPTER XX.

¹ Christ avoucheth his authority. ⁹ The parable of the vineyard. ²⁰ Of giving tribute to Cesar. ²⁷ Of the resurrection.

AND it came to pass, that on one of those days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the gospel, the chief priests and the scribes came upon him, with the elders,

2 And spake unto him, saying, "Tell us, by what authority doest thou these things? or ¹who is he that gave thee this authority?"

3 And he answered and said unto them, I will also ask you one thing; and answer me:

4 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

5 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, "Why then believed ye him not?"

6 But and if we say, Of men; ¹all the people will stone us: ²for they be persuaded that John was a prophet.

7 And they answered, That they could not tell whence it was.

8 And Jesus said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

9 ¶ Then began he to speak to the people this parable; A certain man ¹planted a vineyard, ²and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time.

10 And at the season he ¹sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: but the husbandmen ¹beat him, and sent him away empty.

11 And again he sent another servant: and they beat him also, and ²entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty.

12 And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

13 Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? ¹I will send my beloved son: ²it may be they will reverence him when they see him.

14 But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is "the heir: come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours."

15 So ¹they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. ²What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?

18 Whosoever ²shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

19 ¶ And the chief priests and the scribes ¹the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

20 And they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so ¹they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

21 And they asked him, saying, Master, we know that thou ¹sayest and teachest rightly, neither ²acceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God ¹truly; and pity, he never forgot the duties of the moment. Here we behold him entering the temple, and driving from it those who so unworthily occupied it; there he preached to the delight and edification of the multitudes, who never tired listening to him. In all these his works of love, the only return meditated by the authorities was the means of effecting his destruction!

23 But he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, ¹Why tempt ye me?

Chap. XX. 1-18. The parable here spoken carried with it such clearness of application, and such force of conviction, that the priests, scribes, and elders, taking it to themselves, exclaimed, "God forbid!" But exclamation is not repentance, which alone can bring deliverance. The deprecation was, therefore, in due course followed by destruction. Ver. 19-26. The malice of the priests and scribes was such that they seemed to make it their daily business to devise means for cutting off the Lord of glory; but all was in vain till the appointed time. Ver. 27-47. Many of our Lord's most important lessons originated in the circumstances of the hour. The pertinacity of the Sadducees brought forth a reply which crushed for ever their own peculiar tenet. The question put in ver. 41 confounded the scribes; but that which perplexed them can now be readily answered by every well-taught Sunday-scholar. As human, Christ was David's son; as Divine, he was David's Lord. The malice of the Pharisees only brought upon them fresh rebuke and further exposure. On the present occasion they received an awful reproof, not in a corner, but "in the audience of all the people," which added to its pungency. Never were rapacity and hypocrisy more strikingly developed. Their "long prayers" were a mere and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Cesar's.

25 And he said unto them, "Render therefore unto Cesar the things which be Cesar's, and 'unto God the things which be God's.

26 And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

27 ¶ Then came to him certain of "the Sadducees, which deny that there is any resurrection; and they asked him, 28 Saying, Master, Moses wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

29 There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, "and died without children.

30 And the second took her to wife, and he died childless.

31 And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also: and they left no children, and died.

32 Last of all the woman "died also.

33 Therefore "in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife.

34 And Jesus, answering, said unto them, The "children of this world "marry, and are given in marriage:

35 But they which shall be "accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, "neither marry, nor are given in marriage:

36 Neither "can they die any more: for "they are equal unto the angels; and are "the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.

37 Now, that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

38 For he is not "a God of the dead, but of the living: "for all live unto him.

39 Then certain of the scribes, answering, said, Master, thou hast well said.

40 And after that "they durst not ask him any question at all.

41 ¶ And he said unto them, How say they that "Christ is David's son?

42 And David himself saith in the book of Psalms, "The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 43 Till I make "thine enemies thy footstool.

44 David therefore calleth him Lord, "how is he then his son?

45 ¶ Then, in the audience of all the people, he said unto his disciples,

46 Beware of the scribes, which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts;

47 Which devour widows' houses, and for a shew make long prayers: the same shall receive greater damnation.

CHAPTER XXI.

5 The destruction of the temple and city is foretold.
26 The signs of the last day.

AND he looked up, and saw the rich men casting their gifts into the treasury.

2 And he saw also a certain poor widow casting in thither "two mites.

3 And he said, "Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in "more than they all.

4 For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in "all the living that she had.

5 ¶ And as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said,

6 As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which "there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

7 ¶ And they asked him, saying, Master, but when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass?

8 And he said, "Take heed that ye be not deceived: "for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them.

9 But "when ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; "but the end is not by and by.

10 Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:

11 And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights "and great signs shall there be from heaven.

12 But "before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake.

13 And "it shall turn to you for a testimony.

14 "Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer:

15 For "I will give you a mouth and wisdom, "which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.

pretence. In these they had no regard to the honour of God, and were only concerned to secure confidence, in order to rob and plunder the desolate and the defenceless. It might have been supposed that the property of widows would have been the last thing they would have laid their cruel hands on; but, without principle and without compassion, they were only intent on the gratification of their own lust of lucre, regardless of the affliction and sorrow that might flow from their course.

Chap. XXI. 1-24. The case of the poor widow will remain to the end of the world an object of special interest. The doctrine here set forth is, that the magnitude of gifts in the sight of God is determined solely by the circumstances of the giver. The fact is encouraging to the poor, and admonitory to the rich. Our Lord bore frequent testimony to the woes which awaited the nation, and the destruction which would overtake both the city and the temple, but his words were unheeded.

16 And ^{ye} shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; ^{and some} of you shall they cause to be put to death.

17 And ^{ye} shall be hated of all men ^{for my name's sake}.

18 But ^{there shall not an hair of your head perish}.

19 ^{In your patience possess ye your souls}.

20 And ^{when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh}.

21 Then let them which are in Judea ^{flee to the mountains}; and let them which are ^{in the midst of it} depart out: and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto.

22 For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled.

23 But ^{woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days!} for there shall be ^{great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people}.

24 And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be ^{led away captive into all nations}: and ^{Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled}.

25 ¶ And there shall be ^{signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars}; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring;

26 Men's ^{hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth}: ^{for the powers of heaven shall be shaken}.

27 And then shall they ^{see the Son of man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory}.

28 And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your ^{redemption draweth nigh}.

29 And he spake to them a parable; Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees;

30 When they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand.

31 So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that ^{the kingdom of God is nigh at hand}.

32 Verily I say unto you, ^{This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled}.

CHAPTER XXII.

3 Judas moved to betray Christ. ° The passover prepared. 19 The Lord's supper instituted.

NOW °the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the Passover.

2 And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him; for they feared the people.

3 ¶ Then °entered Satan into Judas surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve.

4 And he °went his way, and communed with the chief priests and captains, how he might betray him unto them.

5 And they were glad, and covenanted to give him money.

6 And he promised, and sought opportunity to betray him unto them ^{in the absence of the multitude}.

7 ¶ Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be killed.

8 And he sent Peter and John, saying, °Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat.

9 And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare?

10 And he said unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in.

11 And ye shall say unto the goodman of the house, °The Master saith unto thee, °Where is the guest-chamber, where I

They were not even understood. The facts of history are the best comment on this awful prophecy. The Romans did not suddenly besiege Jerusalem; it was not till they had obtained several victories over the Jews, and become masters of the country, that they proceeded to finish their conquest by the siege. The 24th verse is at this moment receiving its fulfilment. A heathen temple was subsequently built where that of Solomon had stood, and a Turkish mosque pollutes it at the present hour. The Emperor Julian, from the hatred he bore to Christianity, determined to rebuild the temple, and restore the Jews; but his purposes were defeated by the eruption of balls of fire from the ground, which consumed the workmen. Infidelity, of course, affects to treat this as a fable; but the testimonies which have come down to us are of a nature to inspire full confidence in the truth of the record. Ver. 25-38. What is here said of the sun, moon, and stars may be judged as emblematic of the terrible convulsions which were to follow, by which the Jewish commonwealth was completely overthrown, and everything appertaining to it overtaken by utter destruction. Nothing like it had ever occurred to any nation.

Chap. XXII. 1-20. This feast lasted seven days, during which the Jews ate their bread without leaven, to commemorate the haste with which they left Egypt, which was such that they had not time to leaven their dough, but took it with the kneading-troughs, as it was. This is an emblem of the unleavened bread of sincerity shall eat the passover with my disciples?

12 And he shall shew you ^aa large upper room furnished: there make ready.

13 And they went, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

14 And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.

15 And he said unto them, ²With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer:

16 For I say unto you, ^bI will not any more eat thereof, ¹until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

17 And he ¹took the cup, and ¹gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves:

18 For I say unto you, ^mI will not drink of ²the fruit of the vine, ^ountil the kingdom of God shall come.

19 ¶ And ^phe took bread, and ^qgave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This ¹is my body, which is ²given for you: ^tthis do in remembrance of me.

20 Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, ²This cup ¹is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you.

21 ¶ But, behold, ²the hand of him that betrayeth me ¹is with me on the table.

22 And ²truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined: ²but woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed!

23 And they began to enquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing.

24 ¶ And there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest.

25 And he said unto them, ²The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors.

26 But ye ²shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve.

27 For whether ¹is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am among you as he that serveth.

28 Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations:

29 And ^bI appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me;

30 That ye may ^ceat and drink at my table in my kingdom, ^dand sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

31 ¶ And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may ^esift you as wheat:

32 But ^fI have prayed for thee, that ^gthy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, ^hstrengthen thy brethren.

33 And he said unto him, Lord, ⁱI am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death.

34 And he said, I tell thee, Peter, ^kthe cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

35 ¶ And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.

36 Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.

37 For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, ¹And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end.

38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, ^mIt is enough.

39 ¶ And he came out, and went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.

40 And when he was at the place, he said unto them, ⁿPray that ye enter not into temptation.

41 And he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, ^oand kneeled down, and prayed, 42 Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this ^pcup from me; nevertheless, ^qnot my will, but thine, be done.

43 And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

44 And, being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly: and ^rhis sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

45 And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow, 46 And said unto them, ^sWhy sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, and truth with which the Gospel feast was to be celebrated. The foreknowledge of the Lord was once more strikingly indicated by the instruction he gave as to the man that would be met bearing the pitcher of water. Things now begin to acquire a peculiar and unparalleled solemnity. This was the last passover the Lord was to celebrate, and his death was now at hand, when he should offer up himself a sacrifice to take away the sin of the world. His own words are tender in the extreme; it is the last time he will eat with them in the present world. The institution of the Supper was the great concluding act of his public ministry; while the Passover closed the ancient, the Supper introduced the new dispensation. It had clearly the most distinct and pointed reference to the atonement he was about to make for sin, by which he would open up a new and living way for the return of a lost world. So long as the institution shall be observed, it will be its own monument, and, in its own simple majesty, exhibit and demonstrate the fact that the Lord Jesus died for sin according to the Scripture; that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin; and that through the blood that was about to be shed, there was no guilt that might not be removed. While the table of the Lord shall be spread, according to the Divine appointment, it will constitute a standing memorial of the last, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, [†]betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

49 When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?

50 [†]And one of them smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear.

51 And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.

52 Then [†]Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves?

53 When [†]I was daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is your hour, and [†]the power of darkness.

54 [†]Then took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high priest's house. And Peter followed afar off.

55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.

56 But [†]a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.

57 And [†]he denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not.

58 And, after a little while, [†]another saw him, and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not.

59 And about the space of one hour after, another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him; for he is a Galilean.

60 And Peter said, Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, [†]the cock crew.

61 And the Lord [†]turned, and [†]looked upon Peter: [†]and Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, [†]Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

62 And Peter went out, and wept bitterly.

63 [†]And [†]the men that held Jesus [†]mocked him, and smote him.

64 And when they had [†]blindfolded

CHAPTER XXIII.

2 Jesus is accused before Pilate, 14 who is desirous to release him. 27 The destruction of Jerusalem foretold. 46 Christ's death and burial.

AND the whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate.

2 And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, and [†]forbidding to give tribute to Cesar, saying [†]that he himself is Christ a King.

3 And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou [†]the King of the Jews? And he answered him and said, Thou sayest it.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, [†]I find no fault in this man.

5 And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.

6 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

8 [†]And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: [†]for he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; [†]and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in that mercy and truth have met together, and righteousness and peace have embraced each other, and that the Son of God has been lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Ver 21-71. The events which now succeed, to the end of the chapter, are so numerous, important, and precious, as to preclude further comment. In proportion to their magnitude is their simplicity; they are pre-eminently matter for meditation. The history of our Lord had now reached a crisis; the things concerning him had an end. The one great event only awaited him, and a few hours would realise the consummation of the world's redemption.

Chap. XXIII. 1-33. "The whole multitude" was probably composed mainly of the priests, scribes, elders, and officers of the temple, with their servants and dependants. The common people, as a body, were always true to the Saviour, and hence the fear in which the authorities that thirsted for his blood were constantly kept because of them. When an object is to be gained, wicked men stick at nothing; they must have known that they uttered falsehoods in what they said concerning the tribute to Cesar, and the kingship of Christ, as constituting a rivalry to that of the Roman emperor. The part acted by Pilate presented a strange mixture of cowardice and conscientiousness. While he declined to crucify, he yet offered to chastise the Lord Jesus, although the act would have been, in principle, as unjust as crucifixion, forasmuch as he had done no wrong. The malefactors who, in the course of Providence, were provided for the occasion, not only much added to the awful interest of the scene, but to the fulfilment of Scripture, unknown to those by whom it was many words; ^abut he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood, ^band vehemently accused him.

11 And ^cHerod with his men of war ^dset him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate.

12 ¶ And the same day ^ePilate and Herod were made friends together; for before they were at enmity between themselves.

13 ¶ And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests, and the rulers, and the people,

14 Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people; and, behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him:

15 No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him.

16 ^f¶ I will therefore chastise him, and release him.

17 (For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast.)

18 And they cried out all at once, saying, ^g¶ Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas:

19 (Who for a certain ^hsedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

20 Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them.

21 But they cried, saying, ⁱ¶ Crucify him, crucify him.

22 And he said unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go.

23 And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified; and the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.

24 And ^jPilate ^kgave sentence that it should be as they required.

25 ¶ And he released unto them him that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; ^lbut he delivered Jesus to their will.

26 And as they led him away, ^mthey laid hold upon one Simon, ⁿa Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 ¶ And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus, turning unto them, said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 For, behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.

30 Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.

31 For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

32 ¶ And there were also two others, malefactors, led with him to be put to death.

33 And when they were come to the place which is called ^oCalvary, there ^pthey crucified him, and the malefactors; one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 ¶ Then said Jesus, ^q¶ Father, forgive them; for ^rthey know not what they do. ^s¶ And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

35 ¶ And the people stood beholding; and the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be ^tChrist, the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers also ^umocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar.

37 And saying, If thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself.

38 And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 ¶ And ^vone of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

40 But the other, answering, rebuked him, saying, ^wDost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

41 And ^xwe indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: ^ybut this man hath done nothing amiss.

42 And he said unto Jesus, ^z¶ Lord, remember me ^{aa}when thou comest into thy kingdom.

43 And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, ^{ab}To-day shalt thou be ^{ac}with me in paradise.

44 ¶ And ^{ad}it was about the sixth hour, and ^{ae}there was darkness over all the ^{af}earth until the ninth hour.

45 And the sun was darkened, ^{ag}and brought about. The prayer of our Lord to the Father for forgiveness to his murderers, is the most extraordinary recorded in his whole history. No outrage, injustice, falsehood, or cruelty, could extinguish his pity. As none of the prayers of the Lord Jesus went unheard, there is reason to conclude that the larger body of those present formed a part of the first converts. The three thousand Jews who, on the day of Pentecost, received the Word, were directly charged by Peter with having crucified his Master—a circumstance which shows that Peter knew them to be, not those that might be considered partial disciples, or at least friends and frequent attendants on the Lord's ministry, but those who had mainly arrayed themselves against him. Ver. 34-56. The conduct of the malefactor, who rebuked his fellow-criminal and fellow-sufferer, is very remarkable; nothing can account for it, but an immediate illumination of his soul issuing in conversion. His conduct, under the circumstances, demonstrates his faith, love, and confidence. He here confesses sin, reproves his companion, and in the face of the encircling multitude of the wicked and the great, he humbly testifies, with his dying lips, to the innocence of the Lord Jesus. The prayer he offers, moreover, implies faith in his Divine character the vail of the temple was rent in the midst.

46 ¶ And when Jesus had ^ocried with a loud voice, he said, ^pFather, into thy hands I commend my spirit: and having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

47 ¶ Now, when the centurion saw what was done, ^qhe glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.

48 And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts, and returned.

49 And all his acquaintance, and the women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.

50 ¶ And, behold, ^rthere was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man, and a just:

51 (The same ^shad not consented to the counsel and deed of them:) he was of ^tArimathea, a city of the Jews; who also himself ^uwaited for the kingdom of God.

52 This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

53 ^vAnd he took it down, and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

54 And that day was ^wthe preparation, and the sabbath drew on.

55 ¶ And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

56 And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath-day, according to the commandment.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Christ's resurrection declared to the women. 13 He himself appeareth, 36 giveth a charge to the apostles, 50 and ascendeth.

NOW, upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

2 And ^athey found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

3 And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

4 And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, ^btwo men stood by them in shining garments:

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye ^cthe living among the dead?

Mark 16. 4,

10.

6 He is not here, but is risen: remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee.

7 Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

8 And ^dthey remembered his words.

9 And ^ereturned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest.

10 It was ^fMary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary ^gthe mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.

11 And their words seemed to them as ^hidle tales, and they believed them not.

12 ¶ Then arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre; and, stooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves, and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

13 ¶ And, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.

14 And ⁱthey talked together of all these things which had happened.

15 And it came to pass, that, while they communed ^jtogether, and reasoned, ^kJesus himself drew near, and went with them.

16 But their eyes were holden that they should not know him.

17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

18 And the one of them, whose name was ^lCleopas, answering, said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, ^mConcerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people;

20 And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But ⁿwe trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and besides all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done.

22 Yea, ^oand certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;

23 And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also and his spiritual kingdom. Nothing can more remarkably shew the power and the sovereignty of Divine grace; it is certainly an all-prevailing argument against despair, although it supplies no encouragement to defer penitence and faith to the last hour. His wonderful testimony, and his earnest supplication, received, on the spot, and from the lips of his dying Lord, an answer which filled his own soul with peace, and excited feelings of derision, or astonishment, according to the spirit and the temper of the bystanders.

Chap. XXIV. 1-12. Angels, from first to last, had much to do with the advent of the Lord Jesus; they were more especially busied about the events which accompanied his decease; they strengthened him in the garden, they watched his sepulchre, they removed the stone, they waited the arrival of his friends, and they were present at his ascension. The angels at the sepulchre indicated a perfect acquaintance with all the facts of the case, even extending to the conversation which the Lord had held with his disciples, when he was yet in Galilee, as to the necessity of his death, and the certainty of his resurrection. Ver. 18-35. It has been attempted to gloss the words, "their eyes were holden," by representing it as the result of a confusion in the medium of vision, the air being so disposed that they could not seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.

24 And certain of them which were with us ¹went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said; but him they saw not.

25 Then he said unto them, ²O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!

26 ³Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?

27 And ⁴beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.

28 And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went: and ⁵he made as though he would have gone further.

29 But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us; for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.

30 And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, ⁶he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.

31 And ⁷their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he ⁸vanished out of their sight.

32 And they said one to another, ⁹"Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he ¹⁰opened to us the scriptures?"

33 And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, 34 Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and ¹¹hath appeared to Simon.

35 And they told what things ¹²were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

36 ¹³¶ And as they thus spake, ¹⁴"Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, ¹⁵"Peace be unto you.

37 But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit.

38 And he said unto them, Why are ye

39 Behold ¹⁷my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; ¹⁸for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.

40 And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them ¹⁹his hands and ²⁰his feet.

discern who he was. Some Evangelical expositors have taken most grievous liberties with the language, contending that there is "nothing in it supernatural." To find such men as Dr Adam Clarke and Dr Gill talking after this fashion, is alike surprising and mortifying. They have only to look to ver. 31, where it is declared, that when our Lord had finished his discourse and given thanks at the table, "their eyes were opened, and they knew him." Ver. 36-53. The closing events are full of beauty. The Saviour's treatment of his disciples is marked by love unutterable. His parting words were, in an eminent degree, calculated to strengthen their hands, and to encourage their hearts. Sending them forth to make a conquest of the world, he gave them to understand that in this enterprise they were only to be instruments in the hands of Omnipotence. With the promise of such a power, they might bid defiance to everything opposing, and go forth in the confidence of universal triumph. But the promise given to them remains to their spiritual posterity. By them the conquest was realised only in part. The greater portion of the land is still to be possessed; but so sure as the work has been fairly begun, it will be finished to the praise of his grace, and the whole earth will be filled with his glory.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST JOHN.

The Gospel of John is marked by distinct peculiarities. It partakes less of narrative than the others, and supplies a larger amount of doctrine, discussion, and devotion. The topics also of these discourses indicate that they were selected with the special view of recording what the Saviour had taught concerning his own person, and the blessings he confers on his people. The testimony of John the Baptist, as here set forth, is most explicit, touching the divinity, atonement, and salvation of Christ, of whom he speaks, as "the Word made flesh"—"full of grace and truth"—"of whose fulness all receive"—"the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world"—and "the Son of God." This Gospel has sometimes been incorrectly spoken of as supplemental to the others; but it is complete in itself, and, in divers respects, superior to any of them. The narrative is in a great degree original; from about the middle of the sixth chapter to the end of the eleventh, the whole is entirely new and unutterably precious. Then the events which preceded and made way for the Lord's crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension, though for substance the same, are enriched with a great variety of new and interesting circumstances. Special importance attaches to the unspeakably affectionate and pathetic discourses of our Lord with his disciples before his crucifixion, contained in chaps. xiv., xv., and xvi., in which repeated and emphatic promises of the mission of the Holy Spirit are set forth; and to his sublime and marvellous prayer for his disciples, and for his Church to the end of time, which closes with the seventeenth chapter. These are the most important portions of New Testament Inspiration. It deserves notice, too, that it was reserved for John to record the affecting circumstances connected with the mother of Jesus at the crucifixion, when he consigned her to the special care of John, directing her to look upon him as a son, and him to view her as a mother. The repeated meetings with the disciples, also, on the First Day of the Week, is a highly significant fact as it regards the institution of the Lord's Day. Not the least striking of the many remarkable occurrences was the conduct of Thomas, and the Saviour's address to him. Of the same interesting character was the threefold interrogation of Peter, touching his love and his restoration to his Master's confidence. John, also, more than any other of the Evangelists, is precise in his statements respecting the Holy Spirit under the character of "the Comforter," a title peculiar to this Gospel. It is here set forth, also, that the special office of the Holy Spirit would be to glorify Christ by taking the things that belonged to him and shewing them to his people.

Chap. I. 1-5. In the other Gospels we are left to infer the deity of Christ from his miracles, doctrines, and the various displays of his glory and perfections which they record; but John, not satisfied with this, opens his narrative with a distinct and emphatic avowal of this fundamental truth. From the language here used, it is clear that Jesus Christ himself, who was before all things, and who created all things, was himself no part of that creation. Whatever existed before creation must have been eternal, and as the Author of being to all that is, his own being could not be derivative; and, therefore, the Lord Jesus is the Eternal Son of God, one with the Father. Jesus was the Word before he was man, and, therefore, not as such; not the flesh, for the Word was made flesh; nor his human soul, for self-subsistence, deity, eternity, and the creation of all things, can never be ascribed to that. So important did the subject appear to the eye of the Apostle, that he reiterates his statement in various forms, repeating the eternity of Christ, his distinct personality, and proper deity. Ver. 6-18. It was the primary object of John's mission to bear witness to the approaching Light from heaven, that men might be pre-

19 ¶ And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20 ¶ And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.

21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No.

22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us: what sayest thou of thyself?

23 He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.

25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

26 John answered them, saying, I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not;

27 He it is, who, coming after me, is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

28 These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

29 ¶ The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world!

30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me; for he was before me.

31 And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.

32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

35 ¶ Again, the next day after, John stood, and two of his disciples;

36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God!

37 And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou?

39 He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour.

40 One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother.

41 He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messias, which is, being interpreted, the Christ.

42 And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is, by interpretation, A stone.

43 ¶ The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me.

44 Now Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter.

45 Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

46 And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see.

47 Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

48 Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee.

pared to receive it. John's own light was reflected and derived from his Master, the Sun of righteousness, then just rising. By "receiving" Jesus, is to be understood simply believing on his name; and to all that did so, he gave the power, privilege, or legal right of adoption, whereby they became the children of God, enjoying all the blessings resulting from that relation. The "fulness" of Jesus is an expression significant of everything required by his people—light, wisdom, grace, truth, righteousness, sanctification, guidance, protection, and all that is connected with their present and everlasting welfare. Ver. 19-28. The appearance of John at length forced upon the heads of the nation an inquiry as to his character and pretensions. From John's answer it is clear that they were then expecting the Christ, otherwise he would not have said, "I am not the Christ." They appear also, to some extent, to have studied the prophecies, since they asked whether John was the Christ, or Elias, or that Prophet, meaning three separate individuals. There was at that time a vague general confidence of the arrival of the Messiah, together with Elias, and that Prophet mentioned by Moses as the distinguished personage who should resemble him, and command the obedience of the people. The difficulty was increased when they found that John professed to be neither the one nor the other. Now, although not literally Elias, John was the person pointed to, as the Saviour himself shews; while "Christ" and "that Prophet" were identical. These general expressions signify, not three, but two individuals—Christ and his forerunner. Ver. 29-51. John is here most explicit touching both the character and the work of Jesus, "the Lamb of God," and his "taking away the sin of the world"—expressions which, explained through the medium of sacrifice, implied his death for that end. In ver. 33, John is very distinct on the doctrine of the Holy Spirit as resting on and baptizing the Lord Jesus. So strongly had the idea of the Saviour's vicarious character and sacrifice possessed the mind of the Baptist, that again, in ver. 36, on seeing Jesus, he exclaimed, "Behold the Lamb of God!" The chapter is one of unparalleled fulness respecting the fundamentals of our faith. There is here a basis on which the hearts of unnumbered millions may rest with confidence. He who made all things, and 49 Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel.

50 Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig-tree, believest thou? thou shalt see greater things than these.

51 And he saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

CHAPTER II

1 Christ turneth water into wine; 12 departeth into Capernaum, thence unto Jerusalem; 18 and purgeth the temple.

AND the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there.

2 And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage.

3 And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.

4 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come.

5 His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

6 And there were set there six water-pots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece.

7 Jesus saith unto them, Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8 And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.

9 When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was, (but the servants which drew the water knew,) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,

10 And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

11 This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.

12 After this he went down to Capernaum, he, and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples; and they continued there not many days.

13 And the Jews' passover was at hand; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem,

14 And found in the temple those that sold oxen, and sheep, and doves, and the changers of money sitting:

15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables;

16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence: make not my Father's house an house of merchandise.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

18 Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, What sign shewest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things?

19 Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

21 But he spake of the temple of his body.

22 When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

23 Now, when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast-day, many by whom all things consist, is able to save to the uttermost every soul of man who turns from his iniquities, and reposes confidence in His blood.

Chap. II. 1-11. This was the third day from that on which Jesus had taken his journey from Bethany into Galilee. Jesus, with his disciples, was invited to the marriage, probably from the circumstance of some relationship, which may be inferred from the interest that Mary took about the supply of wine to the guests. There is no mention here made of Joseph, who had been gathered to his fathers previous to Jesus entering on his public ministry. These marriage feasts were great occasions among the Jews, lasting throughout the long period of seven days; and these days, probably, were now drawing to an end, and provisions failing. The address of Jesus to his mother, "Woman, what have I to do with thee?" somewhat grates upon the English ear. The translation, however, is inaccurate. It is literally, "What is that to me and thee?" In the English idiom, "What is that to us? it is no concern of ours." There is nothing disrespectful in addressing his mother as "woman." In ancient times this was common even to females of the first rank, and the corresponding phrase to men of the highest distinction. It is probable that Mary was impelled to act as she did, by a power of which she was not conscious, and led to expect the performance of a miracle; for she says to the servants, "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it," clearly anticipating something important; nor was she disappointed. The governor of the feast was either the principal guest, who sat at the upper end of the table, or one whose office was to take care that there should be neither want nor extravagance. Ver. 12-25. In the present case, the miracle served to confirm the faith of the few disciples that gathered around the Saviour. A miracle, as implying a suspension of the laws of nature, suggests either Divine power, or power of a supernatural character. On this occasion, it was considered a manifestation of glory, and as such it produced a deep sensation amongst all who beheld it. The debased spirit of the Jews was strongly indicated by their conduct towards the temple, which had been converted into a marketplace. The great historian of the Jews, Josephus, states that 256,000 victims were offered at the passover—a number which might at first sight seem incredible; but when it is remembered how great were the multitudes that partook of it, the provision was not in excess. Much extortion was practised in connexion with the matter, which redounded to the profit of the priests, who sold the licences to vend the commodities required at a very exorbitant rate. It does not follow that violence was used by Jesus in removing from the temple those people who so unworthily profaned it. The scourge might be the symbol of authority waved in the hand, while he commanded them to depart. A scourge of believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did.

24 But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men, 25 And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

CHAPTER III.

1 Christ teacheth Nicodemus the necessity of regeneration.
23 The baptism, witness, and doctrine of John concerning Christ.

THERE was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews:

2 The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, "we know that thou art a teacher come from God: ^bfor no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, "Except a man be born ¹again, ^dhe cannot see the kingdom of God.

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be ^eborn of water, ^fand of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is ^gborn of the flesh is flesh; and ^hthat which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, ⁱ'Ye must be born ²again.

8 The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: ^kso is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, ^l'We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ^m'ye receive not our witness.

12 If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?

13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, ^abut he that came down from heaven, ^beven the Son of man which is in heaven.

14 ^cAnd as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, ^deven so must the Son of man be lifted up;

15 That ^ewhosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

16 ^fFor ^gGod so loved the world, that he ^h'gave his only begotten Son, ⁱthat whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

17 For ^jGod sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; ^kbut that the world through him might be saved.

18 ^lHe that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

19 And ^mthis is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, ⁿ'because their deeds were evil.

20 For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be ^oreproved.

21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

22 After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

23 ^pAnd John also was baptizing in ^qEnon, near to Salim, because there was much water there; and they came, and were baptized:

24 For ^rJohn was not yet cast into prison.

25 ^sThen there arose a question between ^tsome of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.

26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest small cords was adapted to nothing more. The people were probably aware of the illegality of their own conduct, since, by law, all who profaned the temple might be slain, or scourged, by any person who found them so doing. The course of Jesus, nevertheless, excited attention, and promoted inquiry as to the authority by which he acted. To this demand he replied in a manner which, however obscure at the moment, was afterwards abundantly cleared up. It was too early at this time to speak explicitly of the sufferings which awaited him, and of the afflictions by which his disciples would be overtaken. They clearly understood him to speak of the temple, and considered his language preposterous. The erection of the temple, built by Herod the Great, occupied the long period of forty-six years. This undertaking was commenced about sixteen years before the birth of Jesus, and the transactions here related took place in the thirtieth year of our Lord, which makes the term forty-six years. Although it is said that many believed on Jesus when they saw his miracles, there is no reason to consider them all as converts; they did not "believe with the heart unto righteousness, and with the mouth make confession unto salvation." Their understandings were convinced, and in a vague and general way they considered him as the Messiah, taking his miracles as a sufficient proof of his mission.

Chap. III. 1-13. The expression, "Except a man be born again," or born from above, signifies that great change which is wrought on the souls of men by the Spirit of God. The phrase, among the Jews, was often used loosely. Proselytes were said to be "born again"—brought into the world a second time—and by that means rendered sons of Abraham. The language of the Saviour is peculiarly emphatic, as indicative of the absolute necessity for this change in order to salvation. More was meant than a mere transition from the Gentile world into the Jewish nation by an external rite or ceremony. It indicated nothing less than being renewed in the spirit of their minds, becoming partakers of the Divine nature, having Christ formed in their hearts, and his image stamped on their souls. The terms "water" and "the Spirit" here used are significant of the same thing, the Holy Spirit, just as baptism with the Holy Ghost and with fire represents the Spirit's purifying influence, and not the addition of literal fire. The work witness, behold, the same baptizeth, *and all men come to him.

27 John answered and said, A man can *receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.

28 Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, ^bbut that I am sent before him.

29 He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice. ^cThis my joy therefore is fulfilled.

30 He must increase, but I must decrease.

31 He that cometh from above is above all; he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: ^dhe that cometh from heaven is above all.

32 And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth; and no man receiveth his testimony.

of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with ⁱhis journey, sat thus on the well: and it was about the sixth hour.

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water. Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.

8 (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)

9 Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? (for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.)

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, ^jIf thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; ^kthou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee ^lliving water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water?

12 Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again:

14 But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him ^mshall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 The woman saith unto him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.

of the Spirit is likened to the motion of the wind. About the fact there can be no doubt, although the mode of action is undiscovered. A "master in Israel" signified a teacher of the law, either as a public preacher in the synagogue or in the theological schools. It therefore behoved Nicodemus, from the position he occupied, to be acquainted with these things. The proselytes were washed with water, and, that done, they were considered newly born; and the prophets foretold that the fruit of the Spirit would be inward purity—holiness of heart and of life. An opportunity was taken to impress Nicodemus with the conviction, that, from the natural blindness of man, he was but ill adapted to comprehend things of a spiritual nature. Ver. 14-21. Our Lord followed up his mysterious reference by one the most explicit, touching the vital truths of the Gospel. Nowhere is it set forth with more clearness, beauty, and power than in these verses. Ver. 22-36. The deportment of John is a striking illustration of the humility and devotedness of his spirit. He knew his place and kept it. He had no desire to attract notice to himself, unless as the hand that pointed to his Master. The closing verse is an awful testimony to the consequences which must result from unbelief. Nowhere is the connexion between faith and life, unbelief and death, more emphatically set forth. John not only testifies that Jesus spoke the words of God, but that the Holy Spirit was given to him "without measure," that he was the object of the Father's love, and the Ruler of all things. The entire chapter, therefore, occupies a peculiar place in the pages of inspiration, as setting forth the doctrine of regeneration by the Holy Ghost, and justification by faith in the blood of the Lamb.

Chap. IV. 1-26. It is worthy of notice, that Jesus himself did not baptize. This was work of so secondary a character, that it might be done by any of his disciples. Paul testifies to the same fact, that Jesus sent him, not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel. In the case both of Jesus and of Paul, their converts did not refuse baptism, although at the hands of inferior administrators. This fact seems to be lost sight of by those who distort the nature of the ordinance, clothing it with an altogether fictitious importance. Neither Jesus nor Paul professes to regenerate souls by the simple rite of baptism; that was the effect of the truth as applied by the Eternal Spirit. The sixth hour of the day was about noon, so that the heat co-operated with the 19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, 'I perceive that thou art a prophet.

20 Our ^afathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.

21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, ^bworship the Father.

22 Ye worship ye know not what: ^cwe know what we worship: ^dfor salvation is of the Jews.

23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father ^ein spirit and in truth: for ^fthe Father seeketh such to worship him.

24 God is ^ga Spirit: and they that worship him ^hmust worship him in spirit and in truth.

25 The woman saith unto him, I know that ⁱMessias cometh, which is called Christ: ^jwhen he is come, he will tell us all things.

26 Jesus saith unto her, 'I that speak unto thee am ^khe.

27 ¶ And upon this came his disciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman: yet no man said, What seekest thou? or, Why talkest thou with her?

28 The woman then left her water-pot, and went her way into the city, and saith to the men, 29 Come, see a man which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?

30 Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

31 ¶ In the meanwhile his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

32 But he said unto them, 'I have meat to eat that ye know not of.

33 Therefore said the disciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ^lought to eat?

34 Jesus saith unto them, 'My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, ^mand to finish his work.

35 Say not ye, There are yet four months, and ⁿthen cometh harvest? Behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for ^othey are white already to harvest.

36 And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that ^pboth he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together.

⁶² Pa. 33. 9.

37 And herein is that saying true, ^a'One soweth, and another reapeth.

38 I ^b'sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entered into their labours.

39 ¶ And ^cmany of the Samaritans of that city believed on him for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did.

40 So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them: and ^dhe abode there two days.

41 And ^emany more believed because of his own word;

42 And said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying: ^ffor we have heard him ourselves, ^gand know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

43 ¶ Now, after two days he departed thence, and went into Galilee:

44 For Jesus himself testified, ^h'that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.

45 Then, when he was come into Galilee, ⁱthe Galileans received him, ^j'having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: for they also went unto the feast.

46 So Jesus came again into ^k'Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain ^lnobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum.

47 When ^mhe heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and besought him ⁿthat he would come down and heal his son: for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, ^o'Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, ^p'come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, ^q'Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told ^rhim, saying, ^s'Thy son liveth.

52 Then enquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

53 So the father knew that ^tit was ^u'at the same hour in the which Jesus said fatigue of the journey to promote thirst and weariness. The request clearly astonished the woman of Samaria, since she anticipated no such frankness from a Jew, inasmuch as their hatred towards the Samaritans interdicted even the operations of commerce. Such language might well excite her astonishment, and lead her to think that the stranger was a prophet whom God had taught to read her heart, and recite the facts of her history. Any one may readily conceive of the surprise which would be felt if he were told by a perfect stranger many things which, perhaps, he supposed were unknown to any of his fellow-men. It seems clear that our Lord's comments went beyond the facts here recorded: for the woman, in addressing her countrymen, besought them to come and see a man who told her all things that ever she did. Ver. 27-54. The Saviour's spirit bespoke the character of his Gospel; he gave speedy indications of the object for which he had come—to bestow happiness alike on Jew and Gentile. Before him, these temporary distinctions were nothing. They existed only for a season to accomplish an object, which, once realised, they would perish for ever. The day was fast drawing on when the middle wall of partition would be thrown down, whereby Jews and Gentiles would be placed on a common footing. Nothing can exceed the beauty of the display of paternal affection which is here recorded. The nobleman displayed great faith; and the reward bestowed justified his confidence. Were parents as sincerely and deeply concerned about the spiritual as they are about the temporal life of their children, we should unto him, Thy son liveth: ^aand himself believed, and his whole house.

54 This is again ^bthe second miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

CHAPTER V.

1 Jesus, on the sabbath-day, cureth him that was diseased eight and thirty years. 10 The Jews cavil and persecute him for it.

AFTER this there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem, by the sheep-¹market, a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches.

3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, ^awaiting for the moving of the water.

4 For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: whosoever then ^bfirst, after the troubling of the water, stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, ^cWilt thou be made whole?

7 The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.

8 Jesus saith unto him, ^dRise, take up thy bed, and walk.

9 And ^eimmediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and on the same day was the sabbath.

10 ¶ The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath-day: ^fit is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

11 He answered them, ^gHe that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk?

13 And he that was healed wist not who it was: for Jesus had conveyed himself away, ^ha multitude being in that place.

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, ⁱlest a worse thing come unto thee.

15 The man departed, ^jand told the Jews that it was Jesus which had made him whole.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath-day.

17 ¶ But Jesus answered them, ^kMy Father worketh hitherto, and I work.

18 Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God.

19 ¶ Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^lThe Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: ^mfor what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.

20 For ⁿthe Father loveth the Son, ^oand sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel.

21 For ^pas the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; ^qeven so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

22 For ^rthe Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

23 That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. ^sHe that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.

25 Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^tThe hour is coming, and now is, ^uwhen the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live.

26 For as the Father hath life in himself, ^vso hath he given to the Son to have life in himself;

27 And ^whath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.

28 Marvel not at this: ^xfor the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, 29 And shall come forth; they that have ^ydone good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.

30 I ^zcan of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; ^abecause I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.

speedily see another and a better state of things. But, alas! the best walk less by faith than by sight, and all have need of an inward baptism of that Spirit whose it is to bring the distant near, and to render the invisible efficient in renewing the affections, and regulating the life of the saints.

Chap. V. 1-15. The pool of Bethesda has served as a test to the principles of more than one expositor. There has been an attempt to explain it away, by representing the angel as simply a messenger from the Sanhedrim to stir the pool, after the entrails of the sacrifice had been washed in it, by which, it was conceived, it acquired a healing virtue. To state the assumption is sufficient to expose it. The thing was clearly miraculous—a standing miracle, calculated to excite deep interest in the city, seeing that only one person, and that the first that entered after the moving of the water, obtained the cure desired. It was further noticeable, that it mattered not what the disease was—all maladies were alike subdued by its power. Ver. 35-47. “A burning and a shining light,” was a mode of expression familiar in 32 There ^ais another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.

33 Ye sent unto John, and ^ehe bare witness unto the truth.

34 But I receive not testimony from man: but these things I say, ^fthat ye might be saved.

35 He was a burning and a shining light; and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light.

36 ¶ But I have greater witness than ^gthat of John: for ^hthe works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.

37 And the Father himself, which hath sent me, hath ⁱborne witness of me. ^jYe have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape.

38 And ^kye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not.

39 ¶ Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.

40 And ^lye will not come to me, that ye might have life.

41 ¶ I receive not honour from men.

42 But I know you, ^mthat ye have not the love of God in you.

43 I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

44 How can ye believe, which receive honour one of another, ⁿand seek not the honour that ^ocometh from God only?

45 Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father: there is ^pone that accuseth you, ^qeven Moses, in whom ye trust.

46 For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Christ feedeth five thousand. 15 He withdraweth himself. 22 The people follow him, and are reproved for their fleshly hearts. 66 Many disciples leave him.

AFTER these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, ^awhich is the sea of Tiberias.

2 And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

3 And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 And ^bthe passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

5 ¶ When Jesus then lifted up ^chis eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

6 (And this he said to ^dprove him: for he himself knew what he would do.)

7 Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8 One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, 9 There is a lad here, which hath five barley-loaves, and two small fishes: ^ebut what are they among so many?

10 And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 And Jesus took the loaves; and ^fwhen he had given thanks, he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

12 When ^gthey were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, ^hthat nothing be lost.

Judea, to denote the ministry of the word by lamps or candles, as appears from the Prophecy of Zechariah, and also the Revelation of St John; any person distinguished for knowledge, and others superior qualities, is designated a burning and shining light. Properly speaking, the terms imply a happy junction of knowledge with piety, and cultivated understanding with a purified heart, and both entirely consecrated to the Lord. The exhortation to search the Scriptures, had it been resorted to by the Jews as it was by the Bereans, would have cut short much controversy, and uprooted those prejudices which led to the rejection of the Lord. It would then have been found that the types and prophecies were being strikingly and rapidly fulfilled in the Saviour's character, conduct, doctrine, and miracles; so that prophecy was becoming history, and figures terminating in facts. The neglect of the Scriptures was the prime cause of the rejection of the Messiah. It is so still; for no man will sit down in the spirit of candour, and with an earnest desire to know the truth, to the study of the Inspired Volume, without reaching the conclusion, that Jesus is the Christ. But the state of the Jewish mind unfitted it for dealing with the Scriptures, as with the Saviour's public discourses. They were filled with pride, and fired with ambition, and hence they were revolted by the lowly appearance of the Lord. Rejecting the writings of Moses, it was impossible for them to believe the words of the Messiah. It matters not what be the abundance of Bibles in the land, what be the number or the excellency of its Creeds, Confessions, and Articles; so long as the heart is carnal, and the understanding blind, they will all be set aside for principles and systems, dogmas and institutes, more adapted to the natural condition of man.

Chap. VI. 1-40. This miracle was of a character the most stupendous; there were but five barley loaves amongst five thousand people! To Omnipotence, however, all things are alike easy—the feeding of individuals, thousands, or millions. The giving of “thanks” is a circumstance to which the Apostle draws particular attention. Seeing that no events occur with such regularity and frequency as the receiving of sustenance, none are so much suited to give occasion for thanksgiving to the Author of all good. There has ever been a tendency in men to prefer the interests of the body to those of the soul, and to sacrifice eternity to time; our Lord enters his solemn caution against this, when he exhorts the people not to labour for the meat which perisheth. By this, however, we are not to understand discouragement of diligence, but the reverse. Let both soul and body have that which belongs to them in due proportions. By the “ⁱseal” of the Saviour we are to understand the miracles which he performed, which constituted the seal of his authority. He exhorted the Jews, if they believed not in him, yet to believe his works, intimating that if he had not come among them, and done such works as no man had ever done before, their guilt had not been what it was. In proportion to the means of instruction is the magnitude of our responsibility. Ver. 41-59. The true Israel, of which the seed of Abraham was the type, is the Church of the New Testament, gathered out of all nations, kindreds, peoples, and tongues. All these are 13 Therefore they gathered them together, ²and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley-loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14 Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, 'This is of a truth that Prophet that should come into the world.

15 ¶ When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and ²take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.

16 And when even was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea, 17 And entered into a ship, ¹and went over the sea toward Capernaum: and it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.

18 And ²the sea arose, by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus ²walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship: and they were afraid.

20 But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.

21 Then ²they willingly received him into the ship: and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went.

22 ¶ The day following, when the people, which stood on the other side of the sea, saw that there was none other boat there, save that one wherinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, ²but that his disciples were gone away alone;

23 (Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias, nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks:)

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum, ²seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, 'Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them, and said, 'Verily, verily, I say unto you, 'Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 ¹Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that ²meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: ²for him hath God the Father sealed.

28 Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.

30 They said therefore unto him, What sign shewest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work?

31 Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, ²'He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you ²the true bread from heaven.

33 For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

34 Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

35 And Jesus said unto them, ²'I am the bread of life: ³he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

36 But I said unto you, That ye also have seen me, and believe not.

37 All ²that the Father giveth me shall come to me: and him that cometh to me ³I will in no wise cast out.

38 For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.

39 And ²this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath ³given me ⁴'I should lose nothing, ⁵but should raise it up again at the last day.

40 And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then murmured at him, because he said, 'I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

taught of God, and the fruit of his lessons is their reception of the record which he hath given concerning his Son. This very circumstance, while it illustrates, proves the sovereignty of grace. The state of the human heart is such, that, without Divine teaching, it will never receive the truth, and submit to the righteousness of God, which brings salvation. The eating of life for evermore. The figure is most significant. Throughout the whole of our Lord's instructions, his atoning sacrifice was everywhere uppermost, the grand climax of all his communications. The general doctrine of his ministry, as also that of his Apostles, was, that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins—that his vicarious death is the sole condition of man's life—that nothing short of his sacrifice could magnify the law, and make it honourable. Ver. 60-71. Our Lord's ministry, in many respects, sufficed to test the spirit of men. His day, like that of some of his most eminent and useful servants, had a morning, a noon, an afternoon, and an evening. The afternoon may be said here to have considerably advanced; and as there was no appearance of his setting up a temporal kingdom, people became the more indisposed to receive what they deemed his "hard sayings." Men will bear and sacrifice much for wealth and honour in prospect, but when these become as "waters that fail," they will begin to review their course and change their policy. It behoves pastors and teachers under adverse circumstances to comfort themselves with the assurance, that the purposes of God shall stand. None of the things that occurred to the Saviour took him by surprise; he knew from the beginning all that 44 No man can come to me, ^aexcept the Father, which hath sent me, draw him: ^band I will raise him up at the last day.

45 It is written in the prophets, ^cAnd they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

46 Not that any man hath seen the Father, save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^dHe that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

48 ^eI am that bread of life.

49 Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead.

50 This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, ^fthat a man may eat thereof, and not die.

51 I am the ^gliving bread which came down from heaven. If any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is ^hmy flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

52 The Jews therefore ⁱstrove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us ^jhis flesh to eat?

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^kExcept ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

54 Whoso ^leateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, ^mhath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

55 For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

56 He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, ⁿdwelleth in me, and I in him.

57 As the living Father hath sent me, and ^oI live by the Father; so he that eateth me, ^peven he shall live by me.

58 This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead. He that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

59 These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

60 Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard ^qthis, said, ^rThis is an hard saying; who can hear it?

61 When Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you?

62 ^aWhat and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?

63 It is ^bthe Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, ^cthey are spirit, and they are life.

64 But there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

65 And he said, Therefore said I unto you, ^dthat no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father.

66 ^e¶ From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

67 Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

68 Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? ^fthou hast the words of eternal life.

69 And ^gwe believe, and are sure, that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.

70 Jesus answered them, Have not I chosen you twelve, ^hand one of you is a devil?

71 He spake of Judas Iscariot ⁱthe son of Simon: for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Jesus reproveth his kinsmen: 10 goeth unto the feast of tabernacles; 14 teacheth in the temple. 40 Divers opinions of Christ. 45 The Pharisees are angry at their officers, and at Nicodemus.

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, ^abecause the Jews sought to kill him.

2 Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.

3 His ^bbrethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest.

4 For ^cthere is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to was to happen at every stage of his pilgrimage. He was well assured that none would come to him but those whom the Father had given, and that they would stand by him to the last, and that nothing could sever between them and him. It was affecting, nevertheless, as well as discouraging to the Apostles, to see the diminished numbers which now attended their Master, and it was probably in reference to the indications of concern which they displayed, when they saw many ceasing to walk with him, that he said, "Will ye also go away?" The reply of Peter was the fruit of his fidelity; but his language comprehended more than the fact, which led the Lord to put the significant and awful question, "Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?" The word was terrible beyond expression, as applied to a human being, and a professed servant and follower of the Son of God! What could have induced such a man to leave his home, friends, and worldly avocations, and for whole years to accompany the Lord Jesus, living in the constant atmosphere of the most intense piety, is inconceivable. The term applied to him indicates treason, murder, and falsehood, all of which were realized in the character and conduct of Judas. It behoves the people of God to exercise habitual prayerfulness against their own false hearts, which will prompt them to prefer smooth things to right things. They ought never to forget, however, that the "hard sayings" are generally the best sayings, because the most needful. But there is now, as then, a preference given to the promissory over the preceptive; there are many who delight in privilege, but recoil from duty. Such a state of heart, however, indicates either that the profession is hollow, or that piety is low. Where true love reigns, it will aim at nothing less than following the Lord fully, walking in all his ordinances and commandments blameless.

Chap. VII. 1-13. The Lord Jesus had the first displays of unbelief in his own house, and among his own friends, who appear to have entertained no adequate conception of his character and mission. Very little is said of the personal piety of his brethren, although they turn up in the course of the narrative. It nevertheless comes out here, that they were not the objects of the world's hate as he was. The inference is obvious; the world beheld in them but too much of its own likeness, be known openly: if thou do these things, shew thyself to the world.

5 For neither did his brethren believe in him.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, ^aMy time is not yet come: but your time is always ready.

7 The world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

10 ¶ But when his brethren were gone up, ^athen went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret.

11 Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12 And there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for some said, He ^ais a good man: others said, Nay; but he ^adeceiveth the people.

13 Howbeit no man spake openly of him for fear of the Jews.

14 ¶ Now, about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, ^bHow knoweth this man ¹letters, having never learned?

16 Jesus answered them, and said, ¹My doctrine is not mine, ^abut his that sent me.

17 If ^aany man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

18 He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory: but he that ^aseeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 Did not Moses give you the law, and ^ayet none of you keepeth the law? Why go ye about to kill me?

20 The people answered and said, ^aThou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee?

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

22 Moses therefore gave unto you circumcision; (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers;) and ye on the sabbath-day circumcise a man.

23 If a man on the sabbath-day receive circumcision, ^athat the law of Moses should not be broken; are ye angry at me, because ^aI have made a man every whit whole on the sabbath-day?

24 Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

25 Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill?

26 But, lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ?

27 Howbeit we know this man whence he is: but when Christ cometh, ^ano man knoweth whence he is.

28 Then cried Jesus in the temple, as he taught, saying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am: ^aand I am not come of myself, but he that sent me ^ais true, ^awhom ye know not.

29 But ^aI know him: ^afor I am from him, and he hath sent me.

30 ¶ Then ^athey sought to take him: ^abut no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come.

31 And many of the people ^abelieved on him, and said, ^bWhen Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?

32 ¶ The ^aPharisees heard that the people murmured such things concerning him; and the Pharisees and the chief priests ^asent officers to take him.

33 Then said Jesus unto them, ^aYet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.

34 ^aYe shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the ^adis-whereas it hated him for his reproof, both by instruction and example. Ver. 14-31. Although the Lord Jesus was one with the Father, he speaks, both here and elsewhere, of himself as a man under a superior, and yielding obedience to authority by the discharge of a mission. In that capacity it became him to act as he did according to what God had said to Moses concerning him. Walking up to a man's present light is a high preparative for Divine teaching. They who thus act, will not fail in the end to come at the truth after which they devoutly and humbly inquire. Prayer is the best posture for contending with the perplexities which excite unbelief. A little light from Heaven will do more to dispose of difficulties, than all the learning this world can impart. The power of prejudice is strikingly illustrated in the proceedings of these people; even the most candid amongst them, who were strongly convinced that Jesus was the Christ, made a stumblingblock of a false assumption, asserting that no man would know whence the Christ came, whereas the Scriptures plainly foretold both his tribe and his family, and the place of his birth. Ver. 32-39. The eighth day of the feast was a time of holy convocation, when an offering was made by fire, and all servile work prohibited. Those who, for the seven days preceding, had dwelt in tents, were now to attend upon the work of the temple, after which they were dismissed to their several homes. Such was the occasion selected by the Saviour to testify concerning himself, the object pointed to in the temple-worship. On that occasion the Jews drew out water from Siloam, which they carried to the temple amid the sound of trumpets. They are said to have done so by way of acknowledging the blessing of rain, which they then prayed for. To this the language of the prophet refers, "With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation." Our Lord gave a spiritual bearing to this significant action, exhorting the multitude to come to him as the fountain of "living water," that they might receive the grace of the Spirit, the gift of righteousness, and all the blessings of salvation. Ver. 40-53. Such discourses could hardly fail to produce a deep impression, and, accordingly, multitudes were led to the conclusion that He who addressed them was indeed the Christ. But then their faith was again obscured by prejudice; it was taken for granted that the Christ could not come out of Galilee. We have here, in the person of the officers, who, as appears from ver. 32, had been sent to take him, a noble tribute paid by nature to grace. Awed and overpowered by the persed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles?

36 He said ^b manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come!

37 In ^c the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood ^d and cried, saying, 'If any man thirst, ^e let him come unto me, and ^f drink.

38 ^g He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 (But ^h this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

40 ⁱ Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, Of a truth this is the Prophet.

41 Others said, ^j This is the Christ. But some said, ^k Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

42 Hath ^l not the scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, ^m where David was?

43 So ⁿ there was a division among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have taken him; ^o but no man laid hands on him.

45 ^p Then came ^q the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46 The officers answered, ^r Never man spake like this man.

47 Then answered them the Pharisees, ^s Are ye also deceived?

48 Have ^t any of the rulers, or of the Pharisees, believed on him?

49 ^u But this people, who knoweth not the law, are cursed.

50 Nicodemus saith unto them, (^v he that came to Jesus by night, being one of them,)

51 ^w Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth?

52 They answered and said unto him, ^x Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet.

53 ^y And every man went unto his own house.

CHAPTER VIII.

2 Christ releaseth the woman taken in adultery. 12 He preacheth himself the light of the world, and justifieth his doctrine.

JESUS ^a went unto the mount of Olives. 2 And ^b early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him; ^c and he sat down, and taught them.

3 And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery: and when they had set her in the midst, 4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5 Now ^d Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: ^e but what sayest thou?

6 This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with ^f his finger wrote on the ground, ^g as though he heard them not.

7 So, when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, ^h He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 And they which heard it, ⁱ being convicted by ^j their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, ^k even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.

10 When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, ^l where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, ^m Neither do I condemn thee: ⁿ go, and sin no more.

12 ^o Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, ^p I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, ^q Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true.

14 Jesus answered and said unto them, ^r Though I bear record of myself, ^s yet my record is true: for I know whence I came, and whither I go; ^t but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.

majesty of truth in his person, they returned without him to their employers, answering the question, which referred to their neglect of duty, with "Never man spake like this man." The result was to produce great confusion, and to elicit much unsanctified anger. On that occasion Nicodemus displayed his devout manhood in a manner which did him credit; and it were well for multitudes, while reproving the righteous, to remember the question, "Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth?" Acting on this principle will cut short many a tale of calumny.

Chap. VIII. 1-11. This was the result of a well concerted scheme for entrapping the Lord Jesus. They clearly hoped to entangle him, either as setting aside the authority of Moses, or as invading the prerogative of the Roman Government; but his wisdom proved too much for their cunning. Without entering into the question either of Moses' law, or the controlling power of Rome, he simply prescribed the method of proceeding by which every man became his own accuser, doubtless to the astonishment of the multitude who beheld their confusion. It will be observed that their appearance in the assembly interrupted the discourse the Lord was delivering, which he resumed on their departure. Ver. 12-33. Jesus returning to his theme, went on to instruct the congregation by telling them that he was the Light of the world. Such he was, is, and will continue to be; he is the source of all spiritual knowledge. Nothing can be added to his communications, and nothing may be taken from them. The reception given him by his countrymen receives a very solemn aspect in ver. 24, where he tells them that it is an affair of life and death. To receive him, was to receive everlasting blessedness; to reject him, to remain under their burdens, exposed to condemnation. It is noticeable that our Lord's references to his approaching sufferings and death for men were 15 Ye judge after the flesh; °I judge no man.

16 And yet if I judge, my judgment is true; °for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.

17 It is also written in your law, °that the testimony of two men is true.

18 I am °one that bear witness of myself, °and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me.

19 Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jesus answered, °Ye neither know me, nor my Father: if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

20 These words spake Jesus in the treasury, as he taught in the temple: °and no man laid hands on him; for his hour was not yet come.

21 Then said Jesus again unto them, °I go my way, and ye shall seek me, °and shall die in your sins: °whither I go, ye cannot come.

22 Then said the Jews, Will he kill himself? because he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come.

23 And he said unto them, °Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world.

24 I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: °for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.

25 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus saith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.

26 I have many things to say and °to judge of you: °but he that sent me is true; and I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him.

27 They understood not that he spake to them of the Father.

28 Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of man, °then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; °but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.

29 And °he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.

30 As he spake these words, °many believed on him.

31 ¶ Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye °my disciples indeed;

32 And ye shall know the truth, °and the truth shall make you free.

33 ¶ They answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, °Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

35 And the servant abideth not in the house for ever: °but the Son abideth ever.

36 °If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

37 I know that ye are Abraham's seed; °but ye seek to kill me, °because my word hath no place in you.

38 I °speak that which I have seen with my Father; °and ye do that which ye have seen with your father.

39 They answered and said unto him, Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, °If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

40 But now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham.

41 Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; °we have one Father, even God.

42 Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me: °for I proceeded forth and came from God; °neither came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why do ye not understand my speech? even because °ye cannot hear my word.

44 Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.

45 And °because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

46 Which of you °convinceth me of sin? And if I say the truth, °why do ye not believe me?

47 °He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

48 ¶ Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, °Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil?

49 Jesus answered, I have not a devil: °but I honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.

generally attended with conviction, if not always with conversion. In the present case, we learn that "many believed on him." Ver. 38-59. The pride of the Jews was not less than their wickedness. They spurned the idea of being made free by the truth, declaring that they had never been in bondage to any. They were so filled with selfishness, and blinded by pride, that they forgot the extent to which they had been from age to age enthralled—first in Egypt, then by the Syrians, the Assyrians, the Chaldeans, the Persians, the Greeks, and at length, and at that very moment, by the Romans. A people who could thus speak, were out of the reach of reason; evidence was thrown away upon them. Our Lord referred to spiritual freedom; they considered him as speaking of political bondage, and concerning that, they deliberately violated historic truth. On the present occasion, the Lord Jesus was peculiarly pungent and cutting in his address. He charges them boldly with being the children of the Wicked One, intent on obeying the lusts of their father, like him distinguishing themselves by falsehood and murder! On no occasion was his address more awful and crushing; and it seems to have driven them into a state of desperation, in which they pronounced him a Samaritan, and possessed with a devil! The people of God, amid sufferings for Christ's sake, and especially while visited by the 50 And I seek not mine own glory: there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 Verily, verily, I say unto you, 'If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, 'Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death.

53 Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: 'whom makest thou thyself?

54 Jesus answered, 'If I honour myself, my honour is nothing: 'it is my Father that honoureth me; of whom ye say, that he is your God.

55 Yet ye have not known him; 'but I know him: and if I should say, I know him not, I shall be a liar like unto you: but I know him, and keep his saying.

56 Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day; and he saw it, and was glad.

57 Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?

58 Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, 'Before Abraham was, 'I am.

59 Then took they up stones to cast at him: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by.

CHAPTER IX.

1 He that was born blind is restored to sight. 18 He is brought to the Pharisees, & who excommunicate him. 35 Christ receiveth him, and he confesseth Christ.

AND as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which was blind from his birth.

2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, 'who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?

3 Jesus answered, 'Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: 'but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 I 'must work the works of him that sent me, 'while it is day; the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As 'long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

scourge of the tongue, may look back to this chapter and be comforted.

Chap. IX. 1-7. Men, somehow, have in all ages generally concluded that peculiar afflictions are the fruit of peculiar transgressions. Even the disciples were not superior to this notion, but the Saviour distinctly corrects them, by intimating that in this case there was nothing peculiar. Both the man and his parents had indeed sinned, but their sins had been only such as were common to man. It was simply an event of unparalleled calamity, and the effect of a sovereign purpose intended to furnish an occasion for a signal display of Divine power. There was something remarkable in the mode of the Saviour's proceedings in this case; instead of a direct operation, he employed means to the end—means, however, between which and that end there was no conceivable connexion. The cures of Jesus were of a character altogether different from those effected by human skill. Surgical operations were, comparatively, a very imperfect affair, often failing of success, and generally exposed to relapse. With regard to the eye, in 6 When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he 'anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay,

7 And said unto him, 'Go, wash in 'the pool of Siloam, (which is, by interpretation, 'Sent.) He went his way therefore, and washed, 'and came seeing.

8 ¶ The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, 'How were thine eyes opened?

11 He answered and said, 'A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 ¶ They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14 And it was the sabbath-day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, 'This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath-day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? 'And there was a division among them.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, 'He is a prophet.

18 But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

19 And they asked them, saying, 'Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20 His parents answered them, and particular, great delicacy is required in all operations. Sudden exposure to the light of perfect day is studiously guarded against, from the dangers which might attend it; but this man came without bandage or shade, rejoicing in his new faculty without fear or danger. This it appears was the only instance of sight being imparted to a man that was born blind. This circumstance gives to the miracle a special and unparalleled importance. In the case of cures effected on men who had previously possessed, but lost their sight, there was much room for infidel cavil. But in the present instance all conceivable objection was necessarily cut off; the cure was one which nothing could effect but power at least supernatural. Ver. 8-38. The dialogue which ensued between the man who had been blind, and the authorities, is the most remarkable thing of the sort in history. On their part, the display of prejudice, petulance, and perversity was such as was never exceeded, while the promptness, the adroitness, and the ability with which they were answered, confuted, and confounded, was never surpassed. This was so masterly and perfect, as clearly to imply the exercise of a Divine influence, which raised the mind said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind :

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age, ask him; he shall speak for himself.

22 These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age, ask him.

24 Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, "Give God the praise: we know that this man is a sinner.

25 He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28 Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are Moses' disciples.

29 We know that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is.

30 The man answered and said unto them, Why, herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes.

31 Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth.

32 Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33 If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34 They answered and said unto him, Thou wast altogether born in sins, and 40 And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, ^eAre we blind also?

41 Jesus said unto them, ^fIf ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.

CHAPTER X.

¹ Christ is the door, and the good shepherd. ¹⁹ Divers opinions of him. ²² He proveth by his works that he is Christ.

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, ^aHe that entereth not by the door into the sheep-fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that entereth in by the door is ^bthe shepherd of the sheep.

3 To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

4 And when he putteth forth his own sheep, ^che goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice.

5 And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers.

6 This parable spake Jesus unto them; but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

7 Then said Jesus unto them again, of the humble man to the occasion. Nothing but parts of the most superior order, and highly cultivated, such as could not be looked for in the case of a blind pauper, could account for the discreet, self-possessed, and dignified deportment displayed by him. The doctrine which he lays down in ver. 31, 33, is one of the most important in Scripture, distinctly shewing that, however blind in his natural eye, he was highly endued with spiritual vision. Ver. 39-41. Our Lord had come into the world to give men light touching all matters affecting their spiritual welfare; he had come to establish a rule of judgment, to alter the state of the Church, to try the spirits of men, to expose hypocrisy, and vindicate truth. The Pharisees, notwithstanding their wickedness, were not wanting in sagacity; on all occasions, they applied to themselves even the most indirect of the cutting observations of the Lord; while their own petulance was always turned to their confusion and mortification.

Chap. X. 1-21. Jesus is here supposed to refer to the sheep-folds which were hired by those who brought flocks to sell for sacrifice at the temple, which the porter, or door-keeper, would open to none but the rightful owner.

Our Lord here reflects with great severity on the conduct of the scribes and Pharisees, teachers and false prophets, who had gone before him. These men had been intent on securing their own selfish interests, regardless of the spiritual welfare of the nation, but the true sheep, the people of God, had refused to listen to them. In the East, the sheep, when led forth from the field, follow the shepherd, instead of going before him, as in this part of the world. So familiar are they with his voice and person, that they know both; and while they cleave to him, they shun strangers. How strikingly is this illustrated in its spiritual bearing! The Heaven-taught, the true people of God, will listen to none who preach not the glorious Gospel. Their spiritual senses have been so fully exercised that they speedily distinguish truth from error, and false from true shepherds. The test of love was courage: when the flock was in danger, the heartless hireling would be careful not to expose himself, whatever might be the peril of the sheep; whereas the master would run all hazards for their preservation. In ver. 16, Jesus clearly points to the work of sovereign mercy to be performed amongst them. On this occasion he refers both to his death, and his resurrection, as well as to the voluntary character of his sacrifice. But that doc-

Verily, verily, I say unto you, 'I am the door of the sheep.

8 All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them.

9 I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

10 The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: 'I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

11 I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.

12 But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14 I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine.

15 As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep.

16 And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

17 Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again.

18 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.

19 ¶ There was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings.

20 And many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?

21 Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil: can a devil open the eyes of the blind?

22 ¶ And it was at Jerusalem the feast of the dedication, and it was winter.

23 And Jesus walked in the temple in Solomon's porch.

24 Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

25 Jesus answered them, I told you, and ye believed not: the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me:

26 But ye believe not; because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you.

27 My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:

28 And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand.

29 My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

30 I and my Father are one.

31 ¶ Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him.

32 Jesus answered them, Many good works have I shewed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me?

33 The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not, but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

34 Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods?

35 If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken;

36 Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God?

37 If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.

38 But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works; that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him.

39 ¶ Therefore they sought again to take him: but he escaped out of their hand, 40 And went away again beyond Jordan, into the place where John at first baptized; and there he abode.

41 And many resorted unto him, and said, John did no miracle: but all things that John spake of this man were true.

42 And many believed on him there.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Christ raiseth Lazarus. 47 The priests and Pharisees gather a council against him.

NOW a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha.

2 (It was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his trine was too profound to be comprehended by the people. He appeared to have been a man uttering parables or talking folly. Many viewed him as possessed with a devil, and were surprised that anybody should hear him! But there were those of a better spirit, and a higher wisdom, who were unable to associate such words and such works with diabolical possession; justly considering, that there was much connected with them indicating the presence of another, and a very different power. Here again, Wisdom was justified of her children. Ver. 22-26. The works of the Saviour, intelligently and candidly viewed, were sufficient to establish his Divine mission. The healing of the sick, the casting out of devils, the cleansing of lepers, giving sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, speech to the dumb, and life to the dead—these and his other mighty works proved that he was the Messenger of the Covenant, and clothed with the power of God. Ver. 27-42. The preservation of the people of God is here distinctly asserted, and the impossibility of their enemies succeeding against them. Nowhere is the perfect unity of the Son with the Father, and by consequence his Godhead, more emphatically declared. The Jews fully understood him to be laying claim to Divinity, expressly avowing that their menace of death was not because of the good works he had done, but because, being a man, he made himself God. The truth of the allegation was at once conceded; there was no qualification, no correction; it was just as they viewed it. About this time the public judgment, with respect to many, appears to have been exercised in its integrity. They compared the testimony which John had borne of Jesus, and bare witness to its truth, and the result was feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.)

3 Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick.

4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but ⁶for the glory of God, ⁷that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

5 Now Jesus ¹loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, ²he abode two days still in the same place where he was.

7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee; and goest thou thither again?

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day, ¹he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.

10 But ²if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

11 These things said he: and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus ³sleepeth; but I go, that I may ⁴awake him out of sleep.

12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.

13 Howbeit Jesus spake of his death: but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

14 Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead.

15 And ¹I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, ²to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless, let us go unto him.

16 Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow-disciples, ¹Let us also go, that we may die with him.

17 Then, when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.

18 (Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about ¹fifteen furlongs off.)

19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, ²to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.

21 Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, ¹if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

22 But I know, ²that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, ³God will give it thee.

23 Jesus saith unto her, ¹Thy brother shall rise again.

24 Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said unto her, ¹I am the resurrection, and ²the life: ³he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live:

26 And ¹whosoever liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die. Believest thou this?

27 She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, ⁴which should come into the world.

28 And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, ¹The Master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him.

30 Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him.

31 The Jews then which were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, followed her, saying, ¹She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

32 Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, ²she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, ³if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

33 When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and ¹the Jews also weeping which came with her, ²he groaned in the spirit, and ³was troubled.

34 And said, Where have ye laid him? They say unto him, Lord, come and see.

35 Jesus wept.

36 Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him!

37 And some of them said, Could not that many believed. Although religion is essentially a matter of the affections, its operation will be strong, steady, and permanent, in proportion as it is the result of the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus.

Chap. XI. 1-46. The Saviour's conduct on this interesting occasion presents a striking analogy to the course of Providence, which frequently bears an adverse aspect, while mercies the most precious and abundant are in reserve. While we are told that Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus, it seems at first sight strange and inconsistent with the fact that he should have tarried two more days in the same place where he was. This was doubtless a severe trial to the faith of the sorrowing sisters. Martha, indeed, ascribed to the Saviour's absence the death of her brother, declaring that if he had been there Lazarus would not have died; and even then significantly hinting that the Saviour had but to ask him back from the dead, and he would return.

Mary, too, on her arrival, uttered the same sort of complaint: "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." From this it is very evident that the sisters had set their hearts on the arrival of Jesus, confidently expecting from it the preservation of their brother's life. That he could easily have secured alike whether absent or present, and the result would doubtless have been ascribed by them to the interposition of his Divine power. But the effect would have been comparatively small had he been preserved from going down to the grave. As the event shewed, the death, which paved the way for the resurrection, conducted incalculably more to the gratitude and joy of the sisters, to the excitement of public attention, to the conversion of souls and the glory of God. The resurrection of Lazarus became a power in the country, awakening universal attention, confounding the gainsayers, and convincing the candid. So much was this the case, that we learn from the next chapter the chief priests took measures for putting this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?

38 Jesus therefore again ^mgroaning in himself, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.

39 Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh: for he hath been dead four days.

40 Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that, if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest ^{see} the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. ^{And} Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And ^I knew that thou hearest me always: ^{but} because of the people which stand by I said it, ^{that} they may believe ^{that} thou hast sent me.

43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, ^{Lazarus}, come forth.

44 And ^{he} that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes; and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

45 Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 ¶ Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, ^{What} do we? for this man doeth many miracles.

48 If we let him thus alone, ^{all men} will believe on him; ^{and} the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.

49 And one of them, named ^{Caiaphas}, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50 Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year, ^{he} prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation;

52 And ^{not} for that nation only, but that also he should ^{gather} together in one ^{the} children of God ^{that} were scattered abroad.

53 Then, from that day forth, they took counsel together for to ^{put} him to death.

54 Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews, but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples.

55 ¶ And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem ^{before} the passover, ^{to} purify themselves.

56 Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?

57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he were, he should shew it that they might take him.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jesus excommunicateth Mary anointing his feet. 12 He rideth into Jerusalem.

THEN Jesus, six days before the passover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.

2 There they made him a supper; and ^{Martha} served: but ^{Lazarus} was one of them that sat at the table with him.

3 Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and ^{anointed} the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was ^{filled} with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him, 5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, ^{and} given to the poor?

6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had ^{the} bag, and bare what was put therein.

7 Then said Jesus, ^{Let} her alone:

Lazarus to death, because of the extent to which his resurrection was promoting faith in Jesus among the multitude. Ver. 47-57. It is deeply humbling to see how ready the chief priests and Pharisees were upon all occasions to resort to violence where argument failed. So lost were they to reason and decency, that while confessing that the Lord Jesus did many miracles, they determined, if possible, without further loss of time, to compass his death. The resurrection of Lazarus was clearly a crisis in the Saviour's public history; nothing which had previously occurred produced the same sensation throughout the land, and so roused the fears and the wrath of the chief priests and the Pharisees. "From that day forth, they took counsel together to put him to death." The resurrection of Lazarus is an impressive emblem of the power which is exercised in quickening the souls of men dead in trespasses and in sins. It served, moreover, to display the power of the Lord Jesus over the dead as well as the living—his authority thus clearly extending to the other world, for he had but to will the return of the departed spirit, and it came back, taking possession of the tenement of flesh and blood which it had left. The Saviour here gave an earnest of the power which will attend the sound of the trumpet, when all that are in the dust shall awake—one class to the resurrection of life, and the other to the resurrection of condemnation.

Chap. XII. 1-19. The anointing here referred to is attended with some difficulty. By one class of interpreters, it has been considered as a case distinct from that related by Matthew and Mark. This event occurred six days previous to the Passover; and that two days. This was in the house of Lazarus; that, in the house of Simon the leper. In this, Mary anointed the feet of Jesus; in that, a woman not named poured ointment on his head. This is one view of the matter. Others have endeavoured to get over the difficulty by supposing that Matthew and Mark may have introduced the subject somewhat out of its natural order—that Lazarus, if he made the entertainment, may have made use of Simon's house, as more convenient—and that Mary poured the against the day of my burying hath she kept this.

8 For 'the poor always ye have with you; 'but me ye have not always.

9 ¶ Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there: and they came not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead.

10 But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death;

11 Because that 'by reason of him many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus.

12 ¶ On the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, 13 Took 'branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, "Hosanna: Blessed is 'the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.

14 And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon; as it is written, 15 Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold, thy King cometh, 'sitting on an ass's colt.

16 These things 'understood not his disciples at the first: but 'when Jesus was glorified, 'then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.

17 The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.

18 For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? behold, 'the world is gone after him.

20 ¶ And there were certain Greeks among them that came up to worship at the feast:

21 The same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, 'we would see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.

23 ¶ And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.

25 He 'that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that 'hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

26 If any man serve me, 'let him follow me; and 'where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, 'him will my Father honour.

27 Now 'is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: 'but for this cause came I unto this hour.

28 °Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

29 The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

31 Now 'is the judgment of this world: 'now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, 'if I be lifted up from the earth, 'will draw all men unto me.

33 (This he said, signifying what death he should die.)

34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law that 'Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? 'who is this Son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you: 'walk while ye have the light, 'lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be 'the children of light. These things spake Jesus, 'and departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 ¶ But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him:

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord, 'who hath believed our report? and to whom hath 'the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 Therefore 'they could not believe, because that Esaias said again,

40 He hath blinded their eyes, and har-ointment on the Saviour's head and body, as well as on his feet. This is deemed more probable than that, within the brief space of four days, the Saviour should have been twice anointed. The circumstance furnished an occasion to Judas to display his mingled hypocrisy and cupidity. The Searcher of hearts here exposes him in a manner which is much calculated to promote self-examination. His case shews how possible it is to occupy the high places of the Church of God without a particle of sympathy with its Lord, and to blend professions of fervent zeal with the most rapacious selfishness. Ver. 20-36. The parties here designated Greeks were so by birth. They were probably of the seed of Abraham, though that is not certain, since at that time there were many Gentile inquirers after the religion of the Jews, who used to frequent the synagogues as proselytes of the gate, and who were not circumcised. The Saviour here makes an affecting reference to his own approaching death, its necessity, and the happy results which would flow from it. With what ease and grace he made his transition from addresses to his disciples to communion with the Father of mercies—"Father, glorify thy name!" This is a remarkable instance of ejaculatory prayer. The reply was immediate, in the voice from heaven. The Father had already glorified his name by the resurrection of Lazarus, and those remarkable miracles of compassion which had filled the nation with joy. He would further do so by the resurrection of Jesus from the dead, his exaltation to the throne of glory, and the descent of the Holy Spirit. Ver. 37-50. We have here again the most impressive proofs of the utter impotence of miracles to soften the heart and convert the soul. Nothing could dened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

41 These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him.

42 ¶ Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue:

43 For ^athey loved the praise of men more than ^bthe praise of God.

44 ¶ Jesus cried, and said, ^aHe that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me.

45 And ^ahe that seeth me, seeth him that sent me.

46 I ^aam come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not ^aabide in darkness.

47 And if any man hear my words, and believe not, ^aI judge him not: ^afor I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 He that ^arejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

49 For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak.

50 And I know that ^ahis commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself.

5 After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and ^aPeter said unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

7 Jesus answered and said unto him, ^aWhat I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

11 For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12 So, after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, ^aKnow ye what I have done to you?

13 Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

14 If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ^aye also ought to wash one another's feet.

17 If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 ¶ I speak not of you all; ^aI know whom I have chosen: but, that the scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me.

19 ^aNow I tell you before it come, that when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

melt or move the chief priests, and the Pharisees, and the leading men of the country, who unconsciously fulfilled the predictions of Isaiah concerning them. In this, as in everything of the sort, there was no coercion of the will, nothing to interfere with its freedom and consequent responsibility.

Chap. XIII. 1-17. "Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end," is language most deeply affecting, as illustrative of the feeling of the Saviour for his flock. The ceremony of washing the feet of the disciples was strikingly emblematic of the power of his blood in cleansing them from sin. There is no salvation without this washing—no justification unaccompanied by sanctification of the heart and the life. Ver. 18-30. During the latter period of his ministry, Jesus repeatedly intimated that he would be betrayed by one of his attendants; the exactness of his statements increased as he advanced. On the present occasion, it was so pointed as to excite deep concern, and prompt earnest inquiry. The perplexity was soon ended by a deed which marked out the traitor, who appeared to be unmoved by what had taken place. He said nothing, but proceeded to the accomplishment of his dire deed, which, as one of darkness, was appropriate to the night season when it occurred. The expression, "Lying on Jesus' bosom," is explained by the custom of the East. A table was placed in the middle of the room, around which the seats were ranged according to the number of the guests. Suppose, therefore, Christ himself reclined first with his head towards the table, leaning on his left elbow on the couch, John lay, not on his bosom, but next to him in order, and consequently nearest for quietly putting the question. Ver. 31-38. The time was come for the mutual manifestation of the glory of the Son and of the Father in him.

21 When Jesus had thus said, 'he was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, That one of you shall betray me.

22 Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

23 Now there was 'leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, 'whom Jesus loved.

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake.

25 He then, lying on Jesus' breast, saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered, He it is to whom I shall give a 'sop, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to 'Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 And after the sop 'Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou doest, do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or, that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then, having received the sop, went immediately out; and it was night.

31 ¶ Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, 'Now is the Son of man glorified, 'and God is glorified in him.

32 If God be glorified in him, 'God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him.

33 Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

34 A 'new commandment I give unto you, 'That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

35 'By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

36 ¶ Simon Peter said unto him, Lord,

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Christ comforteth his disciples; professeth himself the way, the truth, and the life.

LET 'not your heart be troubled: 'ye believe in God, believe also in me.

2 In 'my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, 'I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.

4 And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

5 ¶ Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6 Jesus saith unto him, 'I am the way, and the truth, and the life: 'no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

7 If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: and 'from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

8 ¶ Philip saith unto him, Lord, 'shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us.

9 Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? 'he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?

10 'Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you, I speak not of myself: but the Father, 'that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.

11 Believe me that I am in the Father,

This would be realised when he ascended the cross, magnifying the law and making it honourable. Nature witnessed to the greatness of the person of the Saviour, and the importance of the event then being realised. It would be further displayed by the resurrection and the glorious ascension, amid angels and believers, of the Almighty Mediator. Peter could not brook the thought of a separation from his Lord, and was prepared to suffer anything rather than encounter such a calamity. His language was that of sincerity, but he knew not himself nor the strength of the temptation with which he would be assailed. His Lord knew it, however, and by instantly communicating the awful fact of the threefold denial he was about to utter, subdued his boast and filled him with astonishment.

Chap. XIV. 1-14. These words are demonstrative of the deity of the Lord Jesus, since he is represented as equally the object of faith with God the Father. The distinction here made between God and Christ has been seized upon as an argument against the Saviour's divinity, but most unfairly; for on the supposition of his being a mere creature, he would never have used such language, nor have exhorted them to rely conjointly on the eternal God and a feeble worm. The "many mansions" clearly refers to the palaces of kings, and the dwelling-places of the mighty. By his presence he purifies and consecrates the heavenly places in which his people are to dwell. This doctrine was set forth in the ancient economy. An atonement for the whole temple, as polluted by the access of sinners to it, was repeated annually. Jesus, as the way, the truth, and the life, sets himself forth as the Mediator, Priest, and Prophet of his people. By his life-giving Spirit, the dead in sin are quickened, and thus brought to him as the truth, and by him permitted to approach the mercy-seat. No man ever approached God as Father who was not thus quickened, instructed, drawn, and led. Ver. 15-26. Here, again, the Lord Jesus claims identity with the Father, having the same nature, essence, virtues, pleasures, and purposes. The view given touching the Holy Spirit's office as a comforter is very remarkable, and significant of a most important element in the Christian economy. Jesus had performed his part of the work; and it now became expedient for them that he should remove, to make way for the Advocate and Comforter, the Eternal Spirit, who would descend upon them. Much importance attaches to the expression, the Comforter, as the Spirit of truth, being himself essentially truth, the teacher of truth, and the witness of the truth. This great world of ungodly men in which we live, however, can neither receive him as the Spirit of truth, nor as the Comforter. They have no desire for the grace he imparts, the emotions he excites, and the paths in which 23 Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

CHAPTER XV.

The mutual love between Christ and his members, under the parable of the vine.

I AM the ¹true vine, and my Father is the ²husbandman.

3 Every ⁴branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away; ⁵and every ⁶branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 ⁷Abide in me, and ⁸I in you. ⁹As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

5 I am the vine, ye are the branches:

he conducts the faithful. No states of mind can be more at variance than those of the man in whom that Spirit dwells, and those of the natural man, who is still living after the flesh, an enemy of holiness, and of God. The office of the Spirit would very largely consist in bringing to their remembrance the things which, in the course of his public ministry, Christ had said to them. That same Spirit, however, where circumstances required it, would also enable them to read the hearts of men, and to reveal the secrets of futurity. Ver. 27-31. "Peace," in the mouth of Jesus, was more than a mere benevolent wish—it was a substantial blessing. As bestowed by him, it was a pledge of everything necessary to impart peace to them, and to preserve it when imparted; it implies, therefore, protection against all enemies, seen and unseen, and a constant supply of necessary aid to enable them to witness a good confession, and to hold fast the beginning of their confidence. The words in ver. 23, relative to the Son's inferiority, are to be understood, either with regard to his human nature, or with regard to his office as Mediator, in which he was the Father's servant, sent forth by him, acting under him, and in obedience to him, the subject of sorrows, and exposed to many enemies, with a violent and terrible death at the end. Things now began to be deeply serious, so that the Saviour was indisposed to speak, and his disciples ill prepared to hear; meditation and prayer were exercises more suitable both to him and to them than any species of oral intercourse.

Chap. XV. 1-17. The vine, an object of high importance in Eastern nations, is frequently resorted to by their poetical writers. The Lord Jesus here employs it, in a very direct manner, to illustrate the union which obtains between himself and his people. The Father's superiority over all, as proprietor of the vineyard, is beautifully illustrative of the economy of redemption: he plants, waters, guards, and protects it; and he has appointed the Son of his love as the vine, to constitute the source of life to all the branches. The union of the Divine and the human nature in the person of Christ, and the fulness of the Spirit in him, resemble the root of the vine deriving fruitfulness from rich soil; and his mediatorial office, which may be compared to the stem, conveys these blessings to believers, rendering them fruitful. The removal of the barren branches suggests a very important idea. Properly speaking, no true branch can be wholly barren, but there may be a showy profession without truth, which will be productive of nothing. Such a profession must necessarily have an end. Temptation and persecution are often serviceable in cutting it short; and when the appointed hour shall arrive, there will be an everlasting severance between the true and the false. In the East, the worthless branches of the vine are employed for fuel, and to this doubtless the Saviour refers. Throughout the whole of the latter part of this Gospel great prominence is given to the subject of love; and here the Saviour tests it, by shewing that in his breast it had been active, even to 21 But all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me.

22 If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin; but now they have no ²cloak for their sin.

23 ^bHe that hateth me, hateth my Father also.

24 ^oIf I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: ^dbut now have they both seen and ^ohated both me and my Father.

25 But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, ¹They hated me without a cause.

26 But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, ²which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:

27 And ²ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning.

CHAPTER XVI.

Christ comforteth his disciples against tribulation, by the promise of the Holy Ghost.

THESE things ²have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended.

2 They ^bshall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service.

3 And these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor me.

4 But these things have I told you, ^othat, when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And these things I said not unto you at the beginning, ^dbecause I was with you.

5 But now ^oI go my way to him that the extent of sincere and universal obedience. Ver. 18-27. Hitherto the disciples had had but little proof of the world's persecution with respect to themselves; they had seen enough of it as to their Master, and on his departure they would come in for their own share, and a full share it would be. For that event the Master now sets himself to prepare them, by giving them rather to rejoice than to mourn over being heirs of the world's enmity. Amid their own afflictions, it might soothe them to remember his; and if, in his case, the world returned persecution for salvation, they need not be astonished if, as the dispensers of the doctrines of that salvation, they themselves should receive similar treatment. Sorrow and comfort are related terms. The designation of the Holy Spirit as the Comforter, by implication, strongly hinted at the afflictions which were to overtake them; but as their day was so would be their strength, and in proportion to their suffering would be their consolation.

Chap. XVI. 1-15. These things refer to the statements of the foregoing chapter, the object of which was to prepare the disciples for the troubles which awaited them. Excommunication, whether from idolatrous or Popish communities, is, at the present day, known to be a very serious affair. Short of death itself, it is the heaviest blow that can be given by society to the object of its displeasure. Nothing could exceed the bitterness, cruelty, and misery attending it under the Jewish dispensation. It was early resorted to as a means of preventing conversion to the Lord Jesus Christ. Nothing was so calculated to prepare the followers of Christ for these afflictions as to be apprised of them beforehand, and to receive from his own gracious lips the assurance of the necessary support and consolation. There is great beauty in the term, "the Comforter," as appropriated to the Holy Spirit. The word properly means Advocate; and one of the highest forms of advocacy is the comforting of those who are wronged by asserting the rights which belong to them, and protecting them against their oppressors. The work assigned to the Holy Spirit is remarkable as it respects the conversion of men. In the turning of sinners to God, the first step must be a conviction of sin, an apprehension of danger, and a hope of mercy. The benighted mass of humankind limit their views of sin or transgression to their conduct towards their fellow-creatures; they rarely think of God, and still less of the Lord Jesus, and nothing is further from sent me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?

6 But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart.

7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; 'It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, 'he will ¹reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment:

9 Of sin, because they believe not on me:

10 Of ²righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more:

11 Of ³judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.

12 I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit when he, ⁴the Spirit of truth, is come, ⁵he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, ⁶that shall he speak: and ⁷he will shew you things to come.

14 He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

15 ⁸All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

16 ⁹A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again ¹⁰a little while, and ye shall see me; ¹¹because I go to the Father.

17 Then ¹²said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again a little while, and ye shall see me: and, Because I go to the Father?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? ¹³'we cannot tell what he saith.

19 Now ¹⁴Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye enquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again a little while, and ye shall see me?

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, That ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice; and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

21 A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she their minds than the idea that unbelief is the very sin of sins, the great condemning transgression. As the Spirit of truth, the promise was peculiarly precious, since it was necessary to fit them for the great work to which they were called. By their being guided "into all truth," we are, doubtless, to understand the whole scheme of the Gospel of salvation. The sum and substance of the great work to be performed by the Holy Spirit was to glorify the Lord Jesus, with respect to his person, work, and offices. Mankind would thus be shewn the need of his atonement, grace, and righteousness, the preciousness of his salvation, and the glory of his kingdom. Ver. 16-33. The disciples are here distinctly apprised of what would be the effect of the events just about to occur. These additional assurances were much fitted to support them during the dark and dismal remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 And ¹⁵'ye now therefore have sorrow; but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, ¹⁶and your joy no man taketh from you.

23 And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, ¹⁷'Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

24 Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, ¹⁸'that your joy may be full.

25 These things have I spoken unto you in ¹⁹proverbs: but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, ²⁰'but I shall shew you plainly of the Father.

26 At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you:

27 For ²¹'the Father himself loveth you, ²²'because ye have loved me, ²³'and have believed that I came out from God.

28 I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, ²⁴'I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 ²⁵'His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no ²⁶proverb.

30 Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee: by this we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe?

32 Behold, ²⁷'the hour cometh, yea, is now come, ²⁸'that ye shall be scattered, every man to his ²⁹'own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken unto you, that ³⁰'in me ye might have peace. ³¹'In the world ye shall have tribulation: ³²'but be of good cheer; ³³'I have overcome the world.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Christ prayeth to his Father to glorify him, & to preserve his apostles in unity and in truth.

THESE words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, ²'the hour is come; ³'glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:

2 ⁴'As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should ⁵'give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

period of his rest in the grave. They are, moreover, pointed to the privileges which they would subsequently enjoy when the Spirit should have descended, and have taught them all things, removing their doubts, confirming their faith, and comforting them on every side. The people of God are, generally, more or less according to circumstances, at one time or another, the subjects of severe affliction, and it is their privilege to repair to the same source, and to rest on the same promise, as the apostles. If their sufferings abound, so also may their consolation.

Chap. XVII. 1-11. Of all the prayers contained in the Sacred Scriptures, this is the most wonderful, as issuing from the lips of God made manifest in the flesh. The circumstances, also, in which it was uttered add to 3 And this is life eternal, that they might know thee "the only true God, 'and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

4 I have glorified thee on the earth : I have "finished the work which thou gavest me to do.

5 And now, O Father, "glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee 'before the world was.

6 ¶ I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world : "thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and "they have kept thy word.

7 Now "they have known that all things, whatsoever thou hast given me, "are of thee :

8 For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

9 I pray for them: I pray not for the world, "but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.

10 And "all mine are thine, and thine are mine; "and I am glorified in them.

11 And now "I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, "keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me; "that they may be one, as we are.

12 While I was with them in the world, "I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, "and none of them is lost, but "the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.

13 And now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.

14 I have given them thy word; and 26 And "I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it; "that the love the interest and the importance which attaches to it. Nor is this all; as beginning with the apostles and the disciples of their day, and comprehensive of the family of God through all nations, and through all times, it is the most sublime, awful, and glorious thing conceivable. Commencing with his own glorification, as the foundation of his Church, the Saviour supplicates the welfare of his servants, and the comfort of believers. "The hour is come," is a most affecting expression—the hour to which he had looked forward from eternity! The work for which he had come into the world was now to be performed, and all the instruments necessary were prepared. Up to that period the Wicked One was restrained, but now permission is given him to accomplish his purposes of enmity, which towards mankind would be turned into mercy. On the glorification of the Son would depend the glorification of the Father; and the counsels of eternity abundantly provided for both. Every circumstance attending the sacrifice he was now to make: the scene in the garden—the striking down of the multitude who came to apprehend him—the curing of the ear of Malchus—the confession before Pilate—the dream of the governor's wife—the conversion of the malefactor on the cross—the supernatural darkness that covered the land—the rising of the dead from their graves when the Lord of Glory expired—his resurrection, ascension, and sitting down at the Father's right hand—the descent of the Holy Spirit, and the spread of the Gospel; all these entered into the glorification of the Lord Jesus as the means to the ultimate end—the Father's glory! The Saviour's manifestation of the Father's name to his servants implies much. Great things depended on the life and labours of these men, who required for their work the completest furniture as to knowledge, and the highest power as to spirit; and what they needed they obtained in the most abundant measure, when the glorious day arrived for their receiving of power from on high. While the prayer offered here was primarily and especially for the Eleven, it included also the Seventy Disciples, and all others about to be called to the Ministry. Ver. 12-26. Judas is designated "the Son of Perdition"—the most expressive term for his crime and his punishment that language could supply. The Saviour clearly foresaw, and provided for, the enmity with which his servants would have to contend. Like himself, the reprovers of a world lying in wickedness, witnesses for God and truth, they had to lay their account with universal hatred, persecution, and ultimate martyrdom. It sufficed, however, for them that their Master had prayed that they might be "kept from the evil" around them; for that prayer was heard, and they were everywhere more than conquerors through him. By the Saviour's "sanctifying" of himself, is to be understood, not the purification of his nature, for in him was no sin, but the consecration of himself—soul, and body, and spirit—to the work of his people's salvation. It is cheering to the faithful of the present, as it will be to those of all coming ages, that the Saviour's prayer was comprehensive of all future time, and of every portion of the Church still to be born. The prominence here given to unity is wonderful, and ought to be deeply pondered by the people of God. For this they should labour and pray. It is, nevertheless, a wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, ^mand I in them.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Judas betrayeth Jesus. 15 Peter denieth him, 28 he is arraigned before Pilate.

WHEN Jesus had spoken these words, he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place; for Jesus oft-times resorted thither with his disciples.

3 *Judas then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns, and torches, and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, ^bknowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, ^cWhom seek ye?

5 They answered him, ^dJesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them.

6 As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, ^ethey went backward, and fell to the ground.

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he. If therefore ye seek me, let these go their way:

9 That the saying might be fulfilled which he spake, ^fOf them which thou gavest me have I lost none.

10 Then Simon Peter, having a sword, drew it, and smote the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.

11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: ^gthe cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 ¶ Then the band, and the captain, and officers of the Jews, took Jesus, and ^hbound him,

13 And led him away to ⁱAnnas first: (for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high priest that same year.)

14 Now Caiaphas was he which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

15 ¶ And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple. That disciple was known unto the high priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high priest.

16 But Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then saith the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, ^kI am not.

18 And the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals; (for it was cold;) and they warmed themselves: and ^lPeter stood with them, and warmed himself.

19 ¶ The high priest then ^masked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him, ⁿI spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22 And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by ^ostruck Jesus with ^pthe palm of his hand, saying, ^qAnswerest thou the high priest so?

23 Jesus answered him, ^rIf I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; but if well, why smitest thou me?

24 (Now ^sAnnas had sent him ^tbound unto Caiaphas the high priest.)

25 And Simon Peter stood and warmed himself: they said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? ^uHe denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One of the servants of the high priest (^vbeing ^whis kinsman whose ear Peter cut off) saith, ^xDid not I see thee in the garden with him?

27 Peter then denied again; ^yand immediately the cock crew.

28 ¶ Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto ^zthe hall of judgment: and it was early; ^{aa}and they themselves went not into the judgment-hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the passover.

29 Pilate then went out unto them, and thing to be realised, not by mere purpose, resolve, or organisation—it results from perfection of knowledge, and purity of heart. In proportion as the saints see alike, and think alike, they will feel alike, and as they approach to the fulness of the stature of perfect men in the Lord Jesus, they will meet in him and be one.

Chap. XVIII. 1-27. The band received from the chief priests and Pharisees signified a body of Roman soldiers, who, on this occasion, were unworthily employed to support the traitor Judas. The falling back here mentioned was clearly supernatural, and appears to have been a fulfilment of the words of David in Psalm xxvii., where he says, "When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, came upon me, to eat up my flesh, they stumbled and fell." This occurrence ought to have appalled and repelled them; but, instigated by the powers of darkness, and intent on the accomplishment of their cruel purpose, they no sooner arose than they returned to the Saviour, who accosted them as before, and received a similar answer. The circumstances which led to the accomplishment of the words of Jesus concerning Peter are remarkable; one after another put questions, each receiving a prompt denial, till the cock crew, and Jesus turned and looked at him, when the spell was broken, and, in a moment, he realised his awful condition of shame and guilt. Overwhelmed by the discovery of his weakness and wickedness, Matthew tells us, "he went out and wept bitterly." Ver. 23-40. The chief priests and Pharisees, while accomplishing the murder of the Messiah, professed the profoundest regard for the law of Moses. They would not even enter the judgment-hall, which they deemed polluted by the presence of the Roman soldiers—thus, as Jesus had told them, straining at the gnat, they swallowed the camel. The circumstance of the Roman supremacy at this said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

30 They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31 Then said Pilate unto them, Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death:

32 That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake, signifying ^a what death he should die.

33 Then Pilate entered into the judgment-hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me?

35 Pilate answered, Am I a Jew? ^bThine own nation, and the chief priests, have delivered thee unto me: ^cwhat hast thou done?

36 Jesus answered, ^dMy kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, ^ethen would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.

37 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, ^fthat I should bear witness unto the truth. ^gEvery one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith unto him, ^hWhat is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, ⁱI find in him no fault at all.

39 But ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one at the passover: will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

40 Then cried they all again, saying, Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

2 And ^bthe soldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe,

3 And said, ^cHail, King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 ^d¶ Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that I find no fault in him.

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and ^ethe purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, ^fBehold the man!

6 When the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

8 ^g¶ When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid;

9 And went again into the judgment-hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speak-est thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, ^hThou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore ⁱhe that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin.

12 And ^jfrom thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cesar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cesar.

13 ^k¶ When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment-seat, in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.

14 And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, ^lBehold your King!

15 But they cried out, ^mAway with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Cesar.

period provided for the fulfilment of the words of Jesus as to his being lifted up; and the prediction about the piercing of his hands and feet, that could only be verified by crucifixion, which was not a Jewish, but a Roman punishment for the worst malefactors amongst foreigners and slaves, for it was unlawful in the case of a Roman citizen. The deportment of Pilate was of a very mixed character: he persevered in protesting his belief in the innocence of the Lord Jesus to the utmost, and was only overcome by the determination and the dexterity of the chief priests and Pharisees, who, as the next chapter shews, gave the subject a political turn, which brought him to concur in the crucifixion. Pilate's inquiry, "What is truth?" has been viewed as an expression of contempt; but the context, carefully examined, shews there is no ground for such a conclusion.

Chap. XIX. 1-24. Pilate was clearly under an influence of a supernatural character, since, otherwise, he could hardly have been expected to act as he did. The pertinacity with which he protested against the crucifixion, on the ground of the innocence of Jesus, is remarkable. He thus, probably without intending it, gave the chief priests and the Pharisees abundance of time to reconsider their own course, and to ponder the consequences of their demand. But his humane obstinacy only served to inflame their rage, and exasperate their hatred. He was clearly appalled by the intimation, that Jesus had "made himself the Son of God," and his feelings were confirmed by the extraordinary dream of his wife. He was, therefore, the more intent on his release. Obviously with an honest intent, he had made up his mind to the most determined opposition. The moment, however, that he was menaced with a charge of treason against Cesar, he lost his courage and gave in. But even then, he surrounded the deed with circumstances which to the last constituted a solemn protest, crowning the whole with the momentous appeal, "Behold your King!" The 16 Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 ¶ And he, bearing his cross, went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew, ^mGolgotha;

18 Where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

19 ¶ And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered, What I have written I have written.

23 ¶ Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son!

27 Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.

28 ¶ After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and put it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost.

31 ¶ The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath-day, (for that sabbath-day was an high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

32 Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs:

34 But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came thereout blood and water.

35 And he that saw it bare record, and his record is true; and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe.

36 For these things were done, that the scripture should be fulfilled, A bone of him shall not be broken.

37 And again another scripture saith, They shall look on him whom they pierced.

38 ¶ And after this, Joseph of Arimathea, (being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews,) besought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus: and Pilate gave him leave. He came therefore, and took the body of Jesus.

39 And there came also Nicodemus, (which at the first came to Jesus by language maddened them into fury; but the governor on this point remained firm, and completed his purpose by the title which he placed upon the cross—"JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS." The better to provide for the understanding of the language, he gave three versions of it—Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. They struggled hard to have this title divested of its affirmative character, and set forth, not as a proposition, but as a pretence on the part of Jesus. The governor, however, was immovable, expressing his determination in language in the highest degree significant of firmness, and which will be noted to the end of time—"WHAT I HAVE WRITTEN I HAVE WRITTEN." The garments of the Saviour provided for the fulfilment of the prediction which had gone before concerning him. Division was carried as far as possible, and then a lot was cast for the principal garment, since to rend it had been to destroy it. Ver. 25-37. No part of the Saviour's deportment is more affecting and wonderful than that which refers to his mother and to John: his address to each was a volume in a sentence. "Woman, behold thy son!" apprised her that she, now a poor widow, bereaved of her Son, would find all she required in his surviving disciple and friend. "Behold thy mother!" his address to John, teems with equal significance, setting forth the duties which would now devolve upon him towards a parent. The distinction accorded to John throughout the whole of the Saviour's ministry was great; but the highest tribute conferred on the "beloved disciple" was this consignment to him of Mary. Further honours were now added, such as the preparation of this Gospel, the subsequent Epistles, and the Book of the Revelation; but nothing came so near to the heart of the Saviour, and so betokens love and confidence, as this. It is strange that the Papists should claim such pre-eminence for Peter, seeing that in all these important matters he occupied but a subordinate place in the favour of Jesus compared with John! The only notable thing in which he received superiority, was his having been made the Apostle of the Circumcision. Ver. 38-42. One of the most remarkable things in the Gospels is the conduct of Joseph and of Nicodemus—the former a secret disciple for fear of the Jews, and the latter coming to Jesus by night, ashamed to come by day. But while these men of blessed memory thus acted in the period of the Saviour's popularity, when his praises were in every mouth, in the darkest hour of his history, when all, even his disciples, forsook him and fled, they alone came boldly forward to perform the last offices of friendship to the dead body of the crucified Redeemer! The fact supplies a doctrine: that friendship is not always the most to be relied on which is the most cordial, open, and even the most ostentatious. The hour of defeat, distress, and humiliation, will often reveal valuable night,) and brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about an hundred pound weight.

40 Then took they the body of Jesus, and wound it in linen clothes with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury.

41 Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

42 There laid they Jesus therefore, because of the Jews' preparation-day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

CHAPTER XX.

11 Jesus appeareth to Mary, 19 and to his disciples.
24 Thomas's incredulity, 28 and confession.

THE first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4 So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,

7 And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8 Then went in also that other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 ¶ But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and, as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre, 12 And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.

17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.

18 Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

19 ¶ Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

20 And when he had so said, he shewed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord.

21 Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.

22 And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost.

23 Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.

24 ¶ But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But adherents and powerful supporters, who had previously attracted but little attention, and who pursued a course that even laid them open to suspicion.

Chap. XX. 1-18. The way in which the Jewish grave-clothes were disposed, bespoke care and composure, shewing, that the body had not been removed in haste. There is some difficulty in the assertion, that John "saw and believed." What did he believe? Some say, that the body was removed; but he ascertained this by merely looking into the sepulchre without entering it. The natural import of the word, therefore, would seem to be, that he now believed the resurrection, which he had not previously understood, notwithstanding the explicitness with which Jesus had stated it. The reasons of the Saviour forbidding Mary to touch him, it is difficult to discover. It has been supposed that she threw herself at his feet as if to lay hold upon him, and that his words implied that she need not be afraid of his disappearance, since he would remain some time before his ascension, so that she would see him again. Ver. 19-23. This was one of the most sublime moments in the history of the Saviour and his apostles. The effect of his appearance, under the circumstances, it is impossible to conceive. His deportment towards his wondering disciples was full of grace and condescension. His resurrection was now beyond doubt; as if to remove the least feeling of distrust as to his personal identity, his first act was to give them the evidence of their own eyes, by shewing them his hands and his side. It seems clear that, in breathing on them at that moment, they received a communication from the Divine Spirit, preparatory to the work which they would have to do previous to the day of Pentecost. The result of this was increase of light, faith, peace, confidence, hope, and joy. Ver. 23 has been grievously perverted by Popery; the apostles had no power to forgive sin, as a simple sovereign act, without repentance and faith; but they were authorised to pronounce, with respect to all such, that to them there was thereafter no condemnation, inasmuch as Jesus was the "end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." It was further their province to declare, he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 ¶ And after eight days, again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them. Then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, ¹Peace be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing.

28 And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

30 ¶ And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

31 But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Christ, appearing again, 15 giveth Peter a charge, whose death he foretells.

AFTER these things ^bJesus shewed himself again to the disciples at ^cthe sea of Tiberias; and on this wise shewed he himself.

2 There were together Simon Peter, and ^dThomas called Didymus, and ^eNathanael of ^fCana in Galilee, and ^gthe sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, ^hI go concerning all the impenitent and unbelieving, that their sins remained upon them. Ver. 24-31. Men of strong individuality are ever true to their own peculiarities of character. These facts were alike exemplified in Peter and in Thomas, who appear in all respects to have presented a remarkable contrast—the one was confiding to rashness, the other cautious to scepticism. Thomas, however, overwhelmed by the sight of his risen Lord, was at once bowed down and melted into the cordial, joyful exclamation, “My Lord, and my God!”

Chap. XXI. 1-14. The death of Jesus produced a great change in the circumstances of the disciples. From that time they were without either employment or bread, and by consequence necessitated to return to their previous avocations. While their Lord lived and laboured, they were his constant attendants, and they shared with him the liberality of converts and friends; but the crucifixion had for the time being destroyed their hopes, and rendered the future a matter of the utmost uncertainty. During the long period of their connexion with the Saviour, they had received nothing beyond a supply, more or less, for the wants of the passing day. They were dependent even for clothing on the kindness of converts. With respect to emoluments, they had none. The fact is not a little remarkable, that they should have continued so long without any recompence, shewing the extraordinary influence which was exerted by them. During most of the period, indeed, they were sustained by the hope that when his kingdom should be set up, they would receive ample compensation in the posts and offices which would then be allotted to them. In the meantime, however, this left them poor and penniless like their Master. How the families of those that were a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; ¹and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore; ²but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then Jesus saith unto them, ³Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, ⁴Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. ⁵They cast therefore; and now they were not able to draw it for ⁶the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore ⁷that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, ⁸It is the Lord. Now, ⁹when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt ¹⁰his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship, (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred ⁹cubits,) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon then as they were come to land, ¹⁰they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three: ¹²and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

12 Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples ¹³durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 Jesus ¹⁴then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This is now ¹⁵the third time that heads of houses were supported, we are not informed; it is clear, however, that they must have relied on the providence of God, or have exerted themselves, according to circumstances, for their own maintenance. But now that their Master had left them, they were no worse than previous to entering his service: the sea remained with its finny tribes, and it was not difficult to procure nets and instruments necessary to the resumption of their old occupation. Peter, with characteristic promptitude, was the first to lead in the new movement. He said, “I go a fishing;” and his friends replied, “We also go with thee.” The eye of their gracious Master, ever alive to their welfare, followed them. The night was one of disappointment; but the morning brought with it a proof of his providential guidance. As a stranger on the shore, he bids them cast the net on the right side of the ship, assuring them that they would there find fish. The net had formerly been let down on the left side; but the distance in the deep was not more than a few feet; and therefore the inference was obvious, that if there were no fish on the left, there could be none on the right. They, nevertheless, obeyed; and their faith obtained its immediate reward in such a manner as to proclaim who it was that spake to them. John was the first to conclude it was the Lord, and said so to Peter, who, not doubting it, with his usual promptitude dashed into the flood, and swam ashore that he might be the first to hail his Master. Our notions of propriety are somewhat offended by the intimation that he was naked; but without cause, for nothing was more common than for fishers thus to carry on their avocations during the genial weather of a warm climate; such, in fact, is the case still. One of our most instructive Eastern travellers records that fishermen very generally

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

This book is the sole and only record of the greatest event that has occurred in our world—the Introduction and Establishment of Christianity. Heathen history slightly refers to the general fact, but makes no attempt to recount the particulars. Luke stands alone in his glory, as performing for the New what Moses did for the Old Testament Church. He is the Father of Church History. There are no materials for any rival composition. It is, therefore, this or nothing. This book presents a narrative of the proceedings of the First Missionary Society for the period of one generation, setting forth all the great facts connected with the Divine movement. The history closes with the imprisonment of Paul, and therefore could not have been written later than the year 64 or 65; for, had it been extended to a later period, it would doubtless have recorded the issue of an event in which the whole Gentile world was unspeakably interested.

CHAPTER I.

go naked, except a small strip of cloth around their loins, so that without the slightest inconvenience they can either wade or swim, as circumstances may require. The coals, the fire, and the bread were all purely miraculous. Here, as everywhere subsequent to the resurrection, the Saviour became invested with a mystery which awed the disciples, to an extent unknown previous to the crucifixion. Ver. 15-25. The Saviour's intercourse with his disciples is always marked by practical bearing. Not a word is uttered, not a deed is done, but with solemnity, and with a view to an end. During the repast it would seem as if he himself had remained silent in the presence of his wondering disciples, none of whom dared to utter a word. That ended, the Lord addressed himself to Peter, in a manner which clearly pointed to his threefold denial, with a view to impress upon him his weakness, folly, and guilt, and, at the same time, to restore to peace, pardon, and former confidence. The scene was doubtless one which produced on the minds of the rest of the disciples an indelible impression, as well as on that of Peter. How pregnant, how significant, the Saviour's interrogations! There is no upbraiding of Peter—that is left to himself; and his own conscience performed the task with a pungency to which nothing need be added. He at last threw himself on the omniscience of his Lord, who knew all things, and who knew the sincerity of his love. Here, again, the singular trait of Peter's character breaks forth. Scarcely is this solemn scene over, and Peter apprised of the circumstances which should attend the latter stages of his life, when, seeing John at hand, he presumes to inquire of the Master what should become of him. Throughout, John and Peter were peculiarly attached to each other. It was not unnatural, therefore, having had disclosed to him in substance his own future, he should like to know something concerning that of his friend. The request, however, was not granted, and the impertinent curiosity was put an end to by an injunction to mind his own business, and follow his Master. Thus terminates this wonderful and most precious Gospel. John intimates that it is a mere fragment of the things said and done by the Saviour—a fact not referred to by the other disciples, but in itself deserving of special notice. Had every word of the Saviour's discourses, public and private, during his whole ministry, been recorded, it would doubtless have constituted a vast proofs, being seen of them 'forty days, and 'speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God:

4 And, ¹being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saieth he, ye have heard of me.

5 For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time ²restore again the kingdom to Israel?

7 And he said unto them, 'It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, ³which the Father hath put in his own power.

8 But 'ye shall receive ²power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and ⁴unto the uttermost part of the earth.

9 And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and ⁵a cloud received him out of their sight.

10 ¶ And, while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel;

11 Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, ⁶shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath-day's journey.

13 And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both ⁷Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, ⁸Philip, and ⁹Thomas, Bartholomew, and ¹⁰Matthew, ¹¹James the son of ¹²Alpheus, and ¹³Simon Zelotes, and ¹⁴Judas the brother of James.

14 These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren.

15 ¶ And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of the names together were about an hundred and twenty,) 16 ¹⁵Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, ¹⁶which the Holy Ghost, by the mouth of David, ¹⁷spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus.

17 For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of ¹⁸this ministry.

18 Now ¹⁹this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called, in their proper tongue, ²⁰Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.

20 For it is written 'in the book of Psalms, ²¹Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and, ²²His ²³bishoprick let another take.

21 Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, 22 ²⁴Beginning from the baptism of John, ²⁵unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be ²⁶a witness with us of his resurrection.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph called ²⁷Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen, library. The magnitude may be understood from the hyperbolic, but still most impressive, statement of John, that the "world itself would not have contained the books that should have been written."

Chap. I. 1-14. By the "former treatise" is clearly meant the Gospel according to Luke. The "infallible proofs" here referred to were of a nature the most convincing imaginable. There was no evidence of which the case admitted that was not given. The Saviour repeats the promise of a baptism with the Holy Ghost, and signifies that it is at hand. Still, the disciples were in the dark as to the true character of his kingdom. But the main difficulty connected with his death was now fairly overcome; he had died as he had frequently intimated he would; but the resurrection restored all their hopes, and revived their anticipations of a temporal reign. From this proceeded the question touching the restoration of the kingdom to Israel, which implied the overthrow of the Romans and the re-establishment of the liberties of Israel. Visions of power, therefore, began to dazzle them, and the Lord did not see it meet at once to correct them. Perceiving their thirst for power, he tells them that they shall have it by and by: "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost has come upon you;" not the power they desired, but a power unspeakably more to be coveted—a power which the world could neither give nor take away. The return of the Saviour, as intimated by the angels, was a cheering promise, corresponding with his own gracious assurance. During this period of suspense and inaction, no employment was so suitable to the circumstances as prayer; and in this they continued with one accord. At no previous period were they so thoroughly imbued with the spirit of devotion. The position of Mary is full of interest. Where her adopted son John was, there was she; and if by the term "brethren" of Jesus, we are to understand her other sons, they were clearly men of a religious character, since otherwise they would not have been found in such company. Ver. 15-26. Peter always takes the lead, and he seems to have been expected so to do. The application of the Scripture he cites to the case in hand, was so clear as to cut short all discussion, and to carry conviction to the mind of every hearer. The field was called the "field of blood," as having been bought with the price paid by the authorities to Judas. It has, indeed, been supposed that it was so called because of Judas having there committed suicide, and because there his body burst asunder, sprinkling the earth with his blood. There is no certainty, however, as to this point, and the language of Zechariah in regard to the subject seems fatal to such a view. The proper qualification for an apostle was, a perfect knowledge of all the events which had taken place since the commencement of John's baptism, and the sight of the Lord Jesus after his resurrection, which was the primary truth they were to testify throughout the world. They went about the work in the right spirit, selecting two individuals, both known to 25 That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.

26 And "they gave forth their lots: and the lot fell upon "Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

CHAPTER II.

AND when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

2 And "suddenly there came a sound from heaven, ^blike of a rushing mighty wind, and ^cit filled all the house where they were sitting.

3 And there appeared unto them ^dcloven tongues, ^elike as of fire, and it ^fsat upon each of them.

6 Now, when this ^hwas noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were ⁱconfounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

7 And they were all amazed, and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans?

21 And it shall come to pass, that "who-soever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, ^aa man approved of God among you by miracles, and wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

23 Him, ^bbeing delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ^cye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

24 Whom "God hath raised up, having ^dloosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.

possess the necessary qualifications, and then calling upon the Lord to decide.

Chap. II. 1-13. The fiery symbol strikingly indicated the character of the gift conferred, which was necessary to the universal diffusion of the Gospel. The importance of the presence of the strangers from "every nation under heaven," is obvious. Two great things were secured by it; they severally testified that what was spoken was not a mere jumble of articulations without meaning or sense, but living languages of their own mother-tongues, in which they severally heard the glorious Gospel; and it seems highly probable that it was made the power of God to their own salvation, so that they carried it with them both in their understanding and in their hearts, whithersoever they went, on returning to their respective homes. Ignorance, prejudice, and hatred, without the presence of such counteractive evidence, would have made short work of this stupendous miracle by the scornful declaration, "These men are full of new wine." Ver. 14-40. There was great propriety in all the other apostles standing up with Peter, as in this way each shared in the honour of contempt for the Lord's sake, and in the responsibility of confessing him, while Peter was, in effect, the mouth of all. There stood a body of men of sound mind, adequate knowledge, and unimpeachable character, all testifying to the facts, that Jesus of Nazareth had risen from the dead, that they had often conversed with him, and beheld him ascend into the heavens. Peter boldly appeals to them for the truth of what he said about the miracles, wonders, and signs which God wrought among them by Jesus. They could not deny it, for the proofs were to be found everywhere throughout the land. There was no town or village of any importance in which there were not those whose minds or bodies testified to the merciful exercise of an Infinite Power. The "determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God" did not in the least interfere with the free-will of these men, by whose wicked hands the Lord had been crucified and slain. Peter assumes this, and acts accordingly, holding them responsible for their deed, and no objection is offered on their part. Whatever a vain heart and a perverse philosophy may have led men to say to the contrary, every man feels that he is free, and that he is by consequence responsible. While man's wrath is made to praise God, that wrath is not originated by him; it is their own, and they are accountable for it. The pertinence of the Scripture quoted by Peter is remarkable. The promise of the Holy Spirit, and the history of the day, strikingly accorded—the one confirming the other. The address of Peter is direct and personal, and nothing can exceed the pungency of it. It was an alarming fact for the house of Israel, that he whom they had crucified

25 For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved :

26 Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad ; moreover also, my flesh shall rest in hope :

27 Because thou wilt not ¹leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer ²thine Holy One ¹to see corruption.

28 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Men and brethren, ³let me freely speak unto you of ⁴the patriarch ⁵David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

30 Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

31 He, seeing this before, ⁶spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 This Jesus hath God raised up, ⁷whereof we all are witnesses.

33 Therefore being ⁸by the right hand of God exalted, and ⁹having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, ¹⁰he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended into the heavens : but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make ¹¹thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made ¹²that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 ¶ Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter, and to the rest of the apostles, ¹³Men and brethren, ¹⁴what shall we do?

38 Then Peter said unto them, ¹⁵Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, ¹⁶and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER III.

1 Peter and John restore a lame man ; 12 ascribing the cure to the name of Jesus, 19 and exhorting to repentance.

NOW Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.

2 And a certain man, ¹lame from his mother's womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple ²which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple ;

3 Who, seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms.

4 And Peter, ³fastening his eyes upon him, with John, said, ⁴Look on us.

5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none ; ⁵but such as I have give I thee :

was both "Lord and Christ." Such a discovery might well inspire them with terror, and the fact that things were as Peter stated is not denied : they sank under the weight of the awful accusation. The reply of Peter to the agonising question is prompt and explicit—"Repent every one of you," and "be baptized every one of you." Ver. 41-47. The repentance enjoined by Peter comprised faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, belief of the facts which had been recorded concerning him, as well as sorrow for the sin which had been committed. This faith produced peace, and more ; they "gladly received the word," and were baptized to the extent of three thousand souls. The stability of these believers shewed their sincerity. It was not a mere passing emotion, for they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, in breaking of bread, and in prayers. As the tendency of every passion is to multiply itself, so nothing is more adapted to promote conviction of sin than the sight of such as are convicted. This new state of feeling produced a new order of society in the land—a church within a church, a family within a family, the separation of the merely natural from the really spiritual children of Abraham. The circumstances thus created were peculiar, requiring arrangements of a corresponding character. Many of the converts having but little earthly substance, must have withdrawn to earn their bread, had it not been supplied by their more opulent brethren. Hence arose the extraordinary spectacle of a community of goods—a new thing in the earth, which no doubt deeply affected the candid portion of the Jews, who admired and wondered. The thing bespoke so much brotherly love as to excite universal surprise ; they "had favour with all the people," and that favour was the best preparative for further conversion, and the daily addition to the Church of such as were saved.

Chap. III. 1-11. Notwithstanding the assiduity of the apostles and their friends in the exercise of prayer, they did not suffer private to interfere with public worship. The ninth hour was one of the seasons set apart for public prayer, which, by the more devout, was observed three times a day—a fact which is illustrated by the practice of Daniel and of David. That in the 8 And he, leaping up, stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and ^bpraising God.

9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God:

10 And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11 And as ^athe lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

12 ¶ And when Peter saw ^ait, he answered unto the people, 'Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

CHAPTER IV.

1 Peter and John imprisoned. 8 Their defence. 18 They are threatened.

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the ¹captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them,

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and ^a'preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and put ^athem in hold unto the next day: for it was now even-tide.

4 Howbeit ^bmany of them which heard the word believed; and ^athe number of the men was about five thousand.

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes, morning, or the third hour, was about nine o'clock—the sixth hour, at noon—and the evening, or the ninth hour, about three o'clock. Ver. 12-18. Here Peter is spokesman, as usual. On this occasion he is direct and summary in the dreadful charge of murder, which he brings against his countrymen. Here he proclaims Jesus, "the Holy One"—"the Just"—and "the Prince of Life," announcing the great fact, that he had been raised from the dead, and that by his power the miracle had been performed. Peter, notwithstanding the pungency of his address, blends it with the benevolence and compassion of the Gospel, clearly indicating to them that the deed which they had done through ignorance was yet a confirmation of the testimony which God had borne from age to age, that the Lord Jesus, in the fullness of time, should suffer for his people. Ver. 19-26. As the apostles had been commanded to begin at Jerusalem, the centre of guilt, there Peter is most free and full in his proclamation of the sufficiency of the Gospel to meet the necessities even of the murderers of its Divine Author! Salvation was possible even for them, inasmuch as the blood of Christ cleansed from all sin, even from the sin of those by whom it was shed! It is worthy of notice, that Peter, upon all occasions, appeals to the Scriptures in confirmation of the truth of the claims of Jesus Christ to the Messiahship. He was none other than "the Prophet of whom Moses had spoken," pointing out the awful consequences which would result from rejecting him. The closing verse sets forth this great principle, that man can be rendered happy only through being delivered from the love, guilt, and practice of iniquity. All Scripture unites with all experience, in testifying that "the way of transgressors is hard," while "Wisdom's ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

Chap. IV. 1-12. The chief priests, scribes, and Pharisees had looked for an end to all their troubles from the crucifixion of the Lord Jesus; but so far from this being the case, things were becoming hourly worse. If Jesus was gone, he had left behind him others to take his place, bringing against them, in addition to all their other sins, a direct charge of murder, and adding to the solemnity of the accusation the astounding fact, that the murdered man had been raised from the dead! They thus endeavoured to prevent the spread of the doctrine;

6 And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, "By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?"

8 ¶ Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

12 Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.

13 ¶ Now, when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

14 And, beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves, 16 Saying, What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.

17 But, that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all, nor teach, in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

20 For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

21 So, when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done.

22 For the man was above forty years old on whom this miracle of healing was shewed.

23 ¶ And, being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is;

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, "Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?"

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

27 For of a truth, against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, 28 For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word, 30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.

31 ¶ And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one but the result of this incipient persecution was only to confirm the faith, and to increase the number of believers. This step was a false one on the part of the Sadducees, for the great meeting of the high priest and his kindred, to which it led on the morrow, only tended to fan the flame, and to promote inquiry, with its accompanying conviction and conversion to the faith. Ver. 13-22. Each event supplied a fresh opportunity for Peter to preach the Gospel; and he was careful to avail himself of it to the utmost. Every discourse brought forth some new Scripture, which, while it confirmed their statements, was itself thereby illustrated. The authorities were never more perplexed than on the present occasion. Nothing so troubles wicked men as undeniable truth, when that truth is against them. Notwithstanding the extent to which they had carried contradiction and violence in former cases, the present miracle was of a character so conclusive that it could not, in decency, be denied. With what mortification and anguish they said, "We cannot deny it!" The infatuation of these men is most painfully illustrated by the audacity with which they enjoined the apostles henceforth, "not to speak at all, nor to teach, in the name of Jesus." The command was so irrational, that they might as well have enjoined them henceforth not to use or exercise their bodily senses. The apostolic reply was much fitted to confound and humble even hardened men. Ver. 23-30. Nothing could exceed the spirit of devotion which prevailed among the apostles and their converts. Prayer was the atmosphere they lived in. They consulted God in all their ways, and they wasted not for direction to their steps. They everywhere spake with a wisdom more than mortal, which their adversaries could neither gainsay nor resist. Ver. 31-37. With the apostles, to ask was to receive; the tokens of the Divine presence uniformly attended them. The present occasion was an event of great importance, and the answer to prayer corresponded with it; the very house shook! They were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and spake the word with boldness. Power, mere power, with whatever violence wielded, was no match for truth spoken by men under such an influence. Never was opposition more strikingly illustrative of the language of the apostle, "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

33 And ^bwith great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.

34 Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

35 And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

36 And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

CHAPTER V.

1 The death of Ananias and Sapphira. 17 The apostles imprisoned again, and delivered.

BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and ^alaid it at the apostles' feet.

3 But Peter said, Ananias, ^bwhy hath Satan filled thine heart to ¹lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? ^cwhy hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? ^dthou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And Ananias, hearing these words, fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, ^eHow is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold, ^fthe feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 Then ^gfell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 ¶ And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And ^hof the rest durst no man join himself to them: ⁱbut the people magnified them.

14 And ^jbelievers were the more added to the Lord, ^kmultitudes both of men and women.)

15 Insomuch that ^mthey brought forth the sick ⁿinto the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were ^ohealed every one.

17 ¶ Then ^pthe high priest rose up, and ^qall they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with ^rindignation, 18 And laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But the ^sangel of the Lord by night opened the prison-doors, and brought them forth, and said, 20 Go, ^tstand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life.

21 And when they heard that, ^uthey entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught. But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the ^vsenate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

Chap. V. 1-11. The sale of property in this case was entirely voluntary; but as the thing was popular, and as the necessities of the converts required such liberality, it had much the force of a law, and, accordingly, people were under a temptation, for the sake of standing well with their brethren, to fall in with the course of things, while their hearts were averse to it. Into this snare Ananias and Sapphira fell. It was to be supposed that, in this eventful hour, the Prince of Darkness would not be wanting in endeavours to turn everything to account that might tend to bring disgrace on the Gospel, and to obstruct the progress of the new kingdom by which his own would be ultimately overturned. Satan, from the outset, had his attention fixed on Jesus, his servants, and his movements, with a view to evil. The two most hopeful of the apostles were Peter and Judas—the one peculiarly liable to temptation through his rashness, and the other through his covetousness. The fall of Peter was a highly gratifying event to the Wicked One and to his servants, although their joy was of short duration; the deep repentance and the bitter weeping of the apostle, at once disappointed their expectation of his utter destruction—the gracious love of the Master had fully provided for that terrible hour. As to Judas, there was much to hope from the nature of the transaction; he loved money, and he might thus obtain it. He made a voluntary approach to the chief priests and the Pharisees, and for a reward betrayed his Master! Here, again, their triumph was great; but it was soon over, since the confession and suicide of Judas presented an overwhelming counterbalance to the effect of his own dreadful crime. Ver. 12-16. That amazing display of brotherly kindness and charity which led to the community of goods was a thing hateful to the Enemy of Souls, and something must, if possible, be done to throw discredit upon it. With this view, he assailed Ananias and Sapphira; but here again, as in the former instance, he was completely foiled, since the result redounded to 22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned, and told,

23 Saying, "The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but, when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now, when the high priest, and the captain of the temple, and the chief priests, heard these things, they doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 Then came one and told them, saying, "Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence: (for they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned:)

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them, 28 Saying, "Did not we straitly command you, that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us.

29 ¶ Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, "We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew, and hanged on a tree:

31 Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

32 And we are his witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 ¶ When they heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them.

34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

the honour and progress of the Gospel. The apostles, as they advanced, displayed an increase of miraculous power. Even Peter's shadow was attended with effects such as baffled the collective skill of all the physicians in the world. Nothing was so calculated to command attention, excite inquiry, and work conversion as these immense displays of Divine power and compassion, in healing the diseases of the people. Ver. 17-42. The last resource of bad men engaged in a bad cause is rage and violence; but every fresh step taken by the authorities only tended to deepen their humiliation. There is no contending with God. When the power of men no longer suffices, that of angels, who excel in strength, is called in, which never fails to accomplish its object. It is alike easy for Gabriel to open a gate or to slay an army. The apostles constantly rose with the occasion in decision and boldness, to the sad discomfiture of their enemies. Enjoying angelic co-operation, they might well set light by the wrath of men. Peter never lost an opportunity of charging the priests and Pharisees with the murder of Christ, and nothing could exceed the force of his appeal on the present occasion. There is no gainsaying men who could so speak, and whose speech 36 For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee, in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought:

39 But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.

40 And to him they agreed: and when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

41 ¶ And they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

42 And daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Deacons chosen. 9 Stephen falsely accused of blasphemy.

AND in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.

2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, "It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

3 Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

was alike fortified by reason and miracle. "A word fitly spoken, how good it is!" Impious and wicked as these men were, the sword of the Spirit, as wielded by the apostle, "cut them to the heart." How powerful the blow that could inflict a wound so deep on hearts of stone! It was, however, mere rage, without the slightest ingredient of repentance. Instead of saying, "What shall we do?" they "took counsel to slay them." The beating was without cause, the command without reason, and hence both were disregarded by the apostles, whose deportment on the occasion was admirable. The command to desist had only the effect of firing their zeal, and increasing their efforts to spread the truth: and the result, as their enemies testified, was to "fill Jerusalem with their doctrine."

Chap. VI. 1-8. "Disciples" was a name common to all professed believers. The Grecians were Jews, or Proselytes, residing in countries where the Greek language was spoken, and, as strangers, they thought their widows were neglected. To prevent extravagance and bad management, assistance was dealt forth day by day, and it was probable that the strangers might be over-

4 But we will ^bgive ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 ¶ And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch;

6 Whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.

7 And ¹the word of God increased; and ²the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly: and a great company of ³the priests were obedient to the faith.

8 ¶ And Stephen, ^mfull of faith and power, ⁿdid great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 ¶ Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and ^oCyrenians, and ^pAlexandrines, and of them of ^qCilicia and of ^rAsia, disputing with Stephen.

10 And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 Then ^sthey suborned men, which said, We have heard him speak ^tblasphemous words against Moses, and against God.

12 And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council.

13 And ^uset up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law:

14 For we have heard him say, ^vthat this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall ^wchange the ^xcustoms which Moses delivered us.

15 And all that sat in the council, looking stedfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Stephen answereth to his accusation. 54 They stone him to death.

THEN said the high priest, Are these things so?

2 And he said, ^aMen, brethren, and fathers, hearken; ^bThe God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, ^cwhen he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in ^dCharran,

3 And said unto him, ^eGet thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall shew thee.

4 Then ^fcame he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

5 And ^ghe gave him none inheritance in it, no, ^hnot so much as to set his foot on: ⁱyet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, ^kThat his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.

7 And ^lthe nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, ^mand serve me in this place.

8 And he gave him ⁿthe covenant of circumcision: ^oand so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and ^pIsaac begat Jacob; and ^qJacob begat the twelve patriarchs.

9 And the patriarchs, moved with envy, ^rsold Joseph into Egypt: ^sbut God was with him,

10 And ^tdelivered him out of all his afflictions, and ^ugave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt, and all his house.

11 Now there came a dearth over all looked. The apostles shewed the highest wisdom in the course they adopted, which served at once to save time which might be better employed, and to provide for a careful administration of the bounty of the Church. The expression, "We will give ourselves continually to prayer, and the ministry of the word," presents the most exalted idea of the importance of the ministerial work, and the necessity, in order to its proper discharge, of the most entire consecration. The proposed arrangements fully commended themselves to the people. The multitude clearly perceived that the plan would be attended with double benefit. Holy work requires holy hands; in the kingdom of God everything is holy; even the management of the funds for the poor demanded men of "honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and of wisdom." Men of doubtful character are very unfit to disburse charities, since they will be liable to suspicion, even when there is no ground for it. Wisdom also is necessary to meet all cases of difficulty connected with the management of the poor, while spirituality of mind ought to be exemplified in everything. Ver. 9-15. The term "Libertine" is derived from an interesting event: numbers of the Jews led captive into Italy were afterwards set at liberty; the children of these were, therefore, "libertine," in the proper sense of the term, as signifying the offspring of men once enslaved, but afterwards made free. The wisdom of Stephen, while it confounded their gainsaying, and mortified their pride, led them to plot his destruction. This was a great event in the early history of the Church, and the power of the Saviour was put forth in a measure corresponding with it. An influence of the most extraordinary character was exerted on the mind of Stephen, who was so soon to seal his testimony with his blood. As was his day so was his strength: all the council saw his face as it had been the face of an angel! The sight of glory revealed to him fired his soul, which irradiated his countenance.

Chap. VII. 1-36. It is not to be understood that the posterity of Jacob were ill treated four hundred years. That, however, was the full period of the sojourn, first in Canaan, and afterwards in Egypt. They were in the latter country about two hundred and fifteen years; and from the time of Isaac's birth to the time of the Exodus, the period extended to about four hundred and five years. When mention is made of four hundred and thirty years elsewhere, the reckoning begins, not with the birth of Isaac, but the period when Abraham first went down to Egypt, twenty-five years before the birth of Isaac; and this sum added to four hundred and five, makes up four hundred and thirty years. Ver. 37-55. The Church in the wilderness clearly meant the congregation, the assembly of Israel proper—men, women, and children. The laws of Moses are designated "lively the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 But ²when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 And at the second time ³Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, ⁴threescore and fifteen souls.

15 So ⁵Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers,

16 And were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of ⁶Emmor, the father of Sychem.

17 But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, ⁷the people grew and multiplied in Egypt,

18 Till ⁸another king arose, which knew not Joseph:

19 The same dealt subtilly with our kindred, and evil-entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.

20 In which time ⁹Moses was born, and was ¹⁰exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months:

21 And ¹¹when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him ¹²for her own son.

22 And Moses ¹³was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.

23 And ¹⁴when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart ¹⁵to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And ¹⁶seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian:

25 For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that ¹⁷God by his hand would deliver them; but they understood not.

26 And the next day he shewed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ¹⁸ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, ¹⁹Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou diddest the Egyptian yesterday?

29 Then ²⁰fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 And when forty years were expired, ²¹there appeared to him, in the wilderness of mount Sina, an angel of the Lord ²²in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight; and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, ²³I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 Then said the Lord to him, ²⁴Put off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

34 ²⁵I have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will send thee into Egypt.

35 This Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? ²⁶the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer, ²⁷by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush.

36 He brought them out, ²⁸after that he had shewed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, ²⁹and in the wilderness forty years.

37 ³⁰This is that Moses which said unto the children of Israel, ³¹A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren ³²like unto me; ³³him shall ye hear.

38 This is he that was ³⁴in the church in the wilderness ³⁵with the angel which spake to him in the mount Sina, and ³⁶with our fathers: ³⁷who received the lively oracles to give unto us;

39 To ³⁸whom our fathers would not obey, ³⁹but thrust him from them, ⁴⁰and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt, 40 Saying ⁴¹unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us: for ⁴²as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

41 And ⁴³they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 Then God turned, ⁴⁴and gave them up to worship the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices ⁴⁵by the space of forty years in the wilderness?

43 Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Remphan, figures which ye made to worship them: ⁴⁶and I will carry you away beyond Babylon.

44 Our fathers had ⁴⁷the tabernacle of oracles," because of their essential value. Not that they possessed power, without an evangelical element, to give life, forasmuch as the law, strictly considered, was simply "a ministration of death and condemnation." These oracles were properly designated "living," as proceeding, not from deaf and dumb idols, but from the living and true God. Ver. 56-60. This full recital of the great facts of the wonderful history of Israel was meetly closed by the sublime and awful intimation of the Martyr, when he cried out, "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God!" The spectacle of Stephen was grand beyond imagination, and such as ought to have moved, melted, and appalled his persecutors. Reason and truth, however, were alike thrown away upon them; and as usual, when thus overcome, they hastened to shed blood. The death of the Martyr was immediate; and his deportment was worthy of the Master he served witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, ³speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen:

45 ^aWhich also our fathers ⁴that came after brought in with Jesus into the possession of the Gentiles, ⁵whom God drove out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David;

46 Who ^afound favour before God, ^aand desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

47 But ^aSolomon built him an house.

48 Howbeit the most High ^adwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet, 49 ^aHeaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool: ^bwhat house will ye build me? saith the Lord: or what is the place of my rest?

50 Hath not my hand made all these things?

51 ^aYe stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always ^aresist the Holy Ghost: ^aas your fathers ^adid, so do ye.

52 ^aWhich of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them ^awhich shewed before of the coming of ^athe Just One; ^bof whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers:

53 Who ^ahave received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it.

54 ^aWhen they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with ^atheir teeth.

55 But he, being ^afull of the Holy Ghost, ^alooked up stedfastly into heaven, ^aand saw the glory of God, and Jesus ^astanding on the right hand of God, 56 And said, Behold, ^aI see the heavens opened, and ^athe Son of man standing on the right hand of God.

57 Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, 58 And cast ^ahim out of the city, and ^astoned ^ahim: and ^athe witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul.

59 And they stoned Stephen, ^acalling upon God, and saying, ^aLord Jesus, receive my spirit.

60 And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, ^aLord, lay not this sin to their charge. And, when he had said this, he fell asleep.

^aSigns and great miracles.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The church planted in Samaria, 14 is confirmed by Peter and John. 26 Philip sent to baptize an eunuch.

AND ^aSaul was consenting unto his death. And at that time ^bthere was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; ^cand they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, ^dexcept the apostles.

2 And ^adevout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him.

3 As for Saul, he made havock of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women, committed them to prison.

4 Therefore ^athey that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word.

5 ^aThen Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and ^apreached Christ unto them.

6 And the people ^bwith one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

7 For ^aunclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed ^awith them: and many taken with ^apalsies, and that were ^alame, were healed.

8 And there was great joy in that city.

9 ^aBut there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one:

10 To whom ^athey all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is ^athe great power of God.

11 And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.

12 But when ^athey believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

13 Then Simon himself ^abelieved also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the ^amiracles and signs which were done.

14 ^aNow, when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John:

15 Who, when they were come down, and the cause he had espoused. Like his Lord, he breathed out his soul in prayers for his murderers!

Chap. VIII. 1-25. Here, in the course of Providence, one of the most wonderful, useful, and honoured of men turns up—Saul of Tarsus. Though young in years, he was great in zeal, and terrible in destruction. To make "havoc" implies to devastate, to destroy, as the most ferocious of animals do the inoffensive and unresisting flocks. From the facts which have passed before us, it is clear that the Church chose both the best and the ablest men for the deaconship. Philip was a man not less distinguished than Stephen for wisdom, piety, and zeal. From the narrative, it appears that both Stephen and Philip were preachers as well as the apostles; indeed, it was the privilege and the duty of all, according to their gifts and graces, to teach and to testify on behalf of their Lord. Simon, without believing the truth, was dazzled by the miracles, clearly perceiving how far they outstripped his magical performances. He was, nevertheless, a master in his way, and succeeded to a lamentable extent in deceiving the people, and passing himself off as "the great power of God." His heart was now set on obtaining the virtue which lodged in the apostles, and ^aprayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost.

16 (For as yet ^ahe was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.)

17 Then laid they their hands on them, and ^athey received the Holy Ghost.

18 And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, 19 Saying, 'Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

20 But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because ^athou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

21 Thou ^ahast neither part nor lot in this matter: ^afor thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

22 ^aRepent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, ^aif perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee.

23 For I perceive that thou art in ^bthe gall of bitterness, and in ^cthe bond of iniquity.

24 Then answered Simon, and said, ^aPray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

25 And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

26 ¶ And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, ^aArise, and go toward the south, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert.

27 And he arose and went: and, behold, ^aa man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, ^aand had come to Jerusalem for to worship, 28 Was returning, and sitting in his chariot, read ^bEsaias the prophet.

29 Then ^athe Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, ^aUnderstandest thou what thou readeest?

31 And he said, 'How can I, except some man should guide me? ^aAnd he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, ^a'He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; ^aand like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so ^a'opened he not his mouth:

33 In ^a'his humiliation his judgment was taken away; ^a'and who shall declare his generation? ^a'for his life is taken from the earth.

34 And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

35 Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and ^a'preached unto him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?

37 And Philip said, ^a'If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, ^a'I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; ^a'and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, ^a'the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: ^a'and he went on his way rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found at ^a'Azotus: and passing through, he preached in all the cities, till he came to Caesarea.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Saul, going towards Damascus, is called to the apostleship. 23 The Jews lay wait for him. 36 Tobias raised.

AND Saul, yet ^a'breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest,

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any ^a'of this way, whether they were men

hence the offer of money. The thought was so impious as to rouse the indignation of Peter, who disclosed his true character in terms the most emphatic and appalling. Peter, however, did not deem even this man beyond the reach of mercy, and hence the command to repent and to pray for pardon. The conjunction of these two points is important to be noticed. Much controversy has arisen on the question, Should the guilty be urged to pray? The case, however, is simple; teachers and preachers have only to follow the apostolic example. Let all, even the most wicked, be urged at once to repent, to believe, and to pray. Ver. 26-40. The case here presented to us is one of peculiar interest. It is clear that this great officer of Queen Candace was a devout man, else he would not have come to Jerusalem to worship. He was very probably brought to a knowledge of the true faith by some of the Jews at Alexandria; at any rate, he was following hard after God, and he received a substantial token of the Divine approval. He had been renewed in the spirit of his mind by the Holy Ghost, who was now graciously providing means for his further enlightenment. It is delightful to see the Divine Spirit bidding Philip go south, and also guiding the eunuch to the very prophecy of Isaiah which, beyond all others, would reveal to him the Saviour. The portraiture of these two men sitting in the chariot is one of the deepest interest. It is clear that Philip, in explaining Isaiah, set forth, not simply the doctrines of the Gospel, but its ordinances, for on coming to the water, the eunuch, pointing to it, said, What hinders me to be baptized? With what cordiality the eunuch receives the Divine testimony concerning Christ, and with what promptness he follows the Lord fully, touching the ordinances by which he was to confess his faith! The case before us can hardly be designated the eunuch's conversion; but it was his enlargement, whereby he was introduced to the glorious liberty of the children of God. The work done, Philip was instantly removed to other scenes, for other ser-or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus; and suddenly there shined round about him ^aa light from heaven:

4 And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, 'Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

5 And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, 'I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest. It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

6 And he, trembling and astonished, said, 'Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

7 And 'the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

8 And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, ^ahe saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was 'three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

10 ¶ And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, 'Behold, I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called 'Saul of Tarsus: ^mfor, behold, he prayeth, 12 And ^ahath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

13 Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, ^ohow much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that ^bcall on thy name.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is ^aa chosen vessel unto me, ^tto bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel:

16 For 'I will shew him how great things he must suffer ^tfor my name's sake.

17 And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him, said, Brother Saul, ^uthe Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, ^tthat thou mightest receive thy sight, ^vand be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales; and he received sight forthwith, and arose, ^aand was baptized.

19 And when he had received meat, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus.

20 And ^astraightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, ^bthat he is the Son of God.

21 But all that heard him were amazed, and said, 'Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

22 But Saul increased the more in strength, and ^aconfounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, ^cproving that this is very Christ.

23 ¶ And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to kill him:

24 But their laying await was known of Saul: and they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

25 Then the disciples took him by night, and let him down by the wall in a basket.

26 ¶ And when Saul was come to Jerusalem, ^the assayed to join himself to the disciples: ^bbut they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple.

27 But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them ^ahow he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, ^tand how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

28 And he was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem.

29 And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians: but they went about to slay him.

30 Which ^awhen the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cesarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus.

vices; thus we are all led from step to step to fill up the measure of our appointed labour.

Chap. IX. 1-9. Nature is ever true to itself. Paul, whether in a wrong or in a right cause, was always in earnest. At the outset of his career, he was as intent on destroying the Church as in after life he was on building it up. That grace, however, which had singled him out from all the millions of his countrymen for glorious services, did not permit him to waste more than a small portion of his youth in the wicked work of persecution. He little thought, when he went to the high priest, that his career of cruelty was so nearly run. The Saviour's question shews the identity which obtains between himself and his people. The reply to Paul's question was such as to overwhelm him in a manner wholly inconceivable. He was at once subdued and crushed before the glory of the Lord. An attempt has been made by German expositors to account for Paul's blindness from natural causes; in their zeal for infidelity, they deliberately overlook the peculiarities of the case which demonstrate its miraculous character. Paul alone was struck blind; and on his eyes alone scales arose; and the blindness was immediately removed by the laying on of the hands of Ananias. Ver. 10-22. Paul's own case strikingly illustrates the election of grace. From the womb he had been set apart to the special work of the kingdom, and at the time appointed he was called, qualified, and immediately introduced into the vineyard. Ver. 23-35. Paul's conversion was an era in 32 ¶ And it came to pass, as Peter passed throughout all quarters, he came down also to ^othe saints which dwelt at Lydda.

33 And there he found a certain man named Eneas, which had kept his bed eight years, ^oand was sick of the palsy.

34 And Peter said unto him, Eneas, ^oJesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately.

35 And all that dwelt in Lydda and Saron saw him, and turned to the Lord.

36 ¶ Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which, by interpretation, is called ^oDorcas: this woman was ^ofull of good works and alms-deeds which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that ^oshe was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in an upper chamber.

38 And forasmuch as ^oLydda was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not ^odelay to come to them.

39 Then Peter arose, and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him weeping, and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them.

40 But Peter put them all forth, ^oand kneeled down, ^oand prayed; and, turning him to the body, said, Tabitha, arise. And ^oshe opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up.

41 And ^ohe gave her his hand, and lifted her up; and when he had called the saints and widows, ^ohe presented her alive.

42 And it was known throughout all Joppa; ^oand many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa with ^oone Simon a tanner.

THERE was a certain man in Cesarea called Cornelius, ^oa centurion of the band called the ^oItalian band,

2 ^oA devout man, and ^oone that feared God with all his house, ^owhich gave much alms to the people, ^oand prayed to God always.

3 He saw in a vision evidently, about the ninth hour of the day, ^oan angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, ^oWhat is it, Lord? And he said unto him, ^oThy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.

5 And now send men to Joppa, and call for ^oone Simon, ^owhose surname is Peter:

6 He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea-side: ^ohe shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, ^oand a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, ^ohe sent them to Joppa.

9 ¶ On the morrow, as they went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, ^oPeter went up upon the house-top to pray about the sixth hour.

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but, while they made ready, he fell into a trance,

11 And ^osaw heaven opened, ^oand a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth;

12 Wherein ^owere all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him, ^oRise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, ^oNot so, Lord; ^ofor I have never eaten any thing that is common or unclean.

15 And the voice spake unto him again the second time, ^oWhat God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

16 This was done thrice: and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 Now, while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men which were sent from Cornelius had made enquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate, 18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 ¶ While Peter thought on the vision, ^othe Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing; ^ofor I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius, and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: ^owhat is the cause wherefore ye are come?

the history of the apostolic age; the result was rest to the churches, who walked in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, and were multiplied. Ver. 36-43. Wherever miracles were performed, the Gospel received a fresh impulse; nothing so much conduced to promote inquiry, and to confirm the faith of believers. The cure of Eneas was rendered instrumental in the conversion of a multitude. The resurrection of Dorcas was attended with similar results. Thus the Gospel had free course, and was everywhere glorified.

Chap. X. 1-18. Cornelius, while true to the light he possessed, daily prayed for more. No proselyte ever presented a lovelier picture of true piety, and towards none was greater favour shewn from Heaven. In addition to answering the prayers of Cornelius, the case was intended to enlighten the mind of the apostle, and to prepare him for the calling of the Gentiles. Nothing could more tend to impress him with the truth than such a vision. Ver. 19-48. Peter was suddenly surrounded with circumstances which explained to him, 22 And they said, "Cornelius the centurion, ^aa just man, and one that feareth God, and ^bof good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by an holy angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And ^athe morrow after they entered into Cesarea. And Cornelius waited for them, ^aand had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, ^aand fell down at his feet, and worshipped him.

26 But Peter took him up, saying, "Stand up; I myself also am a man.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; ^abut God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: ^aI ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago ^aI was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, ^aand, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing, 31 And said, Cornelius, ^athy prayer is heard, and thine alms ^aare had in remembrance in the sight of God.

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of ^aone Simon a tanner by the sea-side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

33 Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore ^aare we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.

34 ¶ Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, ^aOf a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons:

35 But in every nation he that ^afeareth

36 The ^aword which God sent unto the children of Israel, ^apreaching peace by Jesus Christ; (he is Lord of all;)

37 That word, I say, ye know, ^awhich was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached;

38 How ^aGod anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost, and with power; ^awho went about doing good, and ^ahealing all that were oppressed of the devil: ^afor God was with him.

39 And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; ^awhom they slew, and hanged on a tree:

40 ^aHim God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly;

41 Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, ^aeven to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

42 And ^ahe commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify ^athat it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead.

43 To ^ahim give all the prophets witness, that, through his name, ^awhosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.

44 ¶ While Peter yet spake these words, ^athe Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

45 And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

46 For they heard them ^aspeak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, 47 Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

48 And he ^acommanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

CHAPTER XL

beyond the possibility of doubt, the will of the Lord. On reaching the house of Cornelius, as was his custom, he preached the facts of the Gospel, and had no sooner reached the climax, touching the application of the atoning sacrifice of Christ to the souls of men for the forgiveness of sins, than the broad seal of the Holy Ghost was set upon it. Things, in the course of Providence, were so ordered that there was present a large body of witnesses of the Circumcision to testify to what had occurred; the importance of this circumstance will subsequently appear. The household of Cornelius spake with tongues, and magnified God, as the believers had done on the day of Pentecost, clearly shewing that all distinction between Jew and Gentile had now passed away. Peter, having discovered the mind of his Master, was faithful to the new light, notwithstanding the opposition which he knew would be made to his course at Jerusalem. An example is here set to all believers.

Men will be judged, not according to what they have not, but according to what they have. They who walk according to conscience, following the Lord fully, will never greatly err.

Chap. XI. 1-18. Notwithstanding the knowledge, gifts, and graces which we have seen distinguishing the Church at Jerusalem, the notion of their own monopoly of the Divine favour appears to have been cherished as strongly as before the crucifixion and the Divine baptism at Pentecost. Remembering the Saviour's commission, previous to his ascension, to "go into all the world, and to preach the Gospel to every creature," it is surprising that this idea should have cleaved to the mind of the apostles and the disciples. The commission, understood according to its obvious, literal import, would not only have prevented the contention with Peter for having preached to a Gentile family, but have led to the use tiles had also received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him,

3 Saying, "Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.

4 But Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it by order unto them, saying,

5 I was in the city of Joppa praying: and in a trance I saw a vision, A certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners: and it came even to me:

6 Upon the which when I had fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

7 And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise, Peter; slay, and eat.

8 But I said, Not so, Lord: for nothing common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth.

9 But the voice answered me again from heaven, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

10 And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven.

11 And, behold, immediately there were three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Cesarea unto me.

12 And the Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover, these six brethren accompanied me, and we entered into the man's house:

13 And he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter;

14 Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

15 And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning.

16 Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, what was I, that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

19 ¶ Now they which were scattered abroad, upon the persecution that arose about Stephen, travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.

20 And some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord.

22 ¶ Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem; and they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch:

23 Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus, for to seek Saul:

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled themselves with the church, and taught much people. And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.

27 ¶ And in these days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

28 And there stood up one of them, named Agabus, and signified by the Spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cesar.

29 Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea:

30 Which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

of means to diffuse the Gospel through all their borders. Peter adopted the best method of cutting short controversy, by simply stating the facts, and appealing to the witnesses who accompanied him. Having done this, he puts a question, which admitted of only one answer, "What was I, that I could withstand God?" The result was not only silence, but glory to the Father of spirits. Ver. 19-30. The opening verse here shews the perfect unanimity which had obtained amongst the Jews on the subject of keeping the Gospel to themselves, by a rigid and systematic exclusion of the Gentiles. Barnabas rejoiced, as became a man who knew the truth and loved the Lord, when he saw the grace of God. The feelings with which men look upon converts and great spiritual movements, serve as a test of their spirit and their character. To ungodly men, such things are offensive; to formal professors and hypocrites, they are deeply disgusting; but to the true children of God, in a state of prosperous piety, they are the loveliest spectacles that earth can furnish.

Chap. XII. 1-25. The Herod who makes such a figure in this chapter was not Herod the Great, that slew the infants, nor Herod Antipapas, who beheaded John the Baptist, but Herod Agrippa. The James whom he slew was the son of Zebedee, the brother of John, "the beloved disciple." On this occasion unusual precautions were taken to prevent the rescue of the prisoner, by setting over him no fewer than sixteen soldiers, who might keep watch by turns, while two of them were chained to the apostle. The former escapes of the apostles from prison doubtless led to this endeavour at increased security. The term here translated "Easter" simply means pass-over. No mention is made of the observance of Easter at this period, and if there had, it is highly improbable that Herod should have regarded it. The historian

2 And he killed ^bJames, the brother of John, with the sword.

3 And because he saw it pleased the Jews, ^che proceeded further to take Peter also. (Then were the days of unleavened bread.)

4 And when he had apprehended him, ^dhe put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; ^eintending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison; but ^fprayer was ^gmade without ceasing of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth, ^hthe same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, ⁱbound with two chains: ^jand the keepers before the door kept the prison.

7 And, behold, ^kthe angel of the Lord came upon him, ^land a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, ^mArise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, ⁿthat the Lord hath sent his angel, ^oand hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and ^pfrom all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And when he had considered ^qthe thing, he came to the house of Mary the mother of John, whose surname was Mark; ^pwhere many were gathered together praying.

13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to ^qhearken, named Rhoda.

14 And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate.

15 And they said unto her, ^rThou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, ^sIt is his angel.

16 But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished.

17 But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, ^tdeclared unto them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, Go shew these things unto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and went into another place.

18 Now, as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

19 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and ^ucommanded that ^vthey should be put to death. And he went down from Judea to Cesarea, and ^wthere abode.

20 ¶ And Herod ^xwas highly displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon: ^ybut they came with one accord to him, and, having made Blastus ^zthe king's chamberlain their friend, desired peace; because their country was nourished by the king's country.

21 And upon a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them.

22 And the people gave a shout, ^{aa}saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

23 And immediately ^{ab}the angel of the Lord smote him, ^{ac}because he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost.

speaks exclusively of the Jewish festival, the Passover. The case of Peter's rescue is one of the many things which the German School of Theology has endeavoured to explain away. A critic of some distinction in that country tells his readers that the light mentioned was simply lightning, which melted Peter's chains, and caused the doors to open! He who can thus write pays but a poor compliment to the reason of his readers, and presents but slender proofs of his own claims to rationality. But where miracle is to be set aside—where reason is to be elevated, and Inspiration depressed—there are no straws at which men will not catch, no absurdities they will not commit! We here obtain a glimpse at the spirit of piety which prevailed in the infant Church. Everything, small or great, they brought to the Lord. The present, however, was a case of most extraordinary urgency. The most distinguished of the Apostles of the Circumcision was doomed, which might well excite universal consternation. Under these circumstances, the claims of nature were overlooked, and the night melted into day. No time was to be lost, and one Power alone could bring deliverance; they, therefore, gave themselves to prayer. Of the nature of their supplications there can be little doubt. It may be a question whether their faith had attained to such an elevation as to lead them to pray for Peter's absolute deliverance. They could, nevertheless, implore for him the supports and consolations needful in his trying condition, and preparation for the will of God, whatever that might be. They might also pray for the oppressor, that the Lord would turn his heart, and stay his murderous hand. They could also pray for themselves, and that the Lord would overrule every event for the good of the Church and the furtherance of his own glory. The Lord, in mercy, soon revealed to them his pleasure, and relieved them from their agony. But they could scarcely believe that he had heard them in a manner so wonderful. At length, however, their unbelief was rebuked by the appearance of the apostle in their midst! Herod, on the occasion, acted a part worthy of his name and his line—putting to death the unoffending guards, who had only yielded to the Power that made the world. His own time, however, was at hand. A little while only, and, eaten of worms, he gave up the ghost! The inspired historians nowhere make the most of any event. The account of Herod's oration, pride, and cruelty, is set forth by the great historian, Josephus, in all its particulars, in a manner the most deeply affecting. From 24 ¶ But ^athe word of God grew and multiplied.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Paul and Barnabas go to the Gentiles. 42 The Gentiles believe. 45 The Jews blaspheme.

NOW there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and ^aLucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, ^bwhich had been brought up with ^bHerod the tetrarch, ^cand Saul.

2 As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, ^dthe Holy Ghost said, ^eSeparate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

3 And when ^fthey had fasted and prayed, and laid ^gtheir hands on them, they sent ^hthem away.

4 ¶ So they, ⁱbeing sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to ^jCyprus.

5 And when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also John to ^ktheir minister.

6 And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos, they found a certain sorcerer, ^la false prophet, a Jew, ^mwhose name was Bar-jesus:

7 Which was with the deputy of the country, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But Elymas the sorcerer (for so is his name by interpretation) withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

9 Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,) ⁿfilled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him,

10 And said, O full of all subtilty and all mischief, ^othou child of the devil, ^pthou enemy of all righteousness, ^qwilt thou not cease to pervert ^rthe right ways of the Lord?

11 And now, behold, ^sthe hand of the Lord is upon thee, and ^tthou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season.

13 Now when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia: and John, departing from them, returned to Jerusalem.

14 ¶ But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, and ^dwent into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and sat down.

15 And after the reading of the law and the prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, ^eYe men and brethren, ^fif ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and beckoning with ^ghis hand, said, Men of Israel, ^hand ye that fear God, give audience.

him we learn, that the moment the angel struck him, he cried out to the adoring multitude, "I, whom you call a god, am about to die!" He was carried immediately to his palace, and in the space of five days, and in the fifty-fourth year of his age, he breathed his last! Thus are the wicked carried away in their wickedness!

Chap. XIII. 1-13. Much importance attaches to the example here set by the apostles, in laying hands on prophets and teachers, set apart for special work, with fasting and prayer. The act was performed under the special guidance of the Holy Spirit, and, therefore, founded on reasons not transitory, but permanent. It was public, and, therefore, an expression of confidence on the part of the apostles, the elders, and the Church. It was, further, a solemn consecration of the parties concerned to their appointed mission, much calculated to strengthen their hearts. It was also connected with special supplication for their preservation, guidance, and success. The command of the Holy Spirit to separate them for the service specified, does not appear to have been connected with any fresh gift or grace. This is one of those passages, therefore, which go to support the setting apart of pastors and missionaries by imposition of hands. In doing so, it is not professed that any special gift is conferred, but that the party is dedicated to the service of the Lord. Men who are sent forth by the Holy Ghost will never return without the accomplishment of the object on which they are intent. The Power that appoints will prosper, and the result will be the salvation of men and the glory of God. The case of Elymas is very remarkable, both as a judgment and as an illustration of the power which attended the apostles. A visitation so instantaneous and terrible was a blow that resounded throughout the entire community, everywhere fixing attention, preparing for instruction, and confirming the faith of such as had believed. Ver. 14-43. We have here a striking example of Paul's mode of 25 And as John fulfilled his course, he said, 'Whom think ye that I am? I am not he: but, behold, there cometh one after me, whose shoes of his feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, ^aand whosoever among you feareth God, ^bto you is the word of this salvation sent.

27 For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets ^cwhich are read every sabbath-day, ^dthey have fulfilled them in condemning him.

28 And ^ethough they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.

29 And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, ^fthey took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.

30 But ^gGod raised him from the dead:

31 And he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people.

32 And we declare unto you glad tidings, ^hhow that the promise which was made unto the fathers, 33 God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children; in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, ⁱThou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

34 And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, ^j*now* no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure ^kmercies of David.

35 Wherefore he saith also in another psalm, Thou shalt not suffer thine Holy One ^lto see corruption.

36 For David, after he had ^mserved his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But ⁿhe, whom God raised again, saw no corruption.

38 ¶ Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, ^othat through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:

39 And ^pby him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

40 Beware therefore, lest that come upon you which is spoken of in the prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish: ^qfor I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 ¶ And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them ^rthe next sabbath.

43 Now, when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in ^sthe grace of God.

44 ¶ And the next sabbath-day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, ^tIt was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we ^uturn to the Gentiles:

47 For ^vso hath the Lord commanded us, saying, ^wI have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, ^xthat thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

51 But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium.

52 And the disciples were filled with joy, and ^ywith the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Paul and Barnabas are persecuted. 8 Paul, healing a cripple, they are reputed as gods. 19 Paul is stoned. 21 They pass through divers churches, and return to Antioch.

AND it came to pass ^ain Iconium, that they ^bwent both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, ^cthat a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed.

2 But ^dthe unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren.

3 Long time therefore abode they dealing with his countrymen; as in the case of Stephen it consisted mainly of an appeal to the Word of God, touching the person, character, death, and resurrection of the Lord Jesus. This is the most forcible method of addressing the Jews at the present day; and when the approaching period of their conversion shall arrive, the discourses of Paul, Peter, and Stephen will produce their due effect on the children of Israel all over the world. Ver. 44-52. The Jews were everywhere moved by malice and hatred against the apostles, in proportion to the success which accompanied their work. Paul and Barnabas are very explicit as to their commission to go to the Gentiles. The truth had made a lodgment in the hearts of many. The conversions, moreover, were of a most decided character, inasmuch as the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost.

Chap. XIV. 1-18. Stoning was the punishment appointed for blasphemers against the law. Stephen, as accused of this crime, was stoned, and so was Paul; and in like manner it was attempted to stone the Lord Jesus for alleged blasphemy. The Heathen entertained *speaking boldly in the Lord, 'which gave testimony unto 'the word of his grace, 'and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But 'the multitude of the city was divided: and part held with the Jews, and part with the apostles.

5 And 'when there was an assault made both of the Gentiles, and also of the Jews, with their rulers, to use them 'despitefully, and to stone them,

6 They were ware of it, and fled unto ^mLystra and Derbe, cities of ⁿLycaonia, and unto the region that lieth round about:

7 And 'there they preached the gospel.

8 ¶ And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, 'being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked:

9 The same heard Paul speak; who stedfastly beholding him, and perceiving that 'he had faith to be healed,

10 Said with a loud voice, 'Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked.

11 And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, 'The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men.

12 And they called Barnabas, 'Jupiter; and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker.

13 Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people.

14 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of, they rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, crying out,

15 And saying, Sirs, why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions with you, 'and preach unto you, that ye should turn 'from these vanities unto the living God, 'which made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein:

16 Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways.

17 Nevertheless 'he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, 'and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, 'filling our hearts with food and gladness.

18 And with these sayings scarce restrained they the people, that they had not done sacrifice unto them.

19 ¶ And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people; and, having stoned Paul, 'drew him out of the city, 'supposing he had been dead.

20 Howbeit, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

21 And when they had preached the gospel to that city, and had 'taught many, they returned again to Lystra, and to Iconium, and Antioch, 22 Confirming the souls of the disciples, and 'exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that 'we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

23 And when 'they had ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, 'they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.

24 And after they had passed throughout Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia.

25 And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia;

26 And thence sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been 'recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled.

27 And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, 'they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had 'opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

28 And there they abode long time with the disciples.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Dissension about circumcision. 6 The apostles conult about it, 22 and send their determination to the churches. 36 Paul and Barnabas contend, and part.

AND certain men, which came down from Judea, taught the brethren the belief, that all their gods had a human form, in which they appeared, as circumstances required it, to their worshippers and favourites. Jupiter was considered the father of them all, and, accordingly, the greatest and wisest; while Mercury was the god of Eloquence. These views led to the conclusion here formed. The conduct of the poor idolaters was natural; but it intensely shocked Paul and Barnabas, who conducted themselves with great decision and promptitude on the occasion. Ver. 19-28. The devotees of the morning became the destroyers of the afternoon. The Jews from Antioch succeeded, in a brief space, to turn the current of popular admiration into popular hatred, in spite of the miracle which had been performed. These persecutors, without anything to support their assertions or insinuations, succeeded to madden the people to such an extent that they stoned Paul, as was supposed, to death. He was no longer to them Mercury, but a miscreant, to be visited with summary vengeance! Such is man. The apostle's rising up, under such circumstances, was doubtless the result of Divine power. The rest of their journey was attended with the happiest consequences. The rehearsal of the events of their memorable tour shews how things were conducted in that early day, and the interest taken by the churches in the spread of the Gospel. In proportion as men have learned to value their own souls, they will pity those still without hope and without God in the world, and be forward to employ the appointed means for their salvation.

Chap. XV. 1-35. When it is remembered with what tenacity even the apostles continued to cleave to the Mosaic system, it is not strange that the people were wedded to it. It seems probable that the men who here enforce circumcision were sincere, although misguided, and that they themselves were favourably disposed to the Gospel, if not also believers of it. From the impression produced, they must have manifested both earnestness and ability in making out their case, which succeeded to shake the public confidence to such an extent as to lead to no "small dissension and d sputation" with even Paul and Barnabas themselves. Nor is that all: Paul and Barnabas did not even succeed to efface the impression; and hence it became necessary to appeal to the apostles and said, "Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.

2 When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem unto the apostles and elders about this question.

3 And being brought on their way by the church, they passed through Phenice and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles: and they caused great joy unto all the brethren.

4 And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and of the apostles and elders, and they declared "all things that God had done with them.

5 ¶ But there rose up certain of "the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, "That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses.

6 And "the apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter.

7 And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago "God made choice among us, that the Gentiles "by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, "which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, "giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us;

9 And "put no difference between us and them, "purifying their hearts by faith.

10 Now therefore "why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, "which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But we believe "that, through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, we shall be saved, even as they.

12 ¶ Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, "declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

13 ¶ And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me:

14 Simeon hath "declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, "to take out of them a people for his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written,

16 After this I will return, and will "build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

17 That "the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

18 "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God:

20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain "from pollutions of idols, and from "fornication, and from "things strangled, and from blood.

21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath-day.

22 ¶ Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, "to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas; namely, Judas surnamed Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren:

23 And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles, and elders, and brethren, send greeting unto "the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch, and Syria, and Cilicia:

24 Forasmuch as we have heard "that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law; to whom we gave no such commandment:

25 It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, "to send chosen men unto you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul; and elders at Jerusalem. From ver. 5, it would seem that even in Jerusalem there was far from unanimity on the subject of abandoning circumcision, and the observance of the Mosaic ritual. It thus appears that no pains had been taken up to this time to enlighten the Church, or even the elders; hitherto, indeed, the matter had not come up; but an occasion now arose, which led to the final settlement of the question. It is instructive to observe the manner in which this meeting conducted its business; not only did Paul and Barnabas keep silence till all had spoken; even the apostles themselves did so, until the elders and leading members of the Church, not apostles, had discussed the subject at great length, and, there seems reason to presume, to little purpose. Wise men, in public conferences, will rarely be the first to speak; but patiently wait till they see the turn things take, and whether it be necessary for them to speak at all. It was not until after there was much dispute that Peter rose to deliver his opinion; to him succeeded Barnabas and Paul, who stated the facts of the case from first to last, especially shewing that the Lord had set the seal of his approbation by miracles and wonders wrought among the Gentiles. James, having heard the missionaries, summed up in a very decisive manner, considering the subject in its various aspects, and reaching a conclusion which carried conviction to the hearts of all. Thus Barnabas and Paul completely triumphed, and the announcement of the fact to the Church at Antioch gave the utmost satisfaction; the converts rejoiced for the consolation, finding they were not to be laden with systems, which, according to Peter himself, neither they nor their fathers were able to bear. Ver. 36-41. The best of men, and the most intimate of friends, have always need of guarding against misunderstandings, which may, at any moment, originate in things so small as apparently to involve no danger. In the present case, the difference was one of judgment: on the part of Paul, principle appears to have operated; and on that of Barnabas, affection. Barnabas, as a near relative of Mark, was led to overlook his former misconduct, while Paul, regarding only the interests of the Gospel, deeming Mark unsuited to the enterprise, determined he should not be united to it. Either might, perhaps, have given in to the other without greatly wounding conscience; but they resolutely held each to his own view, and the result was separation. It is 26 Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent therefore Judas and Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by ¹mouth.

28 For ^ait seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no ^bgreater burden than these necessary things;

29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which ^cif ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch; and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle:

31 Which when they had read, ^dthey rejoiced for the ^econsolation.

32 And Judas and Silas, ^fbeing prophets also themselves, exhorted the brethren with many words, and ^gconfirmed them.

33 And after they had tarried ^hthere a space, they were let go in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

34 Notwithstanding, it pleased Silas to abide there still.

35 Paul also and Barnabas continued in Antioch, ⁱteaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

36 ¶ And some days after, Paul said unto Barnabas, Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, ^jand see how they do.

37 And Barnabas determined to take with them John, whose surname was Mark.

38 But Paul thought not good to take him with them, who departed from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work.

39 And ^kthe contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other: and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto Cyprus;

40 And Paul chose Silas, and departed, ^lbeing recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God.

41 And he went through Syria and Cilicia, ^mconfirming the churches.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Paul circumcise^d Timothy; 14 converteth Lydia: 16 casteth out a spirit of divination; 19 is imprisoned with Silas, 25 and released.

THEN came he ^ato Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, ^bnamed Timotheus, the son of a certain woman, ^cwhich was a Jewess, and believed; ^dbut his father was a Greek:

2 Which was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium.

3 Him ^ewould Paul have to go forth with him; ^fand took and circumcised him, because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.

4 And as they went through the cities, ^gthey delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.

5 And ^hso were the churches established in the faith, and ⁱincreased in number daily.

6 Now, when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and were ^jforbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia,

7 After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.

8 And they, passing by Mysia, came down to Troas.

9 ¶ And ^ka vision appeared to Paul in the night: There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, ^l"Come over into Macedonia, and help us."

10 And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

11 Therefore, loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis;

12 And from thence to ^mPhilippi, which is ⁿthe chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony: and we were in that city abiding certain days.

13 And ^oon the ^psabbath we went out of the city by a river-side, ^qwhere prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted ^rthither.

instructive to observe how the infirmities and the pride of men are overruled for good. The result of the present misunderstanding was greatly to enlarge the sphere of evangelical operation; so, too, differences occurring among Christian men, and not seldom in Christian churches—notwithstanding the painful animosities which have sprung from them—have yet issued in the advancement of the cause alike dear to the hearts of both parties.

Chap. XVI. 1-13. From this we gather that the progress of the apostles was everywhere regulated by the immediate guidance of the Holy Spirit, who forbade Paul to preach the Word in Asia at this period. Their labours were wanted to sow the seed of the kingdom in Europe—a compartment of the globe where it was destined to produce great results. The Romans divided all the countries which heathen writers have included under the general head of Greece, into two provinces—Macedonia and Achaia; under the former, they included

Macedonia Proper, Thessaly, and Epirus; and under the latter, Greece, properly so called, and Peloponnesus. We learn, from ancient writers, that it was customary for the Jews to have places for worship out of doors by river sides, and in other retired situations where water could be had for the convenience of purification. Ver. 14-24. It is doubtful whether Lydia was a Jewess or a Gentile; but if the latter, she was clearly a proselyte. From the words of the chapter, we gather that these exercises of prayer were interspersed with doctrinal statement and words of exhortation; it was by means of these that Lydia was enlightened to receive the Gospel in all its fulness of grace and truth. It would seem, moreover, that the ordinance of baptism was set forth as binding on believers. The faith of Lydia produced its proper effects, in love to the Lord and to his people. Neological writers have endeavoured to reduce the statement touching the damsel to very small dimensions; the "spirit of divination," according to them, was merely 14 ¶ And a certain woman named ^aLydia, a seller of purple, of the city of ^bThyatira, ^cwhich worshipped God, heard ^dus: ^ewhose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.

15 And ^fwhen she was baptized, and her household, she besought ^gus, saying, ^hIf ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide ⁱthere. And she constrained us.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, ^jas we went to prayer, a certain damsel possessed with a spirit of ^kdivination met us, which brought her masters much gain by sooth-saying:

17 The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, ^lThese men are the servants of the most high God, which shew unto us ^mthe way of salvation.

18 And this did she many days. But Paul, being grieved, turned, and said to the spirit, ⁿI command thee, in the name of Jesus Christ, to come out of her. And he came out the same hour.

19 ¶ And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the ^omarket place unto the rulers,

20 And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city, 21 And teach ^pcustoms, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans.

22 And the multitude rose up together against them; and ^qthe magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them.

23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them, ^rthey cast them into prison, charging the jailer to keep them safely:

24 Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, ^sand made their feet fast in the stocks.

25 ¶ And at ^tmidnight Paul and Silas prayed, and ^usang praises unto God: ^vand the prisoners heard them.

26 And ^wsuddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, ^xand every one's bands were loosed.

27 And ^ythe keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison-doors open, he drew out his sword, ventriloquism. None are so blind as those who resolutely close their eyes. We are distinctly told that Paul ordered the spirit, in the name of Jesus Christ, to come out of her, and that he instantly obeyed. This is an average illustration of the pitiful attempts with which such writers endeavour to set aside everything supernatural, and to account for all that is miraculous by natural causes. Ver. 25-40. The case of the jailer supplies a very striking illustration of conversion; we have here faith, experience, and practice, all in harmony. Paul, in dealing with the magistrates, combines meekness with manhood, not forgetting what is due to himself as a man, as a Roman citizen, and as an apostle. This determined and dignified deportment, doubtless, produced the best effects on the public.

31 And they said, ^{ai}Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, ^{aj}and thy house.

32 And ^{ak}they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed ^{al}their stripes; ^{am}and was baptized, he and all his, straight-way.

34 And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

35 ¶ And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants, saying, Let those men go.

36 And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.

37 But Paul said unto them, ^{an}They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast ^{ao}us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out.

38 And the serjeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.

39 And they came and besought them, and brought ^{ap}them out, ^{aq}and desired them to depart out of the city.

40 And they went out of the prison, and entered into the ^{ar}house of Lydia: and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Paul preacheth at Thessalonica, 10 Berea, 16 and at Athens. 84 Some are converted.

NOW, when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, ^{as}where was a synagogue of the Jews:

2 And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath-days

Macedonia; and there the Gospel took deep root at an early period, creating a considerable church, to which Paul addressed two of his earliest epistles. It is to be noticed that, wherever the Gospel came with power, it awakened opposition, which, however, only tended to further the work of the Lord. A high compliment is paid to the apostles by reproaching them as men who had "turned the world upside down." The example of the Bereans will redound to their honour while time shall last. It is above all things to be desired that people would everywhere test religious systems by an appeal to the Word of God, since nothing would so much contribute to establish truth and to uproot error. The neglect of Scripture is the source of all heresy. Ver. 16-34. The Athenians, notwithstanding their fame for literature and philosophy, were intensely devoted to idolatry.

^breasoned with them out of the scriptures;

3 Opening and alleging that ^cChrist must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that ^dthis Jesus, ^ewhom I preach unto you, is Christ.

4 And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of ^ethe devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.

5 ¶ But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of ^fJason, and sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, ^hthey drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, 'These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;

7 Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cesar, saying that there is another king, ⁱone Jesus.

8 And they troubled the people, and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.

9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.

10 ¶ And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto ^kBerea: who, coming ^lthither, went into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 These were ^mmore noble than those in Thessalonica, in that ⁿthey received the word with all readiness of mind, ^oand searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.

12 Therefore many of them believed; also of ^phonourable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.

13 ¶ But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the people.

14 And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul, to go as it were to the sea: ^qbut Silas and Timotheus abode there still.

15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto ^rAthens: and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ¶ Now, while Paul waited for them at Athens, ^shis spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city ^twholly given to idolatry.

17 Therefore disputed he in ^uthe synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market ^vdaily with them that met with him.

18 Then certain philosophers of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks, encountered him. And some said, What will this ^hbabbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection.

19 And they took him, and brought him unto ⁱAreopagus, saying, ^jMay we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?

20 For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore ^kwhat these things mean.

21 (For all the Athenians, and strangers which were there, spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing.)

22 ¶ Then Paul stood in the midst of ^lMars-hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

23 For as I passed by, and beheld your ^mdevotions, I found an altar with this inscription, ⁿTO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

24 God, ^othat made the world, and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, ^pdwelleth not in temples made with hands;

25 Neither ^qis worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, ^rseeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26 And ^shath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation;

27 That ^tthey should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though ^uhe be not far from every one of us:

28 For ^vin him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring.

29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, ^wwe ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, ^xgraven by art and man's device.

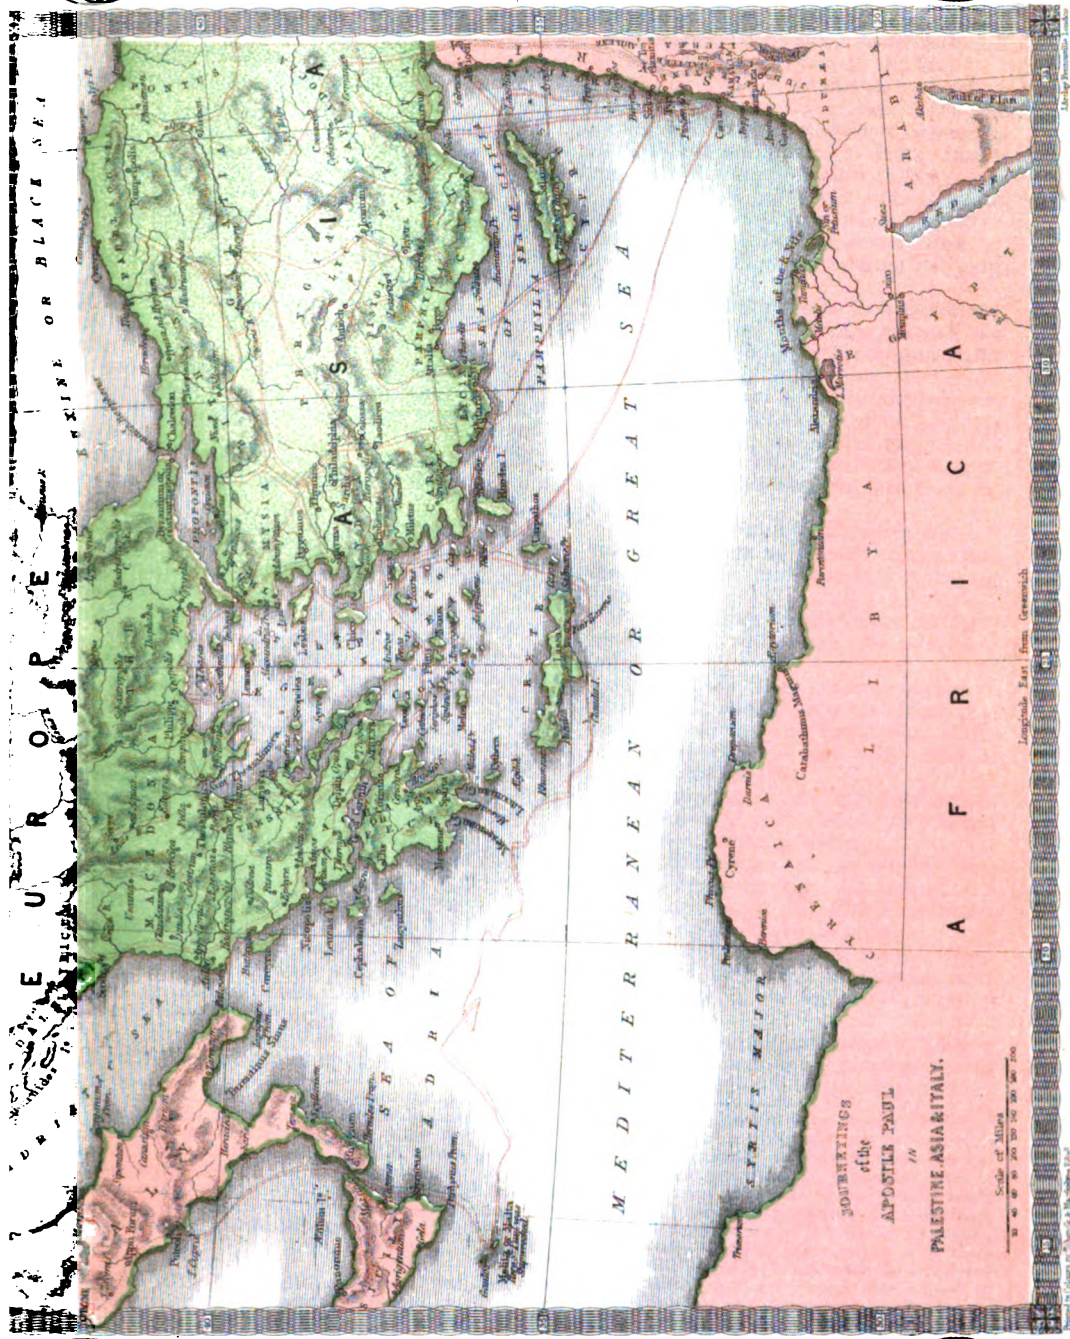

30 And the times of this ignorance God winked at; ^ybut now commandeth all men every where to repent:

31 Because ^zhe hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by ^athat man whom he hath ordained; ^bwhereof he hath ^cgiven assurance unto all men, ^din that he hath raised him from the dead.

32 And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and

There was no city where such a multitude of idols met the eye in public places. Such was the excess, that a writer of their own said, "It was more easy to find a god than a man." The case of the Athenians strikingly illustrates the language of the apostle. With all their wisdom, "they knew not God." No portion of the human family have ever been discovered in a state of more perfect darkness. Even the embers of tradition appear to have become utterly extinct in Athens. In no place were the labours of Paul so unsuccessful, although nowhere did he more abound in labour; he disputed in the synagogue with the Jews, and in the market-place others said, We will hear thee again of this matter.

33 So Paul departed from among them.

34 Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Paul laboureth with his hands; and, preaching at Corinth, 9 is encouraged in a vision. 12 He is accused before the deputy, but dismissed. 24 Of Apollos.

AFTER these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth;

2 And found a certain Jew, named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla, (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome,) and came unto them.

3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: (for by their occupation they were tent-makers.)

4 And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ.

6 And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

7 ¶ And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, one that worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue.

8 And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house: and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized.

9 ¶ Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace:

10 For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee; for I have much people in this city.

11 And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 ¶ And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia, the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment-seat, 13 Saying, ^mThis fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.

14 And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you:

15 But if it be ⁿa question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters.

16 And he drave them from the judgment-seat.

17 Then all the Greeks took Sosthenes, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment-seat: and Gallio cared for none of those things.

18 ¶ And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having shorn his head in Cenchrea: for he had a vow.

19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.

20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not;

21 But bade them farewell, saying, ^oI must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, ^pif God will. And he sailed from Ephesus.

22 And when he had landed at Cesarea, and gone up, and saluted the church, ^qhe went down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all ^rthe country of Galatia and Phrygia in order, ^sstrengthening all the disciples.

24 ¶ And a certain Jew, named ^tApollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and ^umighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.

25 This man was ^vinstructed in the way of the Lord; and, being ^wfervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the daily, with all that met him. His address in Mars-hill, notwithstanding its pertinence to the place and the people, and the solemnity with which it closed, produced but little effect. The experiment shews how little mere mental culture conduces to prepare men for the reception of Divine truth; and that it is only they who are taught of the Father that come to the Lord Jesus.

Chap. XVIII. 1-11. Corinth was one of the most famous of ancient cities, remarkable for its situation, which was favourable for trade as well as for influence among the surrounding regions. It is well known that the ancients had a custom, whatever their rank or their learning, of teaching young men mechanical trades, which was attended with many advantages, as giving them a knowledge of society generally, as well as, by means of healthful exercise, promoting their physical interests, and, should it ever be required, securing them bread. Ver. 12-23. Gallio was the elder brother of Seneca, the famous Roman philosopher, by whom he is praised for his great mildness of disposition—a quality which may account for the conduct he manifested here, which, while decisive, was not virulent. At the time when this was written the Romans comprehended under the name of Achaia all that part of Greece which was situated south of Thessaly. Gallio was deputy-governor of the province; the Romans called that officer by the title of Proconsul. The statement that “Gallio cared for none of these things” has been generally understood as signifying scornful indifference; it has, however, been argued by some distinguished modern interpreters, that the import of the memorable declaration was that these were things beyond his province, which was limited to secular matters, and that he therefore declined to have anything to do with them. This, however, may be considered a refinement; it is forced, and moreover at variance with the order of feeling among the ancient Romans, who deemed the Church and the State but one concern, and therefore laid claim to regulate everything appertaining to both. The city of Alexandria by its name bespeaks its origin. It resulted from the genius and enterprise of Alexander things of the Lord, ^aknowing only the baptism of John.

26 And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when ^bAquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and ^cexpounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.

27 And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, ^dexhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had ^ebelieved through grace:

28 For he mightily ^fconvinced the Jews, and that publicly, shewing by the scriptures that Jesus ^gwas Christ.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Holy Ghost is given by Paul's hands.

AND it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul, having passed through the upper coasts, came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples,

2 He said unto them, ^aHave ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, ^bWe have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, ^cUnto John's baptism.

4 Then said Paul, ^dJohn verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

5 When they heard this, ^ethey were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

6 And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, ^fthe Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, ^gdisputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But when ^hdivers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, ⁱhe departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing ^jdaily in the school of one Tyrannus.

the Great, and was the metropolis of Egypt, and for ages the seat of its kings. Great numbers of Jews were in that place, and their presence, with the Scriptures of the Prophets, doubtless contributed to sow those seeds of light for which Egypt was so remarkable. Ver. 24-28. Apollos is one of the most noted men in the New Testament, alike for eloquence and for Scripture knowledge, humility and decision, seal and success. But, notwithstanding his power and popularity, he did not despise the lessons of the humble couple, Aquila and Priscilla, who expounded to him the word of God more perfectly. But, as we learn elsewhere, when Paul wished him to proceed to a given sphere of labour, he resolutely acted upon his own convictions, in opposition to the wishes of the apostle.

Chap. XIX. 1-20. The inquiry touching this receiving of the Holy Ghost had no reference to his regenerating and sanctifying power, for that is assumed as the ground of the inquiry, but to the extraordinary gifts which were then enjoyed. In the New Testament, the term sometimes signifies the operations of the Spirit; and, in several passages, not his sanctifying, but his miraculous

10 And this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

11 And ^aGod wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul:

12 So ^bthat from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

13 ^cThen certain of the vagabond Jews, ^dexorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We ^eadjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?

16 And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, and ^fthe name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

18 And many that believed came, and ^gconfessed, and shewed their deeds.

19 Many of them also which ^hused curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found ⁱit fifty thousand pieces of silver.

20 So ^jmightily grew the word of God and prevailed.

21 ^kAfter these things were ended, Paul ^lpurposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, ^mto go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, ⁿI must also see Rome.

22 So he sent into ^oMacedonia two of them ^pthat ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus; ^qbut he himself stayed in Asia for a season.

23 And the same time there arose no small stir about that way.

24 For a certain man, named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver agency. The remark brings forth an important fact from Paul, who gives us to understand, that while John preached repentance, he also exhibited faith, without which mere repentance would not have brought salvation. Not only, therefore, were the people enjoined to come from doing evil, but to believe on him that should come—that was, on Christ Jesus. It is everywhere noticeable, that the displays of Divine power were regulated by the state of things among the people, and the difficulties with which the apostles had to contend. On one occasion we find the healing power connected even with Peter's shadow; and in the present an article of cloth, that had touched the body of Paul, had but to be applied to the persons of the sick, or to those possessed of evil spirits, and they were forthwith cured and delivered. Ver. 21-41. Ephesus, destined to be so famous in Church history, was a place distinguished for its connexion with idolatry. The temple of Diana was greatly celebrated. This goddess had altars and temples erected in various parts of Greece, but her chief city was Ephesus, where her great temple was reared, and her votaries assembled in the largest numbers. Nothing of anti-shrines for ^aDiana, ^bbrought no small gain unto the craftsmen;

25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.

26 Moreover, ye see and hear, ^cthat not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying ^dthat they be no gods which are ^emade with hands:

27 So ^fthat not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.

28 And when they heard these sayings, ^gthey were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

29 And ^hthe whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught ⁱGaius and ^jAristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into ^kthe theatre.

30 And when ^lPaul would have entered in unto the people, ^mthe disciples suffered him not.

31 And certain of ⁿthe chief of Asia, which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring ^ohim that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.

32 Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

33 And they drew ^pAlexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward. And Alexander beckoned with the hand, and would have made ^qhis defence unto the people.

34 But when ^rthey knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice, about the space of two hours, cried out, ^sGreat is Diana of the Ephesians.

35 And when the town-clerk had appeased the people, he said, Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is ¹a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, ²and of the image which fell down from ³Jupiter?

36 Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly.

37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.

38 Wherefore if ⁴Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, ⁵the law is open, and there are deputies; let them implead one another.

39 But if ye enquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a ⁶lawful assembly.

40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse.

41 And when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the assembly.

CHAPTER XX.

¹ Paul goeth to Macedonia. ⁶ At Troas he celebrateth the Lord's supper, preacheth, and ¹⁷at Miletus, Paul commit-⁸⁶teeth the flock to the elders, ⁸⁶and prayeth with them.

AND after the uproar was ceased, Paul ¹called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia.

2 And when he had gone over those parts, and had ²given them much exhortation, he came into Greece,

3 And there abode three months: and when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia.

4 And there accompanied him into Asia, Sopater of Berea; and of the Thessalonians, Aristarchus and Secundus; and Gaius of Derbe, and Timotheus; and of Asia, Tychicus and Trophimus.

quity was comparable to that temple, the expenses of which had been levied throughout all Asia Minor. This magnificent edifice was beautified by a hundred and twenty-seven columns, erected at the cost of as many kings; while it was adorned with the most beautiful statues. Seldom have popular folly and fury been more deplorably exemplified than in the case of the infuriated multitude. How characteristic of excited masses was the shouting, by the space of two hours, one thing, while nobody contradicted it! Amongst the various civil functionaries mentioned in Scripture, most have performed a becoming part; but none acted with more propriety and decision than the town-clerk of Ephesus. "A word fitly spoken, how good it is!" How important that civil power should everywhere be exercised by men of prudence as well as principle, combining firmness with gentleness, meekness with impartiality!

Chap. XX. 1-6. The names of important individuals are brought forth occasionally in the most incidental way, whereby they are handed down to posterity, embalmed in the records of Inspiration. Aristarchus was a Macedonian who attended Paul in his voyage to Rome, and was his fellow-labourer and fellow-prisoner, which is all that we are told concerning him. These facts, however, constitute the germ of an invaluable biography, and are sufficient guarantee for superior character. Gaius of Derbe, baptized by Paul at Corinth, entertained him as his guest while he dwelt there. John afterwards directed his third Epistle to him, which comprises points redounding to the honour of his Christian munificence and personal piety. Timothy was a native of Lystra, and enjoyed, in a high degree, the friendship of the apostle, who addressed to him the two Epistles which bear his name, and which are specially adapted to promote the piety and usefulness of Christian ministers. Amongst all the young men of the Gospel, the first place is, doubtless, that occupied by Timothy, who was a frequent companion of Paul in his travels, labouring with him in the Gospel, everywhere sharing his afflictions and persecutions. Tychicus was an Asiatic, who stood high in the favour of the apostle, as a beloved brother and faithful minister, and fellow-servant in the Lord. Such was Paul's confidence in him, that he sent him to some of the churches on a double mission, not only to apprise them of how matters went with himself, but that he might "know their state, and comfort their hearts." Trophimus was an Ephesian, and a convert, whom we find afterwards with Paul at Jerusalem, and attending him on his journeys. Ver. 7-16. The circumstance of the disciples coming together on the "first day of the week" to break bread, is all-important in its relation to the Lord's Day, or the Christian Sabbath. This Scripture alone—to say nothing of the fact of the view being 5 These, going before, tarried for us at Troas.

6 And we sailed away from Philippi after ^bthe days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days.

7 ¶ And upon the first day of the week, when ^cthe disciples came together ^dto break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; ^eand continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together.

9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.

10 And Paul went down, ^fand fell on him, and, embracing ^ghim, said, ^h"Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him."

11 When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed.

12 And ⁱthey brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.

13 ¶ And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Assos, there intending to take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot.

14 And when he met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene.

15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios; and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium; and the next day we came to Miletus.

16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia; for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem ^jthe day of Pentecost.

17 ¶ And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church.

18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons,

19 ^k"Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations, which befell me ^lby the lying in wait of the Jews;

20 And how I kept back nothing that was ^mprofitable unto you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house, 21 Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, ⁿ"repentance toward God, and ^ofaith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

22 And now, behold, ^pI go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there:

23 Save that ^qthe Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions ^rabide me.

24 But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that ^sI might finish my course with joy, ^tand the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, ^uto testify the gospel of the grace of God.

25 And now, behold, ^vI know that ye all, among whom I have gone ^w"preaching the kingdom of God, shall ^xsee my face no more.

26 Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men.

27 For I have not shunned to declare unto you ^y"all the counsel of God.

28 ¶ Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, ^z"over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, ^{aa}to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

29 For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous ^{ab}"wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock.

supported by the history of the first ages—demonstrates that the Churches were accustomed to keep holy the first day of the week, setting it apart for religious worship. They did not assemble on the present occasion expressly to hear Paul, but as a matter of course they came to observe the ordinances of religion. Paul broke the bread, and conducted the service. Ver. 17-27. The persons here designated "elders," or presbyters, and "overseers," or bishops, were not distinct orders of ministers, but one and the same—the eldership referring to mature or advanced years, and the episcopate to their oversight of the flock. The term bishop signifies simply, to oversee, inspect, watch over. The conclusion from this, and other Scriptures touching the same point, is, that minister, pastor, elder, and bishop, were but so many names for the same office; which explains the fact of Paul's addressing his Epistles to the Churches, with their bishops and deacons. These were the officers of the primitive Churches; with these each fellowship was complete. By being "bound in the Spirit," we are to understand impelled, or led onward, as if by an irresistible impulse. In this serious hour it was the apostle's consolation to reflect on the integrity of his ministrations. He had strong temptations to withhold the more offensive portions of the Word of God, but in no case had he given way. By declaring all the counsel of God, must be meant everything revealed to him concerning the salvation of men, the doctrine of Christ crucified, with repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, the ordinances of his house, and the laws of his kingdom. Ver. 28-35. The first is a verse of great significance, with respect to the divinity of the Lord Jesus. Such is its weight, that if it stood solitary, it would go far to establish the doctrine of his Godhead. The Lord Jesus alone became incarnate; he alone, therefore, as dwelling in a body, had blood to shed; and here it is explicitly and emphatically affirmed, that God hath purchased his Church with his own blood. In harmony with this are the other statements made upon the subject—1 Cor. vi. 20; Eph. i. 7, v. 25; 1 Pet. i. 18, 19. Here, then, the Lord Jesus is distinctly and incontrovertibly recognised as God manifest in the flesh. This address is the most pathetic and powerful thing of the sort contained in Scripture, and will remain to the end of the world the most important charge to ministers of the Gospel. The words of the Lord Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," possess a peculiar interest. They are not to be found in any of the Gospels, and therefore they must have come down by tradition; or, from the value which attaches to them, the Holy Spirit may thus have recorded them. They contain an all-important principle—viz., that there is more happi-

30 Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, ^dto draw away disciples after them.

31 Therefore ^ewatch, and remember, that, by the space of three years, I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.

32 And now, brethren, ^fI commend you to God, ^gand to the word of his grace, which is able ^hto build you up, ⁱand to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified.

33 I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel.

34 Yea, ye yourselves know, ^kthat these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me.

35 I have shewed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak; and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, ^lIt is more blessed to give than to receive.

36 ^mAnd when he had thus spoken, he kneeled down, and prayed with them all.

37 And they all wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him;

38 Sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, ⁿthat they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship.

2 And finding a ship sailing over unto ^oPhenicia, we went aboard, and set forth.

3 Now, when we had discovered ^pCyprus, we left it on the left hand, and sailed into ^qSyria, and landed at ^rTyre: for there the ship was to unlade her burden.

4 And finding disciples, we tarried there seven days; who ^ssaid to Paul through the Spirit, that he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And when we had accomplished those days, we departed, and went our way; and they all brought us on our way, with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and ^twe kneeled down on the shore, and prayed.

6 And when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ship; and they returned home again.

7 And when we had finished our course from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais, and ^usaluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8 And the next day we that were of Paul's company departed, and came unto Cesarea; and we entered into the house of Philip the evangelist, (which was one of the seven,) and abode with him.

9 And the same man had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy.

10 And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judea a certain prophet, named ^vAgabus.

11 And when he was come unto us, ^whe took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, ^xThus saith the Holy Ghost, ^ySo shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, ^zand shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we heard these things, both we, and they of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, ^{aa}What mean ye to weep, and to break mine heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, ^{ab}The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days we took up our carriages, and went up to Jerusalem.

16 There went with us also certain ^{ac}of the disciples of Cesarea, and brought with them one Mnason of ^{ad}Cyprus, an old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us ^{ae}unto James; and ^{af}all the elders were present.

19 And when he had saluted them, ^{ag}he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry.

ness in bestowing kindnesses than in receiving them. It is, of course, not meant that there is no happiness in the latter—far from it—but that there is greater happiness in the former, inasmuch as it is more allied to the felicity of the eternal God, which consists in the bestowment of happiness among his creatures. He is good and doeth good, opening his hand liberally, and supplying the wants of every living thing. Ver. 36-38. We here obtain a glimpse of the workings of primitive piety. The scene is one of the most touching upon record. Thrilled with emotion, we listen to the apostle as he pours out his soul to the Ephesian elders, and at the close, dropping on his knees, lifts up his heart to God for them, while the whole company, drowned in tears, fall on his neck, and kiss him! Old and young, they accompany him to the ship where, with feelings not to be described, they bid him a long farewell.

Chap. XXI. 1-14. We are thus taught that Paul, at times, received Divine communications not directly from the Holy Ghost, but through the medium of others. We have here another illustration of the wonderful affection which prevailed in the primitive Churches. The conduct of the Tyrian disciples is full of beauty; they went in a body, parents and children, through the city with the apostle and his company, and on reaching the ship, previous to embarking, he knelt down with them on the strand, praying on their behalf for those mercies which were necessary to their happiness, preservation, and fruitfulness. In those days true piety was more than a name; it was a principle, a passion, a power. Ver. 15-26. We are here taught with what feelings the Churches of Christ ought to receive returned missionaries. Men who have seen service in the foreign field are entitled to be held in the highest consideration. Amidst the joyous excitement of the missionary meeting, Christians are but too ready to look upon the work as something very different from the reality. Objections 20 And when they heard it, "they glorified the Lord, and said unto him, Thou seest, brother, "how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; "and they are all zealous of the law;

21 And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs.

22 What is it therefore? the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come,

23 Do therefore this that we say to thee: "We have four men which have a vow on them;

24 Them take, and purify thyself with them, and be at charges with them, "that they may shave their heads: and all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning thee, are nothing; "but that thou thyself also walkest orderly, and keepest the law.

25 As touching the Gentiles which believe, we have written and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then Paul took the men, and the next day purifying himself with them entered into the temple, "to signify the accomplishment of the days of purification, until that an offering should be offered for every one of them.

27 ¶ And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews which were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, "stirred up all the people, "and laid hands on him, 28 Crying out, Men of Israel, help: This is the man that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place: and further, brought Greeks also into the temple, and hath polluted this holy place.

29 (For they had seen before with him in the city "Trophimus an Ephesian, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.)

have been taken to the advice here given to Paul, and fault found with his compliance; but more closely examined, it will be seen that the course adopted was not without reason. In acting as he did, he simply became a Jew to the Jews; that is, he conformed to their customs with a view to gain them over to the Gospel. On the same principle that he had circumcised Timothy because of the Jews, he might unite with the individuals who had come to the temple for a religious purpose. It is to be specially noted, that while James and the elders gave this counsel, they themselves held as firmly by the atonement of the Saviour, and justification by faith, as Paul did. Their illumination, however, on the subject was less complete, but their very darkness materially contributed to the spread of truth in Jerusalem. The people were not prepared for the full blaze of Gospel light; and had they been required all at once to withdraw from the temple-service, and to desist from the circumcision of their children, and in a word wholly sever themselves from the customs of their fathers, it would have greatly contributed to fan the fires of controversy, and to prevent the conversion of souls. 30 And all the city was moved, and the people ran together; "and they took Paul, and drew him out of the temple: and forthwith the doors were shut.

31 And "as they went about to kill him, tidings came unto the chief captain of the band, "that all Jerusalem was in an uproar:

32 Who immediately "took soldiers and centurions, and ran down unto them: and when they saw the chief captain and the soldiers, they left "beating of Paul.

33 Then the chief captain came near, and took him, and commanded him to be "bound with two chains; and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

34 And some cried one thing, some another, among the multitude: and when he could not know the certainty for the tumult, he commanded him to be carried into the castle.

35 And when he came upon the stairs, so it was, that he was borne of the soldiers "for the violence of the people.

36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying, "Away with him.

37 ¶ And as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain, May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek?

38 Art not thou that Egyptian, which before these days madest an uproar, and leddest out into the wilderness four thousand men that were murderers?

39 But Paul said, "I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in "Cilicia, "a citizen of no mean city: and, I beseech thee, "suffer me to speak unto the people.

40 And when he had given him licence, Paul stood "on the stairs, "and beckoned with the hand unto the people. And when there was made "a great silence, he spake unto them in the "Hebrew tongue, saying, principle is here set forth from which reformers may profit; by pushing things to extremities, instead of advancing by degrees, as men can bear it, they frequently fail of their object. Ver. 27-40. Strangers might worship in the court of the Gentiles, but it was not permitted them to enter the inner part, which was exclusively appropriated to Israel. The multitude shewed equally a want of reason, and of religion; they were impelled by blind fury, and but for the interposition of the higher powers they would certainly have killed the apostle. We see here, what is seen in all popular movements of a kindred character, an utter disregard of truth, and a scornful neglect of the inquiry which would elicit it.

Chap. XXII. 1-21. The pupils in the schools of the Jews were said to sit at the feet of their teachers, because of their elevated positions. Calling on the name of the Lord is a deeply significant expression. It signified a distinct profession of fellowship. Calling on the Lord Jesus, or directing prayer to him, was a characteristic of the primitive believers. This is another of the great Scriptural facts which support the deity of the Saviour.

in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more silence: and he saith,)

4 And ^dI persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women.

5 As also the high priest doth bear me witness, and all the estate of the elders: from whom also I received letters unto the brethren, and went to Damascus, to bring them which were there bound unto Jerusalem, for to be punished.

6 And it came to pass, ^ethat, as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.

7 And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, ^fwhy persecutest thou me?

8 And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, ^gI am Jesus of Nazareth, ^hwhom thou persecutest.

9 And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid: ⁱbut they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.

10 And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and ^jthere it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

11 And ^kwhen I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus.

12 And one Ananias, ^la devout man according to the law, having a good report of all the Jews which dwelt ^mthere, 13 Came unto me, and stood, and said unto me, ⁿBrother Saul, receive thy sight. And the same hour I looked up upon him.

14 And he said, The God of our fathers ^ohath chosen thee, that thou shouldst know his will, and see ^pthat Just One, and shouldest ^qhear the voice of his mouth.

15 For ^rthou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard.

and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, ^acalling on the name of the Lord.

17 And it came to pass, that, when I was come again to Jerusalem, even ^bwhile I prayed in the temple, I was in a trance;

18 And saw him saying unto me, ^cMake haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem: ^dfor they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

19 And I said, Lord, they know that I imprisoned and beat in every synagogue them that believed on thee:

20 And when the blood of thy ^emartyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, and ^fconsenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him.

21 And he said unto me, Depart: ^gfor I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles.

22 ¶ And they gave him audience unto this word, and ^hthen lifted up their voices, and said, Away with such a ⁱfellow from the earth; for it is not fit that he should live.

23 And as they cried out, and cast off ^jtheir clothes, and threw dust into the air, 24 The chief captain commanded him to be brought into the castle, and bade ^kthat he should be examined by scourging; that he might know wherefore they cried so against him.

25 And as they bound him with thongs, Paul said unto the centurion that stood by, ^lIs it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?

26 When the centurion heard ^mthat, he went and told the chief captain, saying, Take heed what thou doest: for this man is a Roman.

27 Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? He said, Yea.

28 And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom. And Paul said, ⁿBut I was free-born.

29 Then straightway they departed from him which should have ^oexamined him: and the chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

30 On the morrow, because he would have known the certainty wherefore he was accused of the Jews, he loosed him from ^phis bands, and commanded the chief priests and all their council to appear,

Although Paul frequently preached to the Jews, and strained every nerve to promote their salvation, yet his province was specially to spread the Gospel among the Gentiles. His writings also were addressed, with a single exception—the Epistle to the Hebrews—to them. That was his regular systematic pursuit, to which labours amongst his own fellow-countrymen were supplementary and occasional. The apostle's travels covered a considerable part of the then known world. We find him in Judaea, Arabia, Syria, Cilicia, Pisidia, Lycaonia, Pamphylia, Galatia, Phrygia, Macedonia, Greece, Asia, the isles of the Mediterranean Sea, the isles of the Egean Sea, Italy, and some would add Spain, and even Britain itself. Concerning these two latter places, there is a want of evidence necessary to certainty. Ver. 22-30.

Jewish mobs were most ferocious. Possessing strong passions, they manifested them by violent gestures. Casting off their clothes, and throwing dust in the air, was conduct more allied to frenzy than reason. Travellers testify that the same thing prevails in the East at the present hour. Paul's citizenship was of considerable service to him in carrying on his apostolic labours, more especially as the sphere of his operations lay to no small extent within the confines of the Empire. It is affecting to think of the benefits which one man may be the instrument of conferring on a globe with all its millions. It is but too probable that the mass even of so-called Christian nations at the present hour never thought for one moment on this subject, or have the slightest conception of the extent to which their know-

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Paul pleadeth his cause. 7 Dissension among his accusers. 23 He is sent to Felix.

AND Paul, earnestly beholding the council, said, Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.

2 And the high priest Ananias commanded them that stood by him to smite him on the mouth.

3 Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?

4 And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's high priest?

5 Then said Paul, I wist not, brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.

6 But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.

7 And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

8 For the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit; but the Pharisees confess both.

9 And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man; but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.

10 And when there arose a great dissension, the chief captain, fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

11 And the night following the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul; for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul.

13 And they were more than forty which had made this conspiracy.

14 And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said, We have bound ourselves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul.

15 Now therefore ye with the council signify to the chief captain, that he bring him down unto you to-morrow, as though ye would enquire something more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he come near, are ready to kill him.

16 And when Paul's sister's son heard of their lying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 Then Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee.

19 Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aside privately, and asked him, What is that thou hast to tell me?

20 And he said, The Jews have agreed to desire thee that thou wouldest bring down Paul to-morrow into the council, as though they would enquire somewhat of him more perfectly.

21 But do not thou yield unto them: for there lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themselves with an oath, that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now are they ready, looking for a promise from thee.

22 So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man that thou hast shewed these things to me.

23 And he called unto him two centurions, saying, Make ready two hundred soldiers to go to Cesarea, and horsemen threescore and ten, and spearmen two hundred, at the third hour of the night;

24 And provide them beasts, that they ledge, liberty, and civilization are attributable to Saul of Tarsus. A time comes, however, when it will be otherwise, when all nations shall be blessed in Paul's Master, and all nations shall duly estimate their obligation to his apostolic services.

Chap. XXIII. 1-10. Among the Jews violence was not confined to the multitude. Most flagrant examples were often set by those in high places. The conduct of Ananias was deeply discreditable. We, of these times, and in this country, can form no idea of one of the judges of the land calling on the bystanders to strike the prisoner on the mouth! The department of Paul on the occasion was worthy of his character; his boldness did honour to his cause, and his self-possession bespoke his conscious integrity. There is some difficulty as to the expression, "God shall smite thee"—whether it was a declaration or a prediction: a declaration that such conduct would one day be visited with Divine judgment, or a prediction that it would be punished in this life. Be this as it may, it is an historic fact, that about five years afterwards, Ananias was dragged from a place in which he had hid himself from popular tumult, and put to death by the hands of assassins. Paul may have designated this wicked man a whited wall, from the fact, that, among the Jews, great men were accustomed to wear a white robe, and, in all probability, Ananias was so clothed at that time. It has been supposed to be a proverbial expression for a hypocrite—a seemly exterior encompassing a deformed nature. Ver. 11-35. As was the apostle's day, so was his strength; special occasions never failed to bring forth corresponding communications. The intimation given also, that he must bear witness of his Lord at Rome, was of great use to him subsequently. It served as a light to guide him in perplexity, and to encourage him amid danger. In point of character, may set Paul on, and bring him safe unto ¹Felix ²the governor.

25 And he wrote a letter after this manner:

26 Claudius Lysias unto ¹the most excellent governor Felix sendeth ¹greeting.

27 This man ¹was taken of the Jews, and should have been killed of them: then came I with an army, and rescued him, ¹having understood that he was a Roman.

28 And ¹when I would have known the cause wherefore they accused him, I brought him forth into their council;

29 Whom I perceived to be accused of ¹questions of their law, ²but to have nothing laid to his charge worthy of death or of bonds.

30 And when ¹it was told me how that the Jews laid wait for the man, I sent straightway to thee, ²and gave commandment to his accusers also to say before thee what they had against him. ¹Farewell.

31 Then the soldiers, ¹as it was commanded them, took Paul, and brought him by night to Antipatria.

32 On the morrow they left the horsemen to go with him, and returned to the castle:

33 Who, when they came to Cesarea, and ¹delivered the epistle to the governor, ²presented Paul also before him.

34 And when the governor had read the letter, ¹he asked of what province he was. And when he understood that he was of ¹Cilicia;

35 I will hear thee, said he, when thine accusers are also come. And he commanded him to be kept in Herod's judgment-hall.

CHAPTER XXIV.

¹ Paul, accused by Tertullus, 10 answereth for himself. ²⁴ He preacheth Christ to the governor and his wife. ²⁷ Felix leaveth Paul in prison.

AND after five days Ananias the high priest descended with the elders, and with a certain ¹orator named Tertullus, who informed the governor against Paul.

there seemed no difference between the high priests, Pharisees, and scribes, and the most debased among the multitude. They were alike unscrupulous, wicked, and cruel; ever ready to shed the blood of their fellow-creatures. The men who here banded together to destroy the apostle, met with a cordial reception from the chief priests and the Sanhedrim; instead of resenting and condemning their conduct, they were ready to fall in with it. Little do the wicked imagine that there is an Ear which hears all they say, and an Eye that penetrates into the secrets of their hearts. This murderous band little thought that Paul's sister's son was privy to their secret, and had gone to the castle to inform his uncle! This is one of those countless illustrations of an overruling Providence, by which the wicked are discomfited and the righteous preserved. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Chap. XXIV. 1-21. When a cause is bad, those to whom it belongs naturally look for the best advocacy that can be obtained, with a view to make the worse appear the better reason. The speech of Tertullus bespeaks the character of the men he represented. It is full of misstatements or positive misrepresentations,

2 And when he was called forth, Tertullus began to accuse him, saying, ¹Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietness, and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providence,

3 We accept it always, and in all places, ²most noble Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 Notwithstanding, that I be not further tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldest hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5 For we have found this man a pestilent fellow, ²and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the ³Nazarenes:

6 Who also hath gone about to profane the temple; whom we took, ⁴and would have judged according to our law:

7 But the chief captain Lysias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8 Commanding his accusers to come unto thee: by examining of whom thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things whereof we accuse him.

9 And the Jews also assented, saying that these things were so.

10 ¶ Then Paul, after that the governor ¹had beckoned unto him to speak, answered, Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years ²a judge unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself:

11 Because that thou mayest understand, that there are yet but twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem for ³to worship.

12 And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city:

13 ¹Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call ¹heresy, so worship I ²the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written ³in the law and in the prophets:

from beginning to end. The compliments paid to Felix had no foundation in fact, as the Jews present well knew. His government, far from proving a blessing to Judea, was actually viewed by the people as a calamity; so much so that they accused him before Nero of intolerable rapacity, for which he would, doubtless, have been overthrown, had not his brother Pallas, the favourite of the Emperor, interposed on his behalf. The perfect contrast displayed by the apostle is remarkable. It had been easy for him to retort and to recriminate; but, overlooking the insolence and falsehood of the oration of Tertullus, he takes the several charges and disposes of them with the utmost composure. There is something peculiarly touching in the apostle's reference to the way in which he "worshipped the God of his fathers." Christianity was not merely deemed heresy by the Jews, but punished as iniquity; for they were wholly ignorant of the spirit, scope, and import, alike of the Law and of the Prophets, since all pointed to the Messiah as a sacrifice for the sins of men, and to his resurrection in token of the acceptance of his work. Ver. 22-27. Felix, notwithstanding the depravity of his character, was a man of intelligence, and his lengthened tenure of office as governor of Judea, was favourable to an acquaintance with the religion of 15 And ^ahave hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, ^bthat there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.

16 And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

17 Now, after many years, I came ^ato bring alms to my nation, and ^bofferings.

18 Whereupon certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult:

19 Who ought to have been here before thee, and object, if they had ought against me.

20 Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil-doing in me, while I stood before the council, 21 Except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, "Touching the resurrection of the dead I am called in question by you this day.

22 ¶ And when Felix heard these things, ^ahaving more perfect knowledge of that way, he deferred them, and said, When Lysias the chief captain shall come down, I will know the uttermost of your matter.

23 And he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, ^aand to let him have liberty, and that he should forbid none of ^ahis acquaintance to minister or come unto him.

24 And after certain days, when Felix came with his wife Drusilla, which was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and heard him concerning ^athe faith in Christ.

25 And as he reasoned of "righteousness, temperance, and ^ajudgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, ^bGo thy way for this time; ^cwhen I have a convenient season, I will call for thee.

26 He hoped also that money should have been given him of Paul, that he might loose him: wherefore he sent for him the oftener, and communed with him.

27 But after two years ^aPorcius Festus came into Felix' room: and Felix, willing to shew the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Paul, accused by the Jews before Festus, 11 appeals unto Cesar.

NOW, when Festus was come ^ainto the province, after three days ^bhe ascended from Cesarea to Jerusalem.

2 Then the high priest, and the chief of the Jews, informed him against Paul, and besought him,

3 And desired favour against him, that he would send for him to Jerusalem, ^alaying wait in the way to kill him.

4 But Festus answered, that Paul should be kept at Cesarea, and that he himself would depart shortly thither.

5 Let ^athem therefore, said he, which among you are able, go down with me, and accuse this man, ^aif there be any wickedness in him.

6 And when he had tarried among them ^amore than ten days, he went down unto Cesarea; and the next day, ^asitting on the judgment-seat, commanded Paul to be brought.

7 And when he was come, the Jews which came down from Jerusalem stood round about, ^aand laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which they could not prove:

8 While he answered for himself, ^bNeither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Cesar, have I offended any thing at all.

9 But Festus, ^awilling to do the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?

10 Then said Paul, ^aI stand at Cesar's judgment-seat, where I ought to be judged: to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest.

11 For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. ^aI appeal unto Cesar.

12 ¶ Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, Hast the Jews. He considered Christianity as a harmless superstition, but he could not dismiss Paul without inquiry into the merits of the new system. Drusilla was daughter to Herod, who beheaded James the brother of John, and sister to King Agrippa, of whom we shall shortly see more. She had left her husband to cohabit with Felix, being a woman of worthless character. The address of the apostle was peculiarly suited to the habits and circumstances of the governor. They were just the points which would reach his conscience, and give the statement a powerful personal bearing. No man could less afford to hear with composure of "righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," and the effect of the apostolic argument was to alarm the powerful transgressor. In this case an experiment was made upon an individual of a numerous class of mankind—men who seldom hear the truth, and who, when they hear, endeavour to exclude it. After this he determined to give the apostle no fresh opportunity of searching his conscience with the light of inspiration. The baseness of the judge was peculiarly exemplified in his soliciting frequent interviews with the apostle, in the hope that he might purchase his deliverance. Truth and falsehood, justice and oppression, were ideas of which Felix had no distinct perception. The sole rule of his conduct was his own will, which was utterly perverted by his own depravity.

Chap. XXV. 1-12. The seat on which Festus sat was called "Cesar's judgment-seat," inasmuch as it was a Roman Court of Judicature, and because the judge who filled it was supposed to personate the Emperor. The apostle's appeal to Cesar cut short all further proceedings, and completely defeated the bloodthirsty intentions of his enemies. Paul clearly saw that he had nothing to hope, and much to fear, from the governor, who was obviously disposed to work into the hands of the Jews. He was, doubtless, influenced also by the vision he had, apprising him that he must bear witness of Christ at Rome. He now began to perceive the wonderful working of Providence for the accomplishment of this object. It was the privilege of every Roman citizen to appeal against any sentence of any judge, if he conceived it to be unjust, to the Emperor himself. Ver. 13-27. Agrippa was the son of Herod, who beheaded James, and imprisoned Peter. He received the title of king from thou appealed unto Cesar? ^munto Cesar shalt thou go.

13 And after certain days king Agrippa and Bernice came unto Cesarea ⁿto salute Festus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, ^oThere is a certain man left in bonds by Felix;

15 About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered, ^pIt is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, ^qand have licence to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 Therefore, when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment-seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom, when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 But had ^rcertain questions against him of their own ^ssuperstition, and of one Jesus, ^twhich was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because I ^udoubted of such manner of questions, I asked ^vhim whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

21 But when Paul ^whad appealed to be reserved unto the ^xhearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Cesar.

22 Then Agrippa said unto Festus, I would also hear the man myself. To-morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, and was entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains and principal men of the city, at Festus' commandment Paul was brought forth.

24 And Festus said, King Agrippa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here, crying that he ought not to live any longer.

25 But when I found that he had ^qcommitted nothing worthy of death, and that he himself hath appealed to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

26 Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto my lord. Wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and specially before thee, O king Agrippa, that, after examination had, I might have somewhat to write.

27 For it seemeth to me unreasonable to send a prisoner, and not withal to signify the crimes laid against him.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Paul, before Agrippa, declareth his life, 12 and his conversion. 24 Festus chargeth him with madness.

THEN Agrippa said unto Paul, ^aThou art permitted to speak for thyself. Then Paul stretched forth the hand, and answered for himself:

2 I think myself happy, king Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews;

3 Especially because I know thee to be expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews: wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

4 My ^bmanner of life from my youth, which was at the first among mine own nation at Jerusalem, know all the Jews;

5 Which knew me from the beginning, (if they would testify,) that after the most straitest ^csect of our religion, I lived a Pharisee.

6 And now I stand and ^dam judged for the hope of ^ethe promise made of God unto our fathers:

7 Unto which promise our twelve tribes, ^finstantly serving God ^gday and night, hope to come: ^hfor which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews.

Rome, and the government of several districts without the boundaries of Palestine, and also over a part of Galilee. Jewish historians frequently mention him, calling him as he is here designated, King Agrippa. Bernice was his sister. Agrippa, for the times, bore a respectable character as a just ruler, and a generous man, who displayed a uniform regard to the observances of religion. When Festus spake of the religion of the Jews as superstition, it is probable he meant no reflection by the term, but used it in the general sense of religion, as Paul did when he addressed the Athenians, telling them he perceived they were in all things too superstitious. All the Roman emperors assumed the title of Augustus, as well as that of Cesar. The interview with the apostle, which took place on the present occasion, was not a trial, for his accusers were not present: it was a mere rehearsal of the facts and doctrines of his religion, since no judge could try a prisoner after he had made an appeal. It is deeply affecting to see the ignorance of the great ones of the earth. With what simplicity Festus speaks of "One Jesus who was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive!" Little thought the governor, and all the governors of the world at that time, that this was He by whom kings would reign and princes decree justice—that all the kingdoms of this world were his, and that from the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, the name of that "One Jesus" would be great among the Gentiles.

Chap. XXVI. 1-23. When Paul reaches the turning-point of his wonderful discourse, he addresses himself directly to the king, with the momentous interrogation, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" To the Most High who made the heavens and the earth, were not all things possible? If God made man at the first of the dust, can he not reform the dust of death into a living body? The possibility of the resurrection once granted, the next point was the fact; and this was established by evidence the most incontrovertible. There is a body of men of sound intelligence and unimpeachable character, intimate friends of the deceased for years previous to his crucifixion, who declare that they frequently saw him and conversed with him subsequently to his resurrection; while five hundred disciples met him at a given place, saw his person, heard his voice, and beheld him ascend into heaven. We are here presented incidentally with a beautiful delineation of the work of grace on the hearts of men, from the lips of the Saviour himself. The business of the apostle was to open the eyes of the Gentiles, 8 Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

9 I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to ^athe name of Jesus of Nazareth.

10 Which thing ^aI also did in Jerusalem: and many of ^athe saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them.

11 And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme; and, being exceedingly ^amad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities.

12 Whereupon, as I went to Damascus with authority and commission from the chief priests, 13 At mid-day, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, ^aabove the brightness of the sun, shining round about me and them which journeyed with me.

14 And when we were all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice speaking unto me, and saying in the Hebrew tongue, ^a"Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? It is ^ahard for thee to kick against the pricks.

15 And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And he said, ^a"I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest.

16 But rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, ^ato make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee;

17 ^aDelivering thee from the people, and from ^athe Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee, 18 To ^aopen their eyes, ^aand to turn them from darkness to light, ^aand from the power of Satan unto God, ^athat they may receive forgiveness of sins, ^aand inheritance among them which are ^asanctified by faith that is in me.

19 Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision:

20 But shewed first unto them of Damascus, ^aand at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should ^arepent and turn to God, ^aand do works meet for repentance.

21 For these causes the Jews caught me in the temple, and went about to kill me.

22 Having therefore ^aobtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come;

23 That ^aChrist should suffer, and that he should be ^athe first that should rise from the dead, ^aand should shew light unto the people, and to the Gentiles.

24 ^aAnd as he thus spake for himself, Festus said with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.

25 But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth ^athe words of truth and soberness.

26 For the king knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner.

27 King Agrippa, ^abelievest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest.

28 Then Agrippa said unto Paul, ^aAlmost thou persuadest me to be a Christian.

29 And Paul said, ^a"I would to God, ^athat not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, ^aexcept these bonds.

30 ^aAnd when he had thus spoken, the king rose up, and the governor, and Bernice, and they that sat with them:

31 And when they were gone aside, they talked between themselves, saying, ^a"This man doeth nothing worthy of death, or of bonds.

32 Then said Agrippa unto Festus, This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not ^aappealed unto Cesar.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Paul, shipping toward Rome, 9 foretells the danger of the voyage, 11 but is not believed. 14 They are shipwrecked; 21 yet all come safe to land.

AND when it was determined that we should sail into Italy, they delivered Paul, and certain other prisoners, unto one named Julius, ^aa centurion of ^aAugustus' band.

2 And, entering into a ship of Adramyttium, ^awe launched, meaning ^ato sail turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God; thus turned, they would obtain forgiveness of sin, and an inheritance amongst all that are sanctified by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. We further see the style of the apostolic preaching—the uniformity with which repentance was inculcated upon an ungodly world. Whenever this is urged simply by itself, faith is implied; and where faith is urged without the mention of repentance, that, too, is alike taken for granted. Both were duties, and both were inseparable. Ver. 24-32. Festus, unable to comprehend the religion of Paul, yet perceived that he was a great and learned man, and ascribed what he thought the fanaticism of his religion to the excess of his mental application. How beautiful the turn which the apostle gives to the well-intentioned charge of the governor!—"I am not mad, but speak the words of truth and soberness." Here, again, the apostle displays that composure, dignity, and perfect self-command which characterise him on all occasions. The grace and beauty of his address to the king is inimitable, and has been admired by scholars in every age. The king's presence greatly added to the interest of the apostolic statements at the time, and will continue to do so till the close of the Christian dispensation.

Chap. XXVII. 1-29. The period of the year was attended with great peril, which led Paul to warn the captain of the danger to which they would be exposed. The centurion, however, naturally trusted to the master of the ship as an experienced seaman, and since he was disposed to proceed, concurred in his determination. The "undergirding of the ship," is an expression which sounds strange to the modern ear, and which imports no definite idea. It is, nevertheless, explained by the by the coasts of Asia; one ^o Aristarchus, a Macedonian of Thessalonica, being with us.

3 And the next day we touched at ^s Sidon. And ^s Julius courteously entreated Paul, and gave him liberty to go unto his friends to refresh himself.

4 And when we had launched from thence, we sailed under ^b Cyprus, because the winds were contrary.

5 And when we had sailed over the sea of ⁱ Cilicia and ^k Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a city of Lycia.

6 And there ⁱ the centurion found a ship of ^m Alexandria sailing into Italy; and he put us therein.

7 And when we had sailed slowly many days, and scarce were come over against Cnidus, the wind not suffering us, we sailed ^a under ⁱ Crete, over against Salmone;

8 And, hardly passing it, came unto a place which is called The Fair Havens; nigh whereunto was the city of Lasea.

9 ¶ Now, when much time was spent, and when sailing was now dangerous, because the fast was now already past, Paul admonished them,

10 And said unto them, Sirs, I perceive that this voyage will be with hurt and much ² damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.

11 Nevertheless the centurion believed the master and the owner of the ship, more than those things which were spoken by Paul.

12 And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Phenice, and there to winter; which is an haven of ^o Crete, and lieth toward the south-west and north-west.

13 And when ^p the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their purpose, loosing thence, they sailed close by Crete.

14 But not long after there ^a arose against it ^a tempestuous wind, called Euroclydon.

15 And when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, ^w we let her drive.

16 And running under a certain island which is called Claudia, we had much work to come by the boat:

17 Which when they had taken up, they used helps, undergirding the ship; and, fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, strake sail, and so were driven.

18 And we being exceedingly tossed with a tempest, the next day they lightened the ship;

19 And the third day we cast out with our own hands the tackling of the ship.

20 And when ^a neither sun nor stars in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, ^a all hope that we should be saved was then taken away.

21 ¶ But, after long abstinence, Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said, Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss.

22 And now I exhort you to be of good cheer: ^a for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship.

23 For ^a there stood by me this night the angel of God, ^w whose I am, ^a and whom I serve, 24 Saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Cesar: and, ^a lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee.

25 Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: for ^b I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me.

26 Howbeit we must be cast upon a certain island.

27 But when the fourteenth night was come, as we were driven up and down in Adria, about midnight the shipmen deemed that they drew near to some country;

28 And sounded, and found ^{it} twenty fathoms: and when they had gone a little further, they sounded again, and found ^{it} fifteen fathoms.

29 Then fearing lest they should have ^a fallen upon rocks, they cast four ^a anchors out of the stern, ^a and wished for the day.

30 And as the shipmen were about to flee out of the ship, when they had let down ^t the boat into the sea, under colour as though they would have cast anchors out of the ^a foreship, 31 Paul ^a said to the centurion and to the soldiers, ^a Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved.

32 Then ^a the soldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.

33 And ^a while the day was coming on, Paul besought them all to take meat, saying, ^m This day is the fourteenth day that fact, that the ancients were accustomed to pass cables, or strong ropes, from one side of the ship to the other, to keep the planks from starting by the action of the sea; which shews that the art of shipbuilding was then in a rude state. The rope was slipped under the prow, and passed along to any part of the keel which they pleased, and made fast to the deck. We have an illustration in Anson's Voyage Round the World; that great navigator, speaking of a Spanish man-of-war in a storm, says, they were obliged to throw overboard all the upper-deck guns, and to take six turns of the cable round the ship, to prevent her opening. The casting of anchors out of the stern is a practice not common in modern times, but it prevailed extensively among the ancients. Nor is this all; even now, large Egyptian ships, called Saïques, always carry their anchors at their stern, instead of the bows. We thus see, that things are constantly occurring to illustrate ancient usages, which, from their disuse, are supposed by many never to have existed. Ver. 30-44. Human nature is ever the same; occasionally, in modern times, ship's companies act a part equally selfish and cruel, providing for their own lives without regard to the preservation of their passengers. For the honour of British seamen, however, it must be confessed, that this is the exception, and a generous self-sacrificing heroism the rule. Paul, piety and inspiration apart, as ye have tarried and continued fasting, having taken nothing.

34 Wherefore I pray you to take some meat; ^afor this is for your health: ^afor there shall not an hair fall from the head of any of you.

35 And when he had thus spoken, he took bread, ^band gave thanks to God ^cin presence of them all; and when he had broken it, he began to eat.

36 Then were ^dthey all of good cheer, and they also took some meat.

37 And we were in all in the ship ^etwo hundred threescore and sixteen ^fsouls.

38 And when they had eaten enough, ^gthey lightened the ship, and cast out the wheat into the sea.

39 And when it was day, they knew not the land: but they discovered a certain creek with a shore, into the which they were minded, if it were possible, to thrust in the ship.

40 And when they had ^htaken up the anchors, they committed themselves unto the sea, and loosed the rudder-bands, ⁱand hoised up the main-sail to the wind, and made toward shore.

41 And falling into a place where two seas met, ^jthey ran the ship aground: and the forepart stuck fast, and remained unmoveable, but the hinder part was ^kbroken with the violence of the waves.

42 And ^lthe soldiers' counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out, and escape.

43 But the centurion, ^mwilling to save Paul, kept them from their purpose, and commanded that they which could swim should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land:

44 And the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it came to pass, ⁿthat they escaped all safe to land.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Paul is entertained by the barbarians. 8 He healed many in the island. 11 They depart towards Rome. 30 He preacheth there two years.

AND when they were escaped, then they knew that ^athe island was called Melita.

2 And the barbarous people ^bshewed us every circumstance shews, was a man of surprising quickness and penetration. The happy effects of this were seen on the present occasion; neither the centurion nor the soldiers perceived the grave fact to which he called their attention. This was one of the most appalling tempests upon record; but the presence of the apostle greatly contributed to cheer the hearts of the people amid the perils which surrounded them. For a fortnight they had received no regular meal, so that their abstinence, combined with their alarm and want of rest, had affected their health. The multitude on board, for a merchant ship, was very great. It deserves to be particularly remarked, that, notwithstanding the absoluteness with which the angel of the Lord had promised the preservation of all on board, means were to be connected with ends; therefore said Paul, "Except these men abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved." Thus it is with the purposes of God according to election: that ends predicted may be realised, appointed means must be employed.

no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold.

3 And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand.

4 And when ^athe barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, ^bNo doubt this man is a murderer, whom, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live.

5 And he shook off the beast into the fire, and ^cfelt no harm.

6 Howbeit they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: but, after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and ^dsaid that he was a god.

7 In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island, whose name was Publius; ^ewho received us, and lodged us three days courteously.

8 And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever, and of a bloody flux: to whom Paul entered in, and ^fprayed, and ^glaid his hands on him, ^hand healed him.

9 So, when this was done, ⁱothers also, which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed:

10 Who also honoured us with many ^jhonours; and when we departed, they laded us with such things as were necessary.

11 And after three months we departed in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle, whose sign was Castor and Pollux.

12 And landing at Syracuse, we tarried there three days.

13 And from thence we fetched a compass, and came to Rhegium: and after one day the south wind blew, and we came the next day to Puteoli;

14 Where ^kwe found brethren, and were desired to tarry with them seven days: and so we went toward Rome.

15 And from thence, ^lwhen the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us

Chap. XXVIII. 1-13. There were two islands called Melita, one in the Asiatic Gulf, and the other in the Mediterranean Sea; the latter is now called Malta. It was common with the Romans to deem every people "barbarians," who spoke a language with which they themselves were not acquainted. The viper is one of the most venomous of serpents; and hence its bite is peculiarly fatal. The natural conscience of men, then and there, as now and everywhere, taught them to connect certain events with crime. There was something even refined and acute in the remark, that Paul must be a murderer, whom, though he had escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffered not to live. Thus the human heart is a witness for God, that the wages of sin is death. But when they saw that the effect did not follow the cause, they readily concluded that he must be divine. The miracle was much fitted to awaken curiosity, and command attention to the events which were so soon to follow. Who does not see an especial Providence in the serious illness of the father of the governor, which as far as Appii Forum, and The Three Taverns; whom when Paul saw, ^ahe thanked God, and took courage.

16 And when we came to ^bRome, ^cthe centurion delivered the prisoners to the ^dcaptain of the guard: ^ebut Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him.

17 And it came to pass, that, after three days, Paul called the chief of the Jews together: and when they were come together, he said unto them, Men and brethren, though I have committed nothing against the people or customs of our fathers, yet was I delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans:

18 Who, when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me.

19 But when the Jews spake against it, ^fI was constrained to appeal unto Cesar; ^gnot that I had ought to accuse my nation of.

20 For ^hthis cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you: because that ⁱfor the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain.

21 And they said unto him, ^jWe neither received letters out of Judea concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came shewed or spake any harm of thee.

22 But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: ^kfor as concerning this sect, we know that every where it is spoken against.

a day, there came many to him into his lodging; to whom ^bhe expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, ^cboth out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening.

24 And ^dsome believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not.

25 And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, ^eWell spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers,

26 Saying, Go unto this people, and say, ^fHearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive:

27 For the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

28 Be it known therefore unto you, that ^gthe salvation of God is ^hsent unto the Gentiles, and that they will hear it.

29 And when he had said these words, the Jews departed, and had great reasoning among themselves.

30 And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, 31 ⁱPreaching the kingdom of God, ^jand teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him.

furnished Paul with an occasion to display the healing power with which his Lord had intrusted him? Such a cure on such a man produced an effect which nothing else could have brought to pass. The intelligence speedily spread throughout the island, when all who had diseases came, and were healed. Thus Paul's Master amply provided for comfort both to him and his fellow-passengers—nearly 300 men—for the lengthened period of three months. Ver. 14-31. These brethren were probably members of the Church at Rome, for the Gospel had already taken root in the city. Paul, once settled in his lodgings, called the chief of his countrymen together, that he might confer with them on the circumstances in which he was placed. The "Hope of Israel," is a touching expression to the ear of the Jew. Long had their fathers hoped and waited for the appearance of the Messiah, looking to him for the redress of all their grievances; and now, when he had come, with wicked hands they had crucified and slain him! We learn from ver. 21, that no steps had been taken by Paul's enemies to carry on the prosecution. Successively pronounced innocent by Lysias, Felix, Festus, and Agrippa, they might well despair of accomplishing their object. The conclusion of this malignant movement is not to be lightly passed over; it was a part of the Divine plan. It led to Paul's journey to the Imperial City; to his comfortable support and peaceful residence there, throughout the long space of two years, during which he continued to preach and teach the things which concerned the Lord Jesus, with all confidence, no man forbidding him. This was one of the most interesting and useful periods of the apostle's life, for although a prisoner, both his tongue and his pen were free. During his confinement, he addressed letters to the Galatians, the Ephesians, the Philippians, the Colossians, and the Hebrews, as well as to Philemon. How Paul came to be released there is no record. It is supposed, however, that this event took place in the year of our Lord 63; after which he proceeded to Jerusalem, and then to Ephesus, and other cities, returning to Rome by Troas, Philippi, and Corinth, in the year 64, when Nero set fire to Rome, charging his own crime on the Christians. It is generally believed that both Paul and Peter suffered death, the former being beheaded, and the latter crucified. It was not permitted by the law to crucify Paul, as he was a citizen; but Peter, as a Jew, suffered with that indignity.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANS.

Although this Epistle stands first in the New Testament, it was not first written. The position assigned to it, however, is due alike on account of the Church to which it was addressed, as planted in the first city on earth, and of its depth, fulness, completeness, and magnitude. It is a system of Theology, perfect in all its parts—an epitome of the glorious Gospel of the blessed God—a treasure sufficient to enrich the whole Gentile world.

Chap. I. 1-6. It was customary among the ancients to commence epistles by prefixing the name of the writer, with such designation or title as might belong to him. Paul judged himself as set apart from eternity for the service of the Gospel. He assumes that the Romans were fully acquainted with the Holy Scriptures, and their testimony to the Lord Jesus. The proper divinity of Christ is here set forth at the very commencement, together with his perfect manhood, and his descent from David. His Godhead was proved by the resurrection, which also confirmed his Divine mission. The end of preaching the Gospel is the salvation of men. The command to all who hear it to believe, is one of the special laws of Heaven, and hence it is called the "obedience of faith." To believe is to perform "the work of God," and to obtain eternal life. This obedience is at the foundation of all other obedience. Wherever this is, it will work by love, and prove itself true by sincere endeavours to keep the commandments of the Lord Jesus. Ver. 7-13. Believer, saint, and Christian, were synonymous terms in the language of the apostle, and ought to be such at the present hour. Peace is a term of most significant import both in the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Grace and peace are two of the most noticeable blessings of the Gospel. Thus Paul begins and ends all his epistles. All flesh need grace and peace, the latter flowing from the former. In his Epistles to Timothy and Titus, however, he combines with these mercy, shewing the special and extraordinary necessities of ministers of the Word. The mediation of Christ is thus brought prominently forward at the very outset of the epistle; thanks are rendered to God the Father for the favour shewn to the Romans through the Lord Jesus, the sole medium of the acceptance both of persons and of services. Every event of life is to be made the subject of prayer. In nothing, however insignificant to the carnal eye, are we independent of God, and sufficient for ourselves. Paul made his journey to Rome the theme of special supplication; his heart had long been set upon visiting the Queen of Cities; but something always occurred to hinder him; and now he prays that the Lord would make his path plain. Whether at rest or in motion, we require protection as well as guidance. It is here distinctly assumed that Paul had the power of conferring special gifts for the establishment of the churches, which do not appear yet to have been communicated to the Romans. Such an exercise of Divine power through the apostle was most materially calculated to strengthen the faith of the saints, and to further the conversion of the world. Ver. 14-17. Paul viewed his gifts, graces, and knowledge of the Gospel, not as a property, but as a trust, since the whole had been committed to him, not for his own sake or use, but as the gift of God to the Gentile nations. The Gospel of Christ was with the wise men of this world an object of contempt, which it might be supposed would render him ashamed of it in the Imperial City; but he was not so—it was his glory and joy. Its apparent meanness was lost in its real dignity. It was the only thing known amongst men through which the power of God was exerted so as to renovate the soul.

of God is manifest ⁶in them: for God hath shewed ⁷it unto them.

20 For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, ⁸even his eternal power and God-head; ⁹so that they are without excuse:

21 Because that, when they knew God, ¹⁰they glorified ¹¹him not as God, neither were thankful; ¹²but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened.

22 Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools,

23 And ¹³changed the glory of the incorruptible God into ¹⁴an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things.

24 Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness, through the lusts of their own hearts, ¹⁵to dishonour their own bodies between themselves:

25 Who ¹⁶changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served ¹⁷the creature ¹⁸more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen.

26 For this cause God ¹⁹gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature:

27 And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another: men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves ²⁰that recompence of their error which was meet.

ness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; ²⁶whisperers,

30 ²⁷Backbiters, ²⁸haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, ²⁹inventors of evil things, ³⁰disobedient to parents,

31 ³¹Without understanding, ³²covenant-breakers, ³³without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful:

32 Who, ³⁴knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but ³⁵have pleasure in them that do them.

CHAPTER II.

They that condemn sin in others, and yet sin, are inexcusable, whether Jews or Gentiles.

THEREFORE thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; ³⁶for thou that judgest doest the same things.

2 But we are sure that the ³⁷judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things.

3 And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, ³⁸that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?

4 Or despisest thou the ³⁹riches of his goodness, and ⁴⁰forbearance, and long-suffering; not knowing that the ⁴¹goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?

5 But, after thy hardness and impenitent heart, ⁴²treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and ⁴³revelation of the righteous judgment of God;

6 Who ⁴⁴will render to every man according to his deeds:

7 To them who, by ⁴⁵patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, and honour, ⁴⁶and immortality, ⁴⁷eternal life;

8 But unto them that are contentious,

Every particle of Scripture had in it a virtue not possessed by the aggregate wisdom of the world. It was instrumental of waking death into life, turning darkness into light, and making men new creatures. The world's wisdom was wholly ignorant both of the character of God and of man, and of everything connected with the righteousness of faith. The Gospel provides a twofold righteousness, meeting the necessities alike of Divine justice and of human guilt; through it God is just, even when justifying the ungodly. As this Gospel is necessary to all, so it is offered to all; and as the blessing is obtained through faith alone, the young and the old, the rich and the poor, the peasant and the philosopher, are placed on a level. A testimony is borne to Divine love in the gift of Christ, and his death on behalf of lost mankind; and sinners, in believing it with the heart, obtain righteousness, perfect and everlasting. Ver. 18-32. The portraiture here drawn of the Gentile world is alike revolting and overwhelming; for minuteness, depth, and fulness, it is such as could have been produced only by the Spirit of God, who alone knows what is in man. The apostle brings this awful indictment against the race of Adam in the face of the world, thereby challenging them to deny, if they can, the truth of his terrible charges! The statement of the inspired writer was sustained by the universal conscience, by general observation, and by all history. It is here shewn, that the heathen world once knew God, but without glorifying him; and that they were loaded with his benefits without acknowledging them! Continually departing from God, the darkness which rested on them became still deeper, issuing in a system of the most abominable idolatry. For their sin they were left to sink still lower, till the aggregate spirit of the world became one mass of corruption, bringing forth a harvest of iniquities, the very recital of which fills the soul with horror! Such are the moral maladies which the Gospel is intended to cure; and, through the power of God, it is able to heal and to restore the whole human race.

Chap. II. 1-10. The apostle here, with the utmost pungency, applies the subject to the hearts of the Romans, and, through them, to believers in every nation, and in every age. The balances in which men weigh their fellows, they ought first to use for themselves. None can be more inexcusable than those who condemn others for deeds which they themselves are daily doing. The general judgment will be governed by a general rule—that of love to God and to man. Not only ought the “terrors of the Lord to persuade men,” but “the riches of his goodness.” So long as the heart is susceptible of love and kindness, they will have more weight than authority and justice. Penalties have a power to crush the sinner—compassion alone can melt him. Men are, nevertheless, governed either by hope or fear, or by both blended, in various measures and proportions; and upon this principle the apostle here acts. The Gospel comes with accents of love and pity, and if these suffice to bring men to God, its object is accomplished; but if these fail, then justice must take its course, the voice of menace must be heard, and to all previous guilt must be added the crowning transgression of rejecting the 13 (For ²not the hearers of the law are just before God, ³but the doers of the law shall be justified.)

14 For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, ¹are a law unto themselves:

29 But he is a Jew which is one inwardly: and ³circumcision is that of the heart, ⁴in the spirit, and not in the letter; ⁵whose praise is not of men, but of God.

CHAPTER III.

1 The Jews' prerogative. 20 None justified by the law, but all by faith.

WHAT advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision?

2 Much every way: chiefly, ¹because

Saviour! The apostle is at great pains to set forth the equity of the Divine administration. The most perfect justice will pre-empt over the arrangements of the Last Day. Neither will good nor evil be overlooked. Men themselves, whether saved or lost, will acknowledge the rectitude of the Divine government. Ver. 11-24. Infidelity has brought charges of partiality against the Divine government, because of the peculiar favour shewn to the Jews. A complaint somewhat analogous is also made against the sovereignty of grace, whereby men are chosen from eternity, and predestinated to be conformed to the image of the Son of God; but there is no foundation for either. The Gentiles will be dealt with according to the light which they possess, and not that which they possess not. The Noahic Dispensation began with a knowledge of God in Christ sufficient for salvation. It is, therefore, a great mistake to look on the Gentile world as never having had a revelation. Had the light which Noah possessed been preserved by his children, and his children's children, onward, all nations might have come to the knowledge of the truth, and have thereby been saved. He to whom all things are known, will deal with this matter according to the principles of unerring justice. He will not gather where he has not sown, nor reap where he has not sowed; and the H. arthen, the Jews, and those Gentile nations who have received the Gospel, will all be dealt with according to their privileges, and the use they have made of them. Great importance attaches to ver. 15; the "law written in the heart" can never be wholly obliterated. The testimony of conscience is the peculiar property of the human spirit. It is impossible to say to what length sin may harden the heart, and blind the mind; but it may be doubted if there be any case in which conscience has been utterly silenced, and in which, under appropriate influences, it might not be again awakened, liberated, and made to speak for God. Ver. 25-29. The grand error of the Jews was their abuse of the ordinances of their religion. They confounded the form with the power; and diligently cultivated the one, to the utter neglect of the other. The apostle, therefore, here sets himself forth to correct this error, and to point them to the heart as the seat of all good and all evil. The distinction between the Jew inwardly and the Jew outwardly, is one of unspeakable importance. The whole passage, indeed, admits of the closest application to Christianity with its ordinances; for baptism has been by many abused to the same extent as circumcision. All such might be addressed in the following paraphrase:—"Baptism verily profiteth, if you obey the Gospel; but if you reject the Gospel, your baptism is made unbaptism. He is not a Christian that is one outwardly; neither is baptism that which is outward in the flesh: but he is a Christian who is one inwardly; and baptism is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God."

Chap. III. 1-9. Carnal men are backward to distinguish between the use and the abuse of blessings, and are offended when the gross abuse is not followed by the same happy consequences as the proper use: they expect the fruits of industry to follow idleness. The advantage of the Jew over the Gentile was every way great. Circumcision was the seal of the everlasting covenant—a thing unknown to those who had not heard of that rite. The Oracles of God were the source of all blessing, both for time and eternity. The possession of these raised Israel high above all the nations of the earth. These that unto them were committed the oracles of God.

3 For what ^{if} some did not believe? ^{shall} their unbelief make the faith of God without effect?

4 God forbid: yea, ^{let} God be true, ^{but} every man a liar; as it is written, ^{That} thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged.

5 But if our unrighteousness commend the righteousness of God, what shall we say? ^{Is} God unrighteous who taketh vengeance? (I speak as a man)

6 God forbid: ^{for} then how shall God judge the world?

7 For ^{if} the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie unto his glory; ^{why} yet am I also judged as a sinner?

8 And not rather, (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say,) Let us do evil, that good may come? whose damnation is just.

9 What then? ^{are} we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have before ^{proved} both Jews and Gentiles, ^{that} they are all under sin;

10 As it is written, ^{There} is none righteous, no, not one:

11 There is none that understandeth, ^{there} is none that seeketh after God.

12 They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

be stopped, ^{and} all the world may become ^{guilty} before God.

20 Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall ^{no} flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law ^{is} the knowledge of sin.

21 But now ^{the} righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets;

22 Even the righteousness of God ^{which} is by faith of Jesus Christ ^{unto} all and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference:

23 For ^{all} have sinned, and ^{come} short of the glory of God:

24 Being justified freely by his grace, ^{through} the redemption that is in Christ Jesus;

25 Whom God hath ^{set} forth to be a propitiation ^{through} faith in his blood, ^{to} declare his righteousness for the ^{remission} of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God;

26 To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness; ^{that} he might be just, ^{and} the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.

27 Where ^{is} boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay; ^{but} by the law of faith.

28 Therefore we conclude, that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.

29 Is he ^{the} God of the Jews only? is he not also of the Gentiles? Yea, of the Gentiles also:

30 Seeing it is ^{one} God which shall justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.

31 ^{Do} we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Abraham justified by faith, 10 before he was circumcised. 13 The promise is sure to all his spiritual seed. 18 The nature of that faith by which he was justified.

WHAT shall we then say that Abraham, our father as pertaining to the flesh, hath found?

2 For if Abraham ^{were} justified by Oracles were able to make men wise unto salvation, which could be affirmed of no production of the human mind. From the very first, there were not wanting those who represented the Gospel as hostile to morality. Such people, themselves void of experience of the power of the Gospel, apply to it their own dark understanding, at once setting aside the Holy Scriptures, and the lives of holy men. Ver. 10-19. However much the Jews might excel the Gentiles in point of knowledge, they were not a whit superior in point of character; and this identity arose from the essential unity of their nature. The circumstance of their descent from Abraham made no difference whatever between them and the rest of the world. Abel and Cain, the representatives of the two races of mankind, were originally partakers of a common nature. The difference which arose between them proceeded entirely from grace; and such was the fact with respect to the righteous in every age: they were all at one time the "children of wrath even as others." To convince the Jews of the truth of this representation, the apostle at once appeals to their own characters, which shew that they were in no degree better than the heathen world. Ver. 20-31. The conclusion, therefore, at which the apostle arrives concerning both Jew and Gentile is, that their mouth is stopped, and that the whole world stands guilty before God! The consequences of this state of things are as certain as they are fearful: by the deeds of the law no flesh can be justified. The law supplies nothing but a rule; by it is the knowledge of sin, not the means of deliverance. To meet this fearful exigency, therefore, is the object of the Gospel, which supplies righteousness without law—the righteousness of God by faith in Christ, unto all who believe whether Jew or Gentile. While all are without merit, and the means of acquiring any claim, the Gospel is adapted to meet their case, as it comes in the shape of a free gift. The blood of Christ provides for the righteousness of God in the remission of sin: he is just, and the justifier of him that believes in Jesus. Not the least wonderful accompaniment of this Gospel is the fact, that while it justifies men without the deeds of the law, and notwithstanding the transgression of it, by slaying the enmity of the heart, and implanting love in it, the law is established through that love, which is the very essence of obedience.

Chap. IV. 1-14. On the question of justification, it is works, he hath whereof to glory, ^bbut not before God.

3 For what saith the scripture? ^cAbraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness.

4 Now ^dto him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt.

5 But to him that worketh not, but ^ebelieveth on him that justifieth the ungodly, ^fhis faith is counted for righteousness.

6 Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God ^gimputeth righteousness without works,

7 Saying, ^hBlessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

8 Blessed is the man ⁱto whom the Lord will not impute sin.

9 ^j*Cometh* this blessedness then upon the circumcision ^konly, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness.

10 How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 And he received the sign of circumcision, ^la seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised: that he might be ^mthe father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; ⁿthat righteousness might be imputed unto them also:

12 And the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk ^oin the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised.

13 For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.

14 For if they which are of the law ^pbe heirs, faith is ^qmade void, and the promise made of none effect.

15 ^rBecause the law worketh wrath:

for where no law is, there is no transgression.

16 Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end ^cthe promise might be sure to all the seed: not to that only which is of the law, ^dbut to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all,

18 Who ^gagainst hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be.

19 And ^hbeing not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb:

20 He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; ⁱbut was strong in faith, giving glory to God;

21 And being fully persuaded, that what he had promised, ^jhe was able also to perform.

22 And therefore ^kit was imputed to him for righteousness.

24 But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, ^mif we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead;

25 Who was delivered for our offences, ⁿand was raised again for our justification.

CHAPTER V.

1 Being justified by faith, we have peace with God. 12 Sin and death came by Adam, 17 righteousness and life by Jesus Christ.

THEREFORE, ^abeing justified by faith, ^bwe have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ:

2 By ^cwhom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, ^dand rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

3 And not only ^eso, ^fbut we glory in tri-of the utmost importance to determine the exact position of Abraham. To shew that even he was not justified by works, but by faith, is a great point gained to the establishment of the doctrine; and this is done by shewing, that he was justified not by circumcision, but previous to it; and that circumcision, so far from being the ground of his justification, was merely the seal of the faith by which it was effected. Abraham, therefore, was saved by faith, and the object of the faith was precisely the same as the object of ours. This doctrine was fully recognised at a subsequent period by David, under the influence of inspiration. In declaring those blessed whose iniquities were forgiven, and whose sins were covered, and to whom the Lord did not impute transgressions, he sustained and illustrated the doctrine of a free justification through the blood of Christ, as shadowed forth by the Old Testament dispensation. Had justification been by works, there could be no grace in it; and if by grace, no works in it; it must be one or the other; it cannot be both. Ver. 15-25. Those who contend for justification, either in whole or in part, by the law, know not what they say, nor whereof they affirm, since the law worketh only wrath to every transgressor. As to those who were stung by the fiery serpent, nothing remained but to look to the serpent of Moses; so they who have broken the commandments, which are "holy, just, and good," have no other method of escape but by looking to Christ, who was delivered for their offences, and raised again for their justification. They who affect to believe that Christ died only as an example, and as a witness, would do well seriously to ponder the last of the foregoing verses. Although in one respect his death was an example, and in another a witness, its essential character was that of an atoning sacrifice. Without this there was no salvation for men; and the resurrection was necessary to prove the acceptance of his sacrifice in expiation of man's guilt. If Christ had not risen, men would still have been under condemnation; but as he rose according to the Scriptures, it proved the acceptance of his work, rendering him at the same time the first fruits of them that slept—the forerunner, the pattern, and the pledge of the resurrection of his people. Our High Priest, the Divine Antitype of the typical high priest of the Jews, having suffered in the outer court of this polluted world, has passed into the heavens, with his own blood, there to appear on behalf of his people, and to secure for them the continued application of the merits of his death, and the blessings of his redemption.

Chap. V. 1-10. The doctrine of justification by faith is here applied. It is the vital spring of true godliness, bulations also: 'knowing that tribulation worketh patience;

4 And patience, experience; and experience, hope:

5 And hope maketh not ashamed; 'because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us.

6 ^bFor when we were yet without strength, ¹in due time ¹Christ died for the ungodly.

7 For ¹scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for ¹a good man some would even dare to die.

8 But God commendeth his love toward us, ^min that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.

9 Much more then, ⁿbeing now justified by his blood, ^owe shall be saved from wrath through him.

10 For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; much more, being reconciled, ^pwe shall be saved by his life.

11 And not only so, but we also joy in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the ²atonement.

12 Wherefore, ^qas by one man sin entered into the world, ^rand death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, ^sfor that ^tall have sinned:

13 (For until the law sin was in the world: but sin is not imputed when there is no law.

14 Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, ^uwho is the figure of him that was to come.

15 But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many be dead; much more the grace of God, ^vand the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.

16 And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: ^wfor the judgment was by one to condemnation, ^xbut the free gift is of many offences unto justification.

17 ^yFor if ^zby one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive ^aabundance of grace, and of the gift of righteousness, ^bshall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.)

18 Therefore, as by ^cthe offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by ^dthe righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.

19 For ^eas by one man's disobedience many were made sinners; ^fso by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

20 Moreover, the law entered, that the offence might abound: ^gbut where sin abounded, grace did much more abound:

21 That ^has sin hath reigned unto death, even so might ⁱgrace reign through right-extending to everything that appertains to the Christian life and character. It is of the utmost importance to distinguish between justification and sanctification. This is the turning-point of life or death in the Church of God: according to Popery, sanctification precedes justification; according to the Scriptures, justification precedes sanctification. Justification in the widest sense is the acquittal of a person from all judicial charges; it is declaring him righteous according to law. It is a thing altogether external to his person, having nothing to do with his moral nature. Sanctification, on the contrary, is confined to his inner man—to the condition of his heart, with its principles and motives. In evangelical justification, the person is pronounced righteous, not because he is so in fact, but for the sake of another who had taken his place and borne the consequences of his transgression. He is not only purged of his sins, but accounted righteous as a mere act of grace, for the sake of the Lord Jesus Christ. In other words, the righteousness of Christ has been imputed to him. What the sinner first needs is just that which the Gospel first bestows—pardon of sin, and the imputation of righteousness. Peace, then, is the result of justification by faith, and reconciliation founded on atonement. This great deliverance is the source of Christian experience; the spirit rejoices in the hope of the glory of God, and is prepared to do and to suffer anything that may be required to the honour and glory of the Lord Jesus. By the love of God being "shed abroad" in the heart, is to be understood, not God's love to us, but our love to God. Love, as an affection, is not transferable; but love in another is capable of producing love in us. When the Holy Ghost enlightens the mind of the believer to see the love of God in Christ, and the wonderful things done and suffered by Christ for him, the result is an outburst of love in the soul, illustrating the Scripture, "We love him, because he first loved us." Where the love of God is powerfully felt, it constitutes one of the seals of the Spirit, since the Spirit of adoption belongs to none but those who have been chosen and called, justified and sanctified. Ver. 11-21. The state of salvation is everywhere set forth in Scripture as one of peace, joy, happiness, gratitude, and love through Jesus Christ, by whom the saints have received the atonement. The precise condition of man before God is a point of the highest moment. For Paul was reserved the honour of expounding the doctrine of those great and awful themes. According then to him, Adam was the Federal Head and Representative of his posterity; when he fell, all fell with him, and the consequences of that fall have extended to every one of them. There is no point of Revelation against which the pride of man has more uniformly rebelled; but that opposition does not alter the facts of the case. For 2500 years before the giving of the Law, sin existed, and all that were born of woman were visited with the punishment of death. If death was a penalty, then there must have been transgression; and if transgression, a law; and if God be just, all that suffer must have sinned. There is no avoiding the force of the apostolic argument. However vain philosophy may rise against it, the death of infants from the first till now is an incontestable proof of Original Sin. If death be a punishment, then they must have sinned; but they did not sin after the manner of Adam; and, therefore, the ground of their suffering must have been the imputation of his transgression. From Adam came sin and death; from Christ righteousness and life: all flesh have been involved in the wreck of the one, and all are invoked to share in the recovery of the other. With respect to infants, there is no difficulty; the Father of mercies will not be wanting in justice. As infants die in Adam without personal transgression, so they will live in Christ without personal righteousness—that is, they will have imputed to them the righteousness of God, and by the Eternal Spirit be prepared for glory. The view here set forth of the extent of the atonement is in harmony with the Gospels, and with the Acts of the Apostles. As through the fall of Adam, every soul of man has fallen, so the Lord Jesus gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time; and before he ascended the throne of his glory, he commanded his disciples to go into all the world, and preach eousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAPTER VI.

1 We must not live in sin, 12 nor let sin reign in us.
23 Death is the wages of sin.

WHAT shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?

2 God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

3 Know ye not, that so many of us as ^awere baptized into Jesus Christ ^awere baptized into his death?

4 Therefore ^bwe are buried with him by baptism into death; ^cthat like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.

5 ^dFor if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection:

6 Knowing this, ^ethat our old man is crucified with him, ^fthat the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.

7 For he that is dead is ^gfreed from sin.

8 ^hNow, if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him:

9 Knowing that Christ, being raised from the dead, dieth no more; ⁱdeath hath no more dominion over him.

10 For in that he died, ^jhe died unto sin once; but in that he liveth, ^khe liveth unto God.

11 Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to ^lbe dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

12 ^mLet not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof:

13 Neither yield ye your members as ⁿinstruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are ^oalive from the dead, and ^pyour members as instruments of righteousness unto God.

14 For ^qsin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but ^runder grace.

CHAPTER VII.

1 No law hath power over a man longer than he liveth.

7 The law is not sin, 13 nor is it the cause of death.

14 Sin still dwells in us.

KNOW ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth?

2 For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth: but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband.

3 So then if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law;

the Gospel to every creature. Not only are men invited to the "feast of fat things," they are enjoined to partake of it, under the solemn threat of punishment in the event of disobedience. God has commanded all men everywhere to repent and believe the Gospel.

Chap. VI. 1-13. Paul here directs the observation of the men of his own and future ages, to the doctrine of free grace, shewing that the tendencies of the Gospel are the very reverse of those which are charged upon it. Men, born of God, hate sin, and follow holiness with all their might: while the remains of sin still inhabit the souls of the faithful, they do not reign there; it is an enemy in fetters, condemned and waiting judgment. Every true child of God is free both from the guilt and the power of sin; the proof of his adoption is, that he does not "serve sin." The great business of the saint is carrying on war against it; and this he does in the joyful hope and assured confidence that, at last, he shall conquer through the Lord Jesus Christ; he has no fear as to the issue. Ver. 14-23. Saints are not beneath the law in the same sense as Adam was; it is not to them a condition of righteousness, but simply a rule of life. They are not without law to God, but under law to Christ, whom they revere from love and gratitude. Ver. 17 is clearly elliptical; something must have been left out. Nothing could be farther from the mind of the apostle, than to thank God that the Romans had been his enemies—the servants of sin, the children of the devil, the enemies of all good! Not so; the thanks must have been that, though they had been the servants of sin, they had obeyed the truth, and become the servants of righteousness. Sin never brought true happiness to the soul of any man; on the contrary, it is the source of misery and shame. The more wicked the more wretched. Perfect wickedness is hell; perfect holiness is heaven.

Chap. VII. 1-13. Christians died to the law by the body of Christ—that is, when he died they died with him as their substitute; they also rose with him from the dead, as his mystical body, and became married to him as the Bride, the Lamb's wife, that they might bring forth fruit unto God. The spirituality of the law, and its awful sanctions, rouse up the enmity of the so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.

4 Wherefore, my brethren, ^aye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, ^beven to him who is raised from the dead, ^cthat we should bring forth fruit unto God.

5 For when we were in the flesh, the ¹motions of sins, which were by the law, ^cdid work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death.

6 ^aBut now we are delivered from the law, ^bthat being dead wherein we were held; that we should ^cserve in newness of spirit, and not ^din the oldness of the letter.

7 What shall we say then? ^a'Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, ^b'I had not known sin but by the law: for I had not known ^clust, except the law had said, ^d'Thou shalt not covet.

8 But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, ^bwrought in me all manner of concupiscence. ^aFor without the law sin was dead.

9 ^aFor I was alive without the law once; ^bbut when the commandment came, ^csin revived, ^dand I died.

10 And the commandment, which was ^aordained to life, I found to be unto death.

11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, ^bdeceived me, and by it slew me.

12 Wherefore ^athe law is holy, and ^bthe commandment holy, and just, and good.

13 Was ^athen that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. But sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good; that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Who are free from condemnation. 5, 13 What harm cometh of the flesh, 6, 14 and what good of the Spirit, 17 and what of being God's children.

THERE is therefore now ^ano condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

2 ^bFor the law of the Spirit of life in human heart: its demands are held to be excessive, and such as trench on justice; and there is, therefore, a wish to bring it down to the level of man's disposition and character, that by keeping it, he may be enabled to put in a plea of merit to everlasting life. The commandment was ordained to life; and for this it was sufficient, to all who loved the Lord their God, with all their soul, and heart, and strength, and mind: but it must be unto death unto every transgressor; he that sins must die; the law is "holy, just, and good," and what is required is, not to abate its demands to meet the case of the fallen soul, but to renovate and raise it to the level of the law. Ver. 14-21. These verses have for ages been the subject of earnest controversy amongst Christian men—one class holding that they refer to persons in a state of nature, and the other in a state of grace. The former have viewed it as the expression of a soul convinced of sin, and seeking justification by the works of the law; but the great body of the wisest and the best Evangelical writers and commentators have contended that it is wholly inapplicable to such a condition, and can only be employed by a believer. Nor is this all; it is an exact delineation of the workings of the heart of the true Christian, as has been, in every possible way, attested by themselves, in every age and country. In proportion to the advanced state of the believer will be his sense of the evil of indwelling sin. He that has least of it will be most impatient under it, and most bemoan himself on its account: he will often seem to feel and speak as a man with little, if any, religion; whereas they who have most sin in them, least abhor it and cry out against it. The conflict which Paul describes is such as is known to none but those who are born again; and among them there is not one who is not deeply and painfully sensible of it. Even after the soul has been regenerated, and the principles of love and holiness implanted in it, something still remains to interfere with its free operation. This doctrine of a twofold nature it is very difficult, fully and clearly, to expound in words; but the fact is matter of experience. The soul that is really taught of God is as conscious of it as of anything that comes beneath the cognisance of human intelligence. Ver. 22-25. Surely the statement here set forth ought alone to settle the point as to the party speaking; no unconverted man can truthfully use such language. He does not "delight in the law of God;" he does not possess that which is meant by the "inward man;" he knows nothing of this twofold nature. As to the "law of his mind," which is warred against by the law of his members, he is unacquainted with that, and everything beyond mere natural conscience. Again, is it not clearly doing violence to both reason and Scripture to represent an unconverted man as thanking God for deliverance "through Jesus Christ our Lord?" The mind and the flesh, then, exist in the new nature; they are wholly irreconcilable, and will wage war against each other till death. Let the believer, therefore, make the language of the apostle his own, and go on mourning, rejoicing, trusting, fighting, and hoping, till the glorious hour when he shall be redeemed from the body of death!

Chap. VIII. 1-8. We now reach the heart of this wonderful epistle—the chief foundation of the consolation of the Church of God. To be "in Christ" is a Christ Jesus ^c hath made me free from the law of sin and death.

3 For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, ^d God sending his own Son ^e in the likeness of sinful flesh, and ^f for sin ^g condemned sin in the flesh;

4 That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

5 For they that are after the flesh do ^h mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things ⁱ of the Spirit.

6 ^j For ^k to be carnally minded is death; but ^l to be spiritually minded is ^m life and peace:

7 Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; ⁿ for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

8 So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

9 But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, ^o if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now, if any man have not ^p the Spirit of Christ, ^q he is none of his.

10 And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; ^r but the Spirit is ^s life because of righteousness.

11 But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, ^t he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies ^u by his Spirit that ^v dwelleth in you.

12 Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh.

13 For if ^w ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.

14 For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, ^{ba} they are the sons of God.

15 For ye have not received ^{bb} the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received ^{bc} the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, ^{bd} Abba, Father.

16 The ^{be} Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God:

17 And ^{bf} if children, then heirs; ^{bg} heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ: if so be that we suffer with ^{bh} him, that we may be also glorified together.

18 For I reckon, that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

19 For the ^{bi} earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.

20 For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope;

21 Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption ^{bj} into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

22 For we know that ^{bk} the whole creation groaneth and ^{bl} travaileth in pain together until now:

23 And not only ^{bm} they, but ourselves also, ^{bn} which have the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, ^{bo} to wit, ^{bp} the redemption of our body.

24 For we are saved by hope: ^{bq} but figurative expression, which implies the most intimate union. Every one that is a believer of the Gospel, and inhabited by the Spirit, is in Christ, and Christ in him. The walk of men determines their character. The wicked obey the flesh, the righteous the Spirit; the law of the spirit of his life is the Covenant of Grace, which imparts life here, and finds a title to eternal felicity in the world to come; the law was not weak in itself for the purposes of its original promulgation; it is in full power throughout the whole of the unfallen creation, and is everywhere equal to its object, and worthy of its Author; but it has no power to justify such as break it, or to purify the heart from which transgression springs. The law was never intended to impart grace, or to convey righteousness; to all who offend, even in one point, its voice is, "The soul that sins shall die." The fourth verse has given rise to considerable controversy—one class contending that it refers to sanctification, and another to justification. To apply the words to justification, however, seems doing violence to language. Ver. 9-15. We have now reached the very core of personal godliness. The indwelling of the Spirit, as a fact and a doctrine, is taught with a clearness which rivals the sunbeam. This is the great test of true godliness. Can anything more fully expose the folly and the danger of mere formality? Religion is thus shewn to be something more than a thing of the understanding, or even of the affections. The Eternal Spirit inhabits every soul whom he regenerates, and no portion of the Scripture so fully and so gloriously sets forth this great subject. The Spirit of adoption may be viewed as one of the seals of salvation. Where that is, everything is; that constitutes "the kingdom of God within" men. Ver. 16, 17. There has been much controversy amongst experimental writers touching the import of these words. They have been taken by one class to mean that "the Spirit's witness is the Spirit's work." He enlightens the mind, strengthens faith, and nourishes the spirit of prayer, filling the heart with love to the Father and the Son, thus attesting their adoption into the family of heaven. Another class carry the matter higher, and introduce quite another element. They hold that the words demand something of a direct communication with the soul, independently of anything done in them by the Spirit. They contend for an impulse, or impression, or voice, or something imparting to the soul an assurance that it is accepted, and adopted, and set apart for glory. In support of these views, multitudes have professed to be the subjects of such a communication; but that circumstance must not be taken for more than it is worth. Something must be allowed for ardour of temperament, and the effect of early instructions, forcibly and earnestly inculcated. Even the sincere and single-minded have often been known, in such things, to impose upon themselves, and bear testimony to others, which could not stand examination. It must, however, be allowed that extraordinary men, placed in extraordinary circumstances, by which they were required either to do or to suffer great things for the Lord Jesus, may have had some such communication. Such have actually laid claim to it, and it is not easy to see how they can reasonably be contradicted. Extraordinary sufferings call for extraordinary succours. The sight of the Lord Jesus to Stephen on the right hand of God alone suffices to establish the principle of special discoveries under particular emergencies. Between the highest and the lowest point on the scale of extraordinary witness—that which is just one degree beyond the ordinary witness—the distance may be great, but the principle is one. Ver. 18-25. A degree of darkness rests on this sublime passage, which it is perhaps impossible, in the present state of our knowledge, wholly to dissipate. The result hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?

25 But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought; ^{but} the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.

27 And he that searcheth the hearts ^{knoweth} what is the mind of the Spirit, ^{because} ^{he} maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God.

28 And we know that all things work together for good to ^{them} that love God, to them who are ^{the} called according to his purpose.

29 For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren.

30 Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

31 What shall we then say to these things? ^{If} God be for us, who can be against us?

32 He ^{that} spared not his own Son, but ^{delivered} him up for us all, ^{how} shall he not with him also freely give us all things?

33 Who ^{shall} lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? ^{It is} God that justifieth;

34 Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, ^{who} also maketh intercession for us.

35 Who ^{shall} separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?

CHAPTER IX.

¹ Paul's sorrow for the Jews. ⁷ All Abraham's seed were not the children of the promise. ²⁵ The calling of the Gentiles, and rejection of the Jews.

I SAY the truth in Christ, I lie not, ^{my} conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost, ² That I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart.

³ For I could wish that myself ^{were} ^{accursed} from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh:

⁴ Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the ² covenants, and the giving of the law, and ^{the} service of God, and the ⁴ promises;

⁵ Whose are the fathers, and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, ^{who} is over all, God ^{blessed} for ever. Amen.

⁶ Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect. For they are not all Israel which are of Israel:

⁷ Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but, ^{In} Isaac shall thy seed be called; has been an extraordinary amount of controversy, with no satisfactory result. Scarcely two expositors have wholly agreed touching its import. Ver. 26-28. We have here another most important view of the office of the Holy Spirit. His intercession must not be confounded with that of the Lord Jesus; Jesus works without his people—the Holy Spirit within them, strengthening and guiding them in their devotions. He helps their infirmities, excites their desires, and on extraordinary occasions elevates the soul to an agony of desire that cannot be uttered. Such occasions are few and far between, but they are not the less real. This is the source of the inwrought prayer of the righteous man that availeth much. Such were the prayers of Abraham, Moses, David, Daniel, Paul, and the Messiah himself. Ver. 29, 30. As furnishing ground for controversial discussion, the first place amongst the Scriptures of the New Testament is due to these verses. Men the most distinguished for talents and learning have laboured, as for life, to divest the passage of its obvious import, and make it the language of a system. The words themselves are so clear, that it seems strange that candid and earnest inquirers could miss it. It is purely a question of language, which may be safely left to a mere heathen scholar—thoroughly acquainted with the Greek language, but wholly ignorant of eternity—to set forth its meaning. The parties foreknown were loved, chosen, and predestinated to be conformed to the image of the Lord Jesus from eternity. The object of this foreknowledge is not faith, good works, or compliance with the Gospel call, but the persons them- selves, wholly irrespective of anything to be done by them. Foreknowledge precedes predestination, from which flows salvation, and everything therewith connected. All the called of God are thus foreknown; they have been the objects of eternal love, which is the sole ground of their predestination, calling, justification, sanctification, and glory. Nothing short of this will adequately explain the apostle's language. So far from this electing love and predestinating purpose militating against personal holiness, it is its greatest guarantee. That holiness is the only proof of election; it is only by this that Christians can make their "calling and election" sure. "Effectual calling" is the work of the Holy Ghost: it never stands alone; it is the middle link in the chain of salvation. It proves election, and foreshadows glory. Ver. 31-39. These verses are the application of the doctrine, and are incomparably the most cheering, animating, and invigorating portion of Inspiration. They exhibit the blessings of the Gospel in all their freeness, fullness, certainty, and propriety.

Chap. IX. 1-13. Paul, on becoming a Christian, was deemed the enemy of his country, and an apostate from the religion of his forefathers. His alleged offence was greatly aggravated by the position he occupied as the Apostle of the Gentiles, which was considered satisfactory proof of the crimes with which he was charged. On the present occasion, Paul, in a manner the most solemn, not only disavows hostility and indifference, but proclaims his unutterable affection for his people. There mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory,

24 Even us, ^bwhom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles?

25 As he saith also in Osee, I will call them my people, which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved.

26 And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; ^cthere shall they be called the children of the living God.

27 Esaias also crieth concerning Israel, Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, ^da remnant shall be saved:

28 For he will finish the ^ework, and cut it short in righteousness; because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth.

29 And as Esaias said before, ^f'Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodom, and been made like unto Gomorrha.

30 What shall we say then? That the Gentiles, which followed not after righteousness, have attained to righteousness, ^geven the righteousness which is of faith:

31 But Israel, ^h'which followed after the law of righteousness, ⁱhath not attained to the law of righteousness.

32 Wherefore? ^j'Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law: for they stumbled at that stumbling-stone;

33 As it is written, Behold I lay in Sion a stumbling-stone and rock of offence: ^kand whosoever believeth on him shall not be ^lashamed.

CHAPTER X.

1 The difference of the righteousness of the law, and that of faith. 11 No believer shall be confounded, whether Jew or Gentile.

BRETHREN, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.

2 For I bear them record, ^m'that they is some difficulty in ascertaining the precise import of his language; but it was, at any rate, and in the lowest view, the strongest method of asseverating that was known to the Jewish people. He is careful to enumerate their peculiar and extraordinary privileges, which shewed that he was by no means indifferent to the distinction which had so long attended them. This circumstance enhanced the interest he took in them; since the abuse of blessings so great and numerous materially deepened their guilt, and added to their condemnation. The apostle now gently insinuates the doctrine of Divine sovereignty, of which he presents an illustration which his countrymen were quite familiar with. It is dangerous to base a doctrine on an idiom of speech: love and hatred are not simply contrasted, but positive ideas; but such was not the fact in regard to Jacob and Esau. Both were favoured, although not to the same extent; and the Divine hate towards Esau simply signified a less degree of favour. Esau, while left to his own choice, was nevertheless laden with sublimary goodness; he received a large inheritance, and his posterity, for many ages, were a prosperous nation. Ver. 14-33. The facts concerning those brothers were indisputable; and it only remained to shew, that the Most High, in thus dealing with them, did no unrighteousness. As a Sovereign, he is beyond the control of the creature; and as Judge of all the earth, there is no unrighteousness in him. The Most High may select the subjects of his own compassion; and where merit attaches to none, even such as are passed by have no ground of complaint. Such is human nature, that there will be neither willing nor running till the Spirit of God begins to deal with the soul. The case of Pharaoh supplies a striking illustration. Great patience was shewn to the royal enemy of Israel, and despiser of God. But he was left to harden himself in enmity, and to multiply rebellion till his cup was full, and his conduct rendered necessary his destruction, in which the power of the Lord was shewn in a manner the most wonderful, and his name declared throughout all the earth. The compassion of the Lord is positive; the hardening negative, simply signifying the leaving of men to themselves for destruction. Nothing tends less to edification than disputes about the awful subject set forth in these verses; they are, happily, not necessary to the conversion of men, and but remotely connected with their sanctification; all that belongs either to hope or holiness, is so clear and simple that a child may comprehend it. The deep things of God are have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.

3 For they, being ignorant of ^bGod's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God.

4 For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

5 For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, "That the man which doeth those things shall live by them."

6 But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above.)

7 Or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.)

8 But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith which we preach;

9 "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

10 "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

11 For the scripture saith, ^bWhosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.

12 For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same ¹Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.

13 For ^kwhosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

14 How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?

21 But to Israel he saith, ^aAll day long I have stretched forth my hands unto ^aa disobedient and gainsaying people.

CHAPTER XI.

¹ God hath not cast off all Israel. ⁷ Some were elected, though the rest were blinded. ¹⁷ The Gentiles may not boast over them.

I SAY then, "Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. ^bFor I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin."

2 God hath not cast away his people ^cwhich he foreknew. Wot ye not what the scripture saith ¹of Elias? ^dhow he maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying,

3 "Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and ^ddigged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life."

4 But what saith the answer of God unto him? ^eI have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of ^bBaal.

not for babes in grace, children, or even young men; the number of the fathers is not great who are competent to deal with them. To human nature grace is offensive, but when to grace sovereignty is added, the offence becomes much increased. It will, however, be the wisdom of the faithful to hold fast by first principles, and to remember that his business is rather to grow up into the Divine image, than to make discoveries in matters of doubtful disputation.

Chap. X. 1-13. Paul's solicitude for his countrymen was not a passing emotion; he was full of desire, which sought relief in prayer. Having set before them the doctrines of grace and sovereignty, he proceeds to draw them to the Cross. He grants that they have zeal in the things of God, which, however, was of no avail for the absence of the knowledge of Christ. He cuts up the entire system of false hope by the declaration, that "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness," which it was impossible to derive from the law. In the one case it arose from works, in the other from faith: works required a perfect nature; faith was adapted to the fallen condition of humanity. How simple the Gospel of the apostle compared with the system espoused by his self-righteous countrymen! "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." This passing from death unto life may be the act of a moment, and the most worthless of Adam's race may at one bound be elevated to the fellowship of the saints. Ver. 14-21. The connexion between faith and its object is clearly set forth in these verses. Faith is the belief of the truth, and not a mere impulse, or persuasion, or affection; it is the belief of something which is equally true, whether man believe it or not, and which they do not alter by their faith, although that faith will completely renovate them. The duty of the Church of Christ to the perishing heathen around them, as well as in distant lands, is here very strikingly set forth; and those that desire the salvation of their fellow-creatures, ought to exert themselves to the utmost to bring them into contact with the truth, since "faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." This fact ought to be ever present to the minds of preachers, teachers, and the people of God generally. It has been too much the custom with multitudes to pray for the conversion of individuals and classes at home, and of the heathen abroad, while neglecting every means of bringing the truth to their ears! Such prayers are presumption, and can be productive of little good. Preaching, teaching, the circulation of tracts and Bibles, and prayers and intercessions, ought to be blended, in the assured confidence that they will be attended by the Divine blessing. Fervent prayer is the true atmosphere of evangelical labour.

Chap. XI. 1-10. Fired with the spirit of devout patriotism, the apostle here proceeds to comfort his countrymen, by shewing that, notwithstanding their 5 Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace.

6 And ¹if by grace, then is it no more of works; otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace; otherwise work is no more work.

7 What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; ²but the election hath obtained it, ³and the rest were ⁴blinded

8 (According as it is written, ⁵God hath given them the spirit of ⁶slumber, ⁷eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear) ⁸unto this day.

9 And ⁹David saith, Let ¹⁰their table be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumblingblock, and ¹¹a recompence unto them:

10 Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see, ¹²and bow down their back away.

11 I say then, Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy.

12 Now, if the fall of them be ¹³the riches of the world, and the ¹⁴diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more ¹⁵their fulness?

13 For I speak to you Gentiles, inasmuch as I am ¹⁶the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office:

14 If ¹⁷by any means I may ¹⁸provoke to emulation them which are ¹⁹my flesh, and ²⁰might save some of them.

15 For if the casting away of them be ²¹the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, ²²but life from the dead?

16 For ²³if the first-fruit be holy, the lump is also ²⁴holy; ²⁵and if the root be holy, so are the branches.

17 And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive-tree, wert grafted in ²⁶among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive-tree;

18 ²⁷Boast not against the branches:

manifest shortcomings and grievous transgressions, yet the covenant made with Abraham would be fulfilled. He exults in the thought that the gifts and calling of God are without repentance, and that the purposes of his sovereign mercy will not fail of accomplishment. The same principles which he has been applying to the elect of God generally, and which gave his countrymen so much offence, are here used to comfort their hearts, to inspire their hopes, and maintain the doctrine of the perpetuity of the Divine favour towards them. Israel, through the blindness of their minds, and the pride of their hearts, had not submitted to the righteousness of God, and had, therefore, failed of obtaining the blessings bestowed by the true Messiah, as they vainly looked for a temporal deliverer. To blind, as the term is here used, signifies simply the state of the heart of the parties referred to, without any external action being brought to bear upon them, to make or keep them what they are. Ver. 11-32. The Jews had not fallen beyond the possibility of recovery, though after their refusal to receive the Gospel, it pleased God to send it to the Gentiles, where the Divine Spirit made it efficacious to the con-but if thou boast, ⁶⁰thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.

19 Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, ⁶¹that I might be grafted in.

20 ⁶²Well; ⁶³because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded, but fear:

21 For ⁶⁴if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.

22 Behold ⁶⁵therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.

23 And they also, ⁶⁶if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graft them in again.

24 For if ⁶⁷thou wert cut out of the olive-tree, which is wild by nature, and wert grafted contrary to nature into a good olive-tree; how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive-tree?

25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, (lest ye should be wise in your own conceits,) ⁶⁸that ⁶⁹blindness in part is happened to Israel, ⁷⁰until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.

26 And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written, ⁷¹There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, ⁷²and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob:

27 For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.

28 As concerning the gospel, ⁷³*they are* enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election, ⁷⁴*they are* beloved for the fathers' sakes.

29 For ⁷⁵the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

30 For ⁷⁶as ye in times past have not believed God, yet have now ⁷⁷obtained mercy through their unbelief;

31 Even so have these also now not ⁷⁸believed, that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy.

32 For ⁷⁹God hath ⁸⁰concluded them all in unbelief, ⁸¹that he might have mercy upon all.

version of multitudes. But this rejection of Israel was only for a season; they will be restored to the favour which they have forfeited, and again made the subjects of tender mercy and loving-kindness. The Jews, without knowing it, materially contributed to the spread of the gospel. Their very persecution added to the energy and the activity of the Apostles and Evangelists, and thus led them to cover a much more extended space than they otherwise might have done. At the appointed time the outcasts will return, Jew and Gentile forming one Church, and rejoicing in the common salvation. The application of the facts is peculiarly solemn and awakening. Goodness and severity are both impressively exemplified. The condition of the Jews supplies a fearful warning to the Gentiles, whom it behoves to remember that, while the Jews fall through unbelief, they themselves stand by faith. The temper, therefore, which becomes them is not self-confidence, but fear, and a steadfast looking to the Lord for preserving grace. Ver. 33-36. The close here presented is worthy of the sublime matters which have gone before; the breast of the apostle was filled with astonishment, which expressed itself in ador-

I BESEECH you therefore, brethren, ^aby the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, ^aacceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

2 And ^abe not conformed to this world; but ^abe ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may ^aprove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Of duties to magistrates. 8 Love is the fulfilling of the law. 11 Against gluttony, drunkenness, and the works of darkness.

LET every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For ^athere is no power but of God: the powers that be are ^aordained of God.

2 Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ^aordinance of God;

ing reverence. The creature is nothing—the Creator all and in all. His wisdom is as incomprehensible as his eternity; although his ways are past finding out, yet enough can be discovered to fill the hearts of his children with love and confidence, hope and joy.

Chap. XII. 1-5. The apostle had not yet been at Rome. The fulness of his heart gives utterance to language pervaded by a tone not merely of personal affection and intimate acquaintance, but almost a paternal regard. He urges on them, by motives the most overwhelming, entire consecration of person and property to the Lord Jesus. The allusion is, doubtless, to the legal sacrifice of beasts and birds, the antitypes of which are those spiritual sacrifices which the faithful in Christ Jesus were then to offer. This worldly nonconformity urged by the apostle, extends to everything in spirit, speech, and behaviour, and all that makes up social life. By the "good, acceptable, and perfect will of God," is to be understood the moral purposes of Christianity, and the beauty and excellence of which is best understood by the practical exemplification of it. Pride, which led to the fall of man, still continues to be the principal cause of mischief, misery, and ruin. In the renewed heart it often makes its appearance, deforming the deportments even of those that have the root of the matter in them, afflicting families and distracting churches. This is, therefore, one of those things to be steadfastly resisted, and to the uttermost mortified, since it is pre-eminently at variance with the mind of the Gospel, and a wonderful contrast to the mind of Christ, the pattern of the new creature. Ver. 6-15. The "proportion of faith" signifies its analogy—that is, the harmony of all its parts, so that one part agrees with another, each rendering to the other mutual support, and presenting one symmetrical whole. These verses shew that spirit and manner are great considerations in religion. It is not enough to do the right thing in the wrong spirit. As the Gospel presents a glorious harmony of truth and love, so love and truth ought to characterise all the affairs of the Church and all the actions of individuals. In the days of the apostles, persecution rendered sympathy and succour, in all possible ways, necessary; and the duty is, therefore, urged by the apostle. Ver. 16-21. This exhortation is necessary to all, but especially to the young and inexperienced, on whose hearts it ought to be deeply engraven. Aiming at high things has prompted to deeds which have brought disgrace and ruin upon many who entered life with fair prospects. They who know anything of society, have not far to look for illustrations of the scripture, that "a haughty spirit cometh before a fall, and pride before destruction."

Chap. XIII. 1-7. Loyalty to established authority is and they that resist shall ^creceive to themselves damnation.

3 For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. ^aWilt thou then not be afraid of the power? Do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

4 For ^ehe is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, ^aa revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

5 Wherefore ^{ye} must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for ^cconscience sake.

6 For, for this cause ^bpay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

7 Render ^ttherefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; ^afear to whom fear; ^hhonour to whom honour.

8 ^mOwe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

9 ⁿFor this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not ^ccovet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt ^plove thy neighbour as thyself.

10 Love ^qworketh no ill to his neighbour; therefore ⁱlove is the fulfilling of the law.

11 And that, knowing the time, that now ^{it} is high time to awake out of sleep: ^rfor now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

12 The ⁿnight is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore ^{cast} off the works of darkness, and let us ^{put} on the armour of light.

13 Let us walk ^{honestly}, as in the day; not in ^{rioting} and drunkenness, not in ^{chambering} and wantonness, not in ^{strife} and envying:

14 But ^{put} ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof.

CHAPTER XIV.

3 Men may not despise or condemn one another for things indifferent; 13 but take heed of giving offence in them.

HIM that is ^aweak in the faith receive ye, ^bbut ¹not to doubtful disputations.

2 For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs.

3 Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth: ^cfor God hath received him.

4 ^dWho art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth; yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand.

5 One man ^eesteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike. ^fLet every man be fully ^gpersuaded in his own mind.

6 He that ^hregardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, ⁱfor he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

7 For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

8 For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, ^jwe die unto the Lord: ^kwhether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

9 For to this end ^lChrist both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be ^mLord both of the dead and living.

10 But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? ⁿfor we shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ.

11 For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.

12 So then ^oevery one of us shall give account of himself to God.

13 Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock, or an occasion to fall, in his brother's way.

a fixed principle in Christian morality. The apostle does not here take upon him to determine the divine right of any one system, but enjoins submission to the ruling powers in every place, and in every period. The benefits even of the worst government are still great, and infinitely better than none, which necessarily involves confusion, anarchy, rapine, and desolation. "Damnation" is an expression here, as elsewhere in our translation, which no longer signifies the idea which attached to it when the Bible was translated. It meant then simply loss or punishment, whereas now it is generally restricted to perdition, everlasting punishment, which is wholly at variance with the original import of the language. The same remark applies to 1 Cor. xi. 29, where the reference is solely and exclusively to the paternal chastisement of erring children, with a view to their deliverance from final ruin. Rulers ought to be everywhere the dispensers of justice, and as such, representatives of Heaven. Ver. 8-10. The apostle does not here mean to prohibit the contraction of debts in social life, which, in a civilised state, and especially in a commercial country, is wholly impossible; but to enforce the payment of all legal demands, and a conscientious abstinence from contracting obligations without reasonable means of discharging them. Where love is present, and reigning in power, it will both set everything right, and keep it so. The man in whom that Divine affection dwells, will not only do his neighbours no evil, but all possible good. Ver. 11-14. The apostle here rises into great solemnity, reminding the believers that the night of toil, trial, danger, and suffering, was far spent, and the day of peace, rest, joy, and glory, at hand. Only a brief space remained, when they would finish their course with joy, which ought to lead them to increased watchfulness, and entire consecration. How forcible the exhortation, and how striking its close—"Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ!" That done, all is done; and the believer will be in a state of constant preparedness to meet his Lord.

Chap. XIV. 1-15. The injunction to "receive him that is weak in the faith," may refer either to the acknowledgment of him as a true disciple or child of God, or his admission to the fellowship of the Church. As he is not competent to deal with the deep things of the 14 I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing ¹unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean.

15 But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not ²charitably. ³Destroy not him with thy meat for whom Christ died.

16 Let not then your good be evil spoken of:

17 For the ⁴kingdom of God is not meat and drink; ⁵but righteousness, and ⁶peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

18 For he that ⁷in these things serveth Christ ⁸is acceptable to God, and approved of men.

19 Let us therefore ⁹follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.

20 ¹⁰For meat destroy not the work of God. ¹¹All things indeed are pure; but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.

21 It is ¹²good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing ¹³whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak.

22 Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth.

23 And he that ¹⁴doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

2 Let every one of us please his neighbour for his good to edification.

3 For even ¹Christ pleased not himself; but, as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.

4 For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning; that we, through patience and comfort of the scriptures, might have hope.

5 Now ²the God of patience and ³consolation grant you to be like minded one toward another, ⁴according to Christ Jesus;

6 That ⁵ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even ⁶the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Wherefore receive ye one another, ⁸as Christ also received us, to the glory of God.

8 Now I say, that ⁹Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision ¹⁰for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers:

9 And ¹¹that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.

10 And again he saith, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

11 And again, ¹²Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him, all ye people.

12 And again Esaias saith, ¹³There shall be a root of Jesse, ¹⁴and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; ¹⁵in him shall the Gentiles trust.

13 Now ¹⁶the God of hope ¹⁷fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.

Gospel, he must be treated as a babe, requiring "milk, and not strong meat," and therefore not to be entangled with matters of doubtful disputation. The subsequent verses are intended to illustrate the principle here laid down, and to point out the necessity of walking in love, in order to the maintenance of Church harmony, and the promotion of individual edification. The injunction not to "destroy him with meat for whom Christ died," has been severely controverted. The Arminian school has fixed on the text, as proof positive that men may perish for whom Christ died; but this is to pervert the obvious meaning of the apostolic language. The children of God are beyond the possibility of destruction even by the powers of darkness, and not left to the mercy of their erring fellow-men. Still less have they to fear from brethren in the Lord, subjects of the same grace, and heirs of the same glory. It is, moreover, irrational to suppose that everlasting destruction should turn on eating things indifferent, or be brought about by an offence, either given or taken, concerning such matters. They whom the Father has given to Christ, will never perish, nor shall any be able to pluck them out of his hand. Infinite wisdom, combined with infinite power, suffices for their preservation to his kingdom and glory. The language, therefore, can mean no more than that the strong brother is to do nothing to injure the weak, or in any way to render him unhappy. If Christ so loved the weak as to die for him, surely it is not too much that the strong should bear with his weakness, and submit to some self-denial for his welfare and comfort. Ver. 16-23. "The kingdom of God" is an expression strongly significant of the power of truth and grace in the hearts of the saints. It is essentially an affair, not of rites, ceremonies, and externals, of whatever character, but of the heart. "The kingdom of God is within you," is language expressive of the great work which is wrought by the Spirit, and of his indwelling presence in every heart thus prepared by his own hand. "To edify," is an expression signifying to build up a house, and thus, by a beautiful figure, the Church of God is represented as a great temple erected for his worship. By "destroying the work of God," is to be understood breaking up the harmony of the Church, chilling love, and introducing a spirit of division and disorder which nothing of an external and subordinate character can warrant. Men highly advanced in spiritual attainments, ought to be grateful for their distinguished position, and to make the most of it for the advancement of the common cause. Self-approval, when the mind is enlightened and the heart sincere, is among the conditions of personal happiness. The language of the last verse has been sometimes misunderstood, and a source of affliction to the people of God. The import of it is simply, that if a man doubt the propriety of pursuing a given course, and yet do it, his conscience condemns him. Whatever he does not believe it safe to do, it is a sin to attempt.

Chap. XV. 1-12. Paul now applies the foregoing argument touching the duty of mutual forbearance. The exemplification of the lesson here given would do more than anything besides to render the Gospel its own witness. Tested by its fruits, its Divine origin would be indisputable. When believers shall become like-minded—when individuals, families, and churches shall be types of the heavenly felicity—the love of God in them will then be illustrated, and in a measure perfected. Oneness of mind will, of course, lead to oneness of mouth, and the harmonious result will glorify God. Ver. 13-16.

goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another.

15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, 'because of the grace that is given to me of God,

16 That "I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, 'ministering the gospel of God, that 'the 'offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, 'being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.

17 I have therefore 'whereof I may glory through Jesus Christ in those things which pertain to God.

18 For I will not dare to speak of any of those things 'which Christ hath not wrought by me, 'to make the Gentiles obedient, by word and deed, 19 Through mighty signs and wonders, 'by the power of the Spirit of God; so that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have 'fully preached the gospel of Christ.

20 Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation:

21 But, as it is written, To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand.

22 For which cause also I have been 'much hindered from coming to you.

23 But now having no more place in these parts, and having a great desire these many years to come unto you;

24 Whosoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you: for I trust to see you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled 'with your company.

25 But now I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints.

26 For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 The apostle commends Phoebe to the Christians at Rome.

17 He warns them against those who caused divisions.

25 He concludes with prayers for them, and ascriptions of glory to God.

I COMMEND unto you Phoebe, our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at 'Cenchrea;

2 That 'ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you: for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also.

3 Greet 'Priscilla and Aquila 'my helpers in Christ Jesus;

4 (Who have for my life laid down their own necks: unto whom not only I give thanks, but 'also all the churches of the Gentiles:)

5 Likewise greet 'the church that is in their house. Salute 'my well-beloved Epenetus, 'who is the first-fruits of 'Achaia unto Christ.

What depth and compass mark this prayer! Nothing can exceed the force and beauty of the language. A people "filled with joy and peace in believing," and abounding in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost, present the climax of Christian experience. The blessings of adoption are here realised to the fullest extent. Paul formed the loftiest conception of his office as the Apostle of the Gentiles. His heart fills to overflowing as he recites the prediction which had gone before concerning their admission to the blessings of the Gospel. The view set forth in ver. 16 is peculiarly grand. This great globe constitutes an altar on which the entire Gentile world is to be offered up, sanctified by the Holy Ghost, and accepted through the Lord Jesus. Ver. 17-33. Paul but seldom refers to his own gifts, or the miraculous powers with which he was endowed; but when he does so, it is in terms which represent their greatness. He here very distinctly intimates that his ministry among the Gentiles was attended with "mighty signs and wonders" by the power of the Spirit of God. The probability seems to be, that everywhere these, more or less, accompanied his abundant ministrations. So accustomed was he to his Master's presence, and to the display of His holy arm, that he intimates his entire confidence of coming to Rome in the "fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ." This fulness of blessing clearly implied the overpowering display of those gifts by which the divinity of his mission was demonstrated. But notwithstanding these blessings, in their abundance and perpetuity, the apostle in no case neglected the use of appointed means to accomplish desired ends; in addition to his own prayers, he implores those of the Roman Christians, in terms the most emphatic conceivable. The more that pastors, teachers, officers, and churches are imbued with this spirit, the more will the Gospel have free course and be glorified.

Chap. XVI. 1-15. The duties of Christianity, throughout the Epistles, often come forth incidentally: the case of Phoebe supplies an illustration. She had occasion to visit Rome, and the apostle commends her to the especial notice, not of an individual, but of the Church at large, enjoining them to assist her in whatever business she might require their good offices, inasmuch as she had been a succourer of many, and of himself also. The fulfilment of the injunction realised the promise of the Saviour, that with what measure men mete, it shall be meted to them again. She had been a steadfast and munificent friend to the Church, and according as she had sowed she was now to reap. We are further taught here, that every opportunity should be taken of practically acknowledging the services of benefactors to the cause of Christ. By the term "servant," it has been supposed that she sustained the office of deaconess, which was not unknown in early times. Their business was to baptize, to teach female catechumens, to visit the sick sisterhood, to administer comfort to martyrs, and perform other services suitable to their sex. The gratitude of Paul breaks out on every suitable occasion. The love and fidelity of Priscilla and Aquila were tenderly remembered by him; and as they were now at Rome, he singles them out from all others for the first place in his salutation. They appear to have been ready to sacrifice their own lives to save his—the highest proof they could give of love to the Lord and his cause. Narcissus was a person of distinction at Rome, of whom much is recorded in history to his disadvantage, but yet even in his family there were believers. Ver. 16-27. In early times, the “kiss” was the general mode of salutation among friends, expressive of regard and brotherly kindness, and therefore the Christians used it in their public assemblies, as well as in their occasional meetings. It appears to have been to them what the shake of the hand is in modern times. It is still, indeed, common in some countries. Amongst the earlier Christians, it is, however, to be understood, that the practice was not promiscuous. The men saluted the men, and the women only their own sex. Their separate place, indeed, in the synagogue, or other edifices, rendered this, propriety apart, a matter of course. The instruction of the apostle touching “divisions and offences,” was of the utmost moment; and seeing that he was wholly a stranger to the Romans, no offence could be taken on the score of personality. There are few portions of Scripture more entitled to serious consideration. The enlightened and conscientious observance of this rule would go a great way to make and preserve peace in the Church of God. It is, however, much to be lamented that there are generally individuals who pursue an opposite course, and, by their injudicious and unreflecting conduct, support the evil-doer—a course which, however it may assume the guise of kindness, is the greatest cruelty. In referring to the bruising of the serpent, the apostle probably pointed to the enemies of peace who had arisen in the Church, whereby the weak were seduced, and the fellowship divided. With respect to the subscriptions of the Epistles, they are not of Divine authority, and often incorrect. Sometimes, indeed, they contradict the statements made in the Epistles to which they are subjoined. In the first Epistle to the Corinthians, for instance, it is stated that it was written from Philippi, whereas Paul asserts in chap. xvi., ver. 8, that it was written in Ephesus. These subscriptions are left out by the oldest and best manuscripts and versions, or appear in different forms.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

Corinth, the capital of Achaia, situated on the isthmus which joins Peloponnesus—now called the Morea—to the rest of Greece, was one of the most distinguished cities of ancient times. What were known as the Isthmian Games, took their name from the fact that they were, every five years, celebrated there. Corinth, in dignity, stood next to Athens: in wealth, it occupied the first place. Its extended commerce had brought great opulence, which, as usual, engendered luxury and vice, to an extent which had no parallel among the cities of Greece. In no place, therefore, had the Gospel so much to contend with as there; and nowhere was it accompanied by more glorious triumphs. The importance of the position, and the arduous nature of the work, are indicated by the circumstance that Paul spent so large a portion of his active life in that profligate capital. It was obviously a great point gained to introduce Gospel light into a city so overspread with darkness and so deluged with idolatry. This epistle was written about three years after the apostle's departure, avowedly to answer important questions transmitted to him, and to correct certain disorders which, in the meantime, had crept in among them.

Chap. I. 1-3. The term, "church," merits notice, as clearly signifying neither a number of ministers, nor a building for worship, but the collective body of believers resident at Corinth. Words are the safeguards of things. To surrender the proper import of inspired language, is the first step towards surrendering the truth it conveys. The liberties taken at an early day with this term laid the foundation of much evil, and led to the usurpation by the shepherds of rights which belonged to the flock. The second verse, as touching the divinity of the Lord Jesus, is entitled to special consideration. It has been attempted to take liberties with the apostle's language, by which the glorious truth contained in it is wholly suppressed. Some writers would render the words, "Those who are called by the name of the Lord Jesus;" but that were to go in the face of their obvious import. Nor is that all; the received view is sustained by the fact, that this is one of a class of passages all testifying the same doctrine. The distinguishing character of Christians in those days was, that they "called" on the name of Christ—that is, directed to him worship. Stephen set the first example, when, with his dying breath, he cried, "Lord Jesus! receive my spirit." Paul, too, in the prosecution of his dire work, had authority to "bind all that called on this name." Paul, moreover, "destroyed them that called on his name in Jerusalem." Ver. 4-25. The ministrations of Paul in Corinth were clearly attended with extraordinary power. Not only was the display of miraculous gifts through him great and glorious, but a profusion of them was conferred on the believers themselves. Nowhere does this appear to have taken place on a scale so grand and overpowering. To keep down schisms, or divisions, it is expedient to keep close to the Scriptures. The neglect of this rule has always preceded innovations of doctrine, worship, and ordinances. The humble and devout study of the Inspired Volume is the great preservative of everything appertaining to personal piety, Christian principles, and Church polity. General unity of sentiment will always be found connected with a goodly measure of unity of spirit. Excessive idolatry of ministers is always a token of an infantile condition of the Church. It is one thing to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake and their Master's; it is another to misapprehend the nature of the work, to forget the Master, and to deify the servant. A true and scriptural appreciation of the ministry of the word is always a proof of superior sense and matured piety. The extreme of contempt is not less culpable, and even more mischievous than idolatry. Paul's view of the ordinance of baptism, as here set forth, cuts away at once the foundation of what is known as the "sacramental system." Paul had no conception of "regenerating" either old or young 17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: ^anot with wisdom of ^bwords, ^clest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect.

18 For ^athe preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but ^aunto us which are saved it is the power of God.

19 For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent.

20 Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? ^ahath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?

21 For after that, in the wisdom of God, ^athe world by wisdom knew not God, ^apleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

22 For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

23 But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness;

24 But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God.

25 Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.

26 For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, ^anot many mighty, not many noble, are called:

27 But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty;

28 And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are:

29 That ^ano flesh should glory in his presence.

30 But of him are ye ^bin Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and ^arighteousness, and ^asanctification, and ^aredemption:

31 That, according as it is written, ^aHe that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

CHAPTER II.

Paul declareth that his preaching far excelleth all human wisdom.

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech, or of wisdom, declaring unto you ^athe testimony of God:

2 For I determined ^bnot to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling.

4 And ^amy speech and my preaching was not with ¹enticing words of man's wisdom, ^abut in demonstration of the Spirit and of power;

5 That your faith should not ²stand in the wisdom of men, ^abut in the power of God.

6 Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect; yet ^anot the wisdom of this world, nor ^aof the princes of this world, that ^bcome to nought:

7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world ^aunto our glory;

8 Which ^anone of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified ¹the Lord of glory.

9 But, as it is written, ^mEye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, ^athe things which God hath prepared for ^athem that love him.

10 But ^aGod hath revealed them unto us ^aby his Spirit: for ^athe Spirit searcheth all things, yea, ^athe deep things of God.

11 For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? ^aeven so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.

12 Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, ^abut the Spirit which is of God; ^athat we might know the things that are freely given to us of God.

13 Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, ^abut which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual.

14 But the natural man receiveth not by the baptism of water: in his view, the office of baptizing was a very subordinate affair as compared with the preaching of the Gospel. He little anticipated the rise, in after-times, of a class of men, who would claim to be his successors, making light of that Gospel which was with him the Alpha and the Omega of the new dispensation, and elevating the water of baptism into the place of the Cross of Christ. Not all the fountains of the world could cleanse the soul of a single human being; but the preaching of the Cross was the power of God to salvation! The Gospel, at the distance of so many centuries—while still a fable to one and fanaticism to another, to this class foolishness and to that a stumblingblock—continues to be, as much as ever, “the power of God, and the wisdom of God.” Ver. 26-31. This passage has been often misapprehended, and applied solely to the parties “called,” to the exclusion of those employed in calling them, the Apostles and Evangelists; whereas it is clear that the latter alone were intended. The entire scheme of the Gospel, with all that appertains to it, is so framed as to work humility, and uproot pride, the original cause of man's fall, and still the source of his misery. This pride at one time rejects the Gospel, and at another perverts it. The temper to which the Gospel forms the soul of the faithful is just the temper of the Master himself, who was meek and lowly in heart. Glory is the height of felicity; heaven is full of it; but it is not the glory of the creature. “He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord,” and he cannot err on the score of elevation.

Chap. II. 1-11. The primary office of the evangelist is, to “declare the testimony of God.” This is the sword of the Spirit. It behoves the pastor, the preacher, and every man who would teach his neighbour and his brother, to remember this; it is this—not argument, not eloquence—that is “the power of God unto salvation.” Fervour may excite, imagery dazzle, and pathos melt, but the truth as it is in Jesus only can renovate the soul, since that alone is the instrument of the Holy Spirit. What was the discourse of Peter on the day of Pentecost, but a declaration of the testimony of God!

*the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.

15 But ^ahe that is spiritual ^ajudgeth all things, yet he himself is ^ajudged of no man.

16 For ^bwho hath known the mind of the Lord, that he ^cmay instruct him? ^cBut we have the mind of Christ.

CHAPTER III.

1 Milk is for children. 8 Against division. 16 Believers the temple of God. 18 Against conceit.

AND I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto ^ababes in Christ.

2 I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.

3 For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and ¹divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk ²as men?

4 For while one saith, ^bI am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?

5 Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, ^cbut ministers by whom ye believed, ^deven as the Lord gave to every man?

6 I have planted, Apollos watered; but ^eGod gave the increase.

7 So then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.

8 Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one: and every man shall receive his own reward, according to his own labour.

9 For ^fwe are labourers together with God: ^aye are God's ^ahusbandry; ^bye are God's building.

11 For ^cother foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation ^dgold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble;

18 Let no man deceive himself. ^jIf any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God: for it is written, ^kHe taketh the wise in their own craftiness.

20 And again, ^lThe Lord knoweth the Philosophising on the Gospel is a perilous employment; men may reason about the Gospel without end, and yet never once preach it! Such a process may be admired by the injudicious and the undevout, but it will go unblest, producing neither sorrow among sinners nor joy among angels! No teaching, no preaching, deserves the name of Kvangeliical, of which "Jesus Christ and him crucified" does not constitute the sum and substance. This alone will be attended with the "demonstration of the Spirit and of power." Mere oratory, for purposes of conversion, is impotence. Ver. 12-16. The personality and Godhead of the Holy Spirit are here set forth with extraordinary emphasis. If verbal inspiration be not clearly taught here, surely language ceases to be a safe and certain medium of communication either between God and man, or one man and another. "We speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth," is an expression so explicit and so emphatic as to cut short all cavilling, and to establish the faith of every saint. Is it possible more explicitly and more indisputably to state the doctrine of plenary verbal inspiration? These words, it need hardly be observed, are comprehensive alike of the apostolic speaking and the apostolic writing. This generally explains the important statement, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." These Scriptures are anchors of the soul, by which it may fix itself in a manner to out-ride every tempest of infidelity. By these, the question of inspiration is settled in a word, so as to obviate the necessity, to spiritually-minded men, of giving themselves a moment's trouble about the voluminous impieties of the enemies of inspiration.

Chap. III. 1-9. The carnality here charged upon the Corinthians is such as, nevertheless, is compatible with regeneration, although in the state of imperfect development. These Corinthians, notwithstanding their advantages and their gifts, were still but babes in Christ; but although only babes, still they were in him, and as such delivered from condemnation, which made all the difference between death and life. Sin, like holiness, is one—a fountain with many streams. The same spirit which engendered fond partiality for one faithful servant of the Lord, and bitter antipathy towards another, led to envy, strife, and division. That which really cuts at the root of one sin, therefore, cuts at the root of all; the evil is in the heart, and in the heart it must be assailed and subdued. The statement of the apostle sets forth the true position of the teacher, the preacher, and the pastor; alone, they are nothing—with God, they are competent to "turn the world upside down." Can man desire to occupy a higher place than that of a co-worker with God? Can he wish for more? Can he be more? What privilege, honour, and glory! Ver. 10-17. The import of these verses has been very generally misapprehended, or, at least, very imperfectly set forth; they have been applied exclusively to doctrine, although, carefully studied, it will be seen that they extend to souls as well as truths. Christ is alike the foundation of the system of doctrine, and of the Church, viewed as a spiritual temple. While Paul preached this doctrine, he also exemplified it; he formed the Church of Corinth exclusively of persons professing to be penitent believers. As Christ was the chief corner-stone, so only spiritual stones, so far as man could judge, were laid upon it. The duty and importance of this were only second to the duty and importance of closely adhering to Gospel doctrine. The temptations to err in the one were quite as great as in the other. There seems, indeed, no reason to doubt that it is to persons, rather than doctrines, that the language respecting the last judgment refers. "Every man's work shall be revealed by fire," is a phrase which thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

21 Therefore let no man glory in men: for all things are yours;

22 Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours;

CHAPTER IV.

1 How to account of ministers. 7 We have nothing which we have not received. 9 The apostles' sufferings, 12 and conduct.

LET a man so account of us as of ^athe ministers of Christ, and stewards of the ^bmysteries of God.

2 Moreover, it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful.

3 But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self.

4 For I know nothing by myself; yet am I not hereby justified: ^abut he that judgeth me is the Lord.

5 Therefore judge nothing before the time, ^auntil the Lord come, ^bwho both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts; and then shall every man have praise of God.

6 And these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes; that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another.

7 For who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? now, if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?

8 Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us; ^aand I would to God ^bye did reign, that we also might reign with you.

9 For ^aI think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, ^bas it were appointed to death: for ^cwe are made a ^dspectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men.

10 We are fools ^afor Christ's sake, but ye ^bare wise in Christ: we are weak, but ye are strong: ye are honourable, but we are despised.

11 Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place;

12 And labour, working with our own hands: ^abeing reviled, we bless; ^bbeing persecuted, we suffer it;

13 Being defamed, we entreat: we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day.

14 I write not these things to shame you, but, as my beloved sons, I warn you.

15 For though ^aye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet ^bhave ye not many fathers: ^cfor in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.

16 Wherefore, I beseech you, be ye followers of me.

17 For this cause have I sent unto you Timotheus, who is my beloved son, and ^afaithful in the Lord, who shall bring you into remembrance of ^bmy ways which be in Christ, as I teach every where in every church.

18 Now some are puffed up, as though I would not come to you.

19 But I will come to you shortly, ^aif the Lord will, and will know, not the speech of them which are puffed up, but the power.

seems to admit of only one interpretation. The subjects of decision on that awful day will be, not dogmas, but professions, or dogmas only in relation to them. "If any man's work shall be burned," is an expression which clearly points to professed Christians, visible members of churches, and not to tenets. "Wood, hay, stubble," while they aptly enough represent "damnable heresies," which go to subvert the foundation of human hope, as well as the multifarious whims and false doctrines which have distracted the Church of God, are still more striking emblems of the light, the frivolous, the formal, and hypocritical—of all who have a name to live, and yet are dead. There is, moreover, another consideration of great weight in determining the import of the words: the Church is the "temple of God," and the Spirit of God dwells there. Now, it is here intimated that this temple may be defiled, and that the act of so doing is one of most heinous iniquity; so much so as to be visited by destruction. How, then, is that temple to be defiled but by mixing up the carnal with the spiritual—wood, hay, stubble, with gold, silver, and precious stones? Ver. 18-23. It is not to be wondered at if men, wise in the things of God, are deemed fools by the wicked world. The act is one of self-defence: if Christians be right, they are fearfully wrong. The sum of the argument, then, is, "Let no man glory in men." Every man in his own order—a whole ministry for a whole Church: various gifts and various graces are adapted to meet the necessities of Christians of various talents, tastes, views, and attainments, different sexes, ages, and conditions. How beautiful the portraiture drawn in the closing verses! How striking the idea presented of unity! All instructors exist for the Church, the Church for Christ, and Christ for God, who is all and in all.

Chap. IV. 1-7. The apostles had committed to them a full revelation of the mind of Christ. Both their gifts and their office ceased with themselves, seeing that they were no longer required. It has been the habit of some to apply the term "mysteries" to the sacraments, or, more properly speaking, the ordinances of the Gospel; but there is no authority for such a style of speech, which ought, therefore, to be avoided, even were it harmless, but it is not so. It has been fraught with the most disastrous consequences to Christianity. "Baptismal regeneration" came out of this mode of expression, as well as transubstantiation. They go together; the policy of the enemies of the truth was to cry, "Up with the baptismal font, and demand for it the power of regenerating the soul."—"Up with the Lord's table into an altar, and claim for its emblems the dignity of a sacrifice for the sins of men." The absurdity of these demands is concealed by the easy assumption, that these things are "mysteries." This done, the men who believe it are ready to be transferred to the dark domains of Popery. We are here taught how great is the occasion of sinning, in the matter of ministerial preference, where there are more than one pastor in a church, by being "puffed up for one against another." Whatever be the magnitude or the variety of the gifts of men, they are all from the Lord; if, therefore, one be more highly endowed, or differently endowed from another, surely that is no reason for an idolatrous preference of him; and in the case of men, good and holy, with whom in these respects it may be different, surely that is no 20 For ^athe kingdom of God is not in word, but in power.

6 Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?

7 Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us:

8 Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with

1 Against going to law with brethren. 15 Against fornication.

DARE any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

2 Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world? and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know ye not that we shall judge angels? how much more things that pertain to this life?

4 If then ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church.

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? no, ground for neglect, contempt, or persecution. Ver. 8-13. The picture of suffering here presented is deeply affecting; it throws much light on the state of things in the days of the apostles, and impressively indicates the cost at which the Gospel was propagated amongst us Gentiles, and the obligation under which we have been laid by their self-sacrificing labours. How these verses illustrate the apostolic character! What principles theirs must have been, which could produce such devotion and such heroism! How like their Divine Master in spirit and deportment! How utterly unlike the world around them that lay in the Wicked One! Ver. 14-21. How strongly the affection of the apostle breathes in these verses! Nothing can exceed his paternal regard. Amid all that was pleasant in this portion of his spiritual family, there was much that was intensely painful. There were those whose deportment but ill accorded with their profession, and who made a very unsuitable return for the loving-kindness which had been shewn them. The effect was to call forth language foreign to the nature of the apostle. The entire passage is full of instruction to the ministers of the Gospel, whose chief trials often arise from those who profess to be their spiritual children, and whom they have loaded with kindness.

Chap. V. 1-8. Paul, having finished what he had to say to the Corinthians on the subject of the ministry, proceeds to the very serious question of morals, which reveals a lamentable state of things among a people, who, in point of gifts, ought to have stood at the head of the Gentile Churches. But their very gifts seem to have proved a snare to them. The case before us, however, clearly serves to explain the discipline of the Primitive Church. The act of exclusion was to be that, not of the officers, but of the whole church. The language of the apostle, assuming entire unity, makes no provision for a possible minority. In this serious matter, indeed, majorities and minorities are things to be deprecated, as seriously tending to interfere with the salutary operation of the laws of God's house. When cases of flagrant sin are clearly established, and properly managed, there will generally be unanimity; although individuals will occasionally arise, who, led away by friendship, or other considerations, will set themselves against the decision of the Church, and endeavour to strengthen the hands of the wrong-doer. Some extreme views have been mixed up with the interpretation of the passage. It has been thought that it signified the delivery of the offender to Satan, "to inflict corporal punishment upon him for the destruction of the flesh." But this view by no means harmonises with the spirit of the Gospel; it seems to mean nothing more than casting the offender out of the Church into the visible kingdom of the Wicked One, that he might be led to reflect on his sin, and so to repent, confess, and sue for restoration; which, as we shall see, actually came to pass. Ver. 9-13. The principle set forth in these verses is one of great moment, as affecting the Church of Christ on earth, clearly distinguishing between necessary and unnecessary intercourse with the wicked men of this world. Whatever it is needful to do, it is safe to do; but every step beyond this is presumption, and attended with danger. It is to no purpose that men pray to be delivered from the Evil One, while they rush blindfold into the heart of his kingdom.

Chap. VI. 1-6. Principles of very great importance are involved in this passage. There is here a most earnest dissuasion—which, with the eminently spiritual mind, will have all the force of a law—if there be not a positive injunction to Christians to abstain from litigation. Reference is peremptorily enjoined, and that in not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers.

7 Now therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another: why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?

8 Nay, ye do wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.

9 Know ye not that the 'unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind,

10 Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.

11 And 'such were some of you: ¹but ye are washed, ¹but ye are sanctified, ¹but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.

12 All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not ¹expedient: all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.

13 Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats: ¹but God shall destroy both it and them. Now the body is not for fornication, ¹but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body.

14 And ¹God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us ¹by his own power.

such a manner as to shew that it was at once impolitic and unnecessary for Christians to appeal to the heathen tribunals. Paul does not even estimate highly the capacity required to settle such matters. So far from selecting the most enlightened, gifted, experienced, and spiritually minded of the Church, he orders that their disputes shall be committed to those who are least esteemed in the Church. These he deems fully competent to deal with "things pertaining to this life." Christians, indeed, who stand at the lowest point of spirituality, are often distinguished for good sense and worldly wisdom. To these Paul clearly points as the proper parties for such an undertaking. He would not call in the aid of ignorance and simplicity, as is clearly shewn by his pungent question, "I speak to your shame: is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? no, not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?" This subject deserves much more attention than has yet been given to it by the Church of God in this and other countries. There can be no doubt that the bulk of disputes between Christians which are taken into courts of law might easily be settled by a reference to judicious Christian men. The difficulty does not lie here, but in the fact that, as a rule, the wrong-doers, especially if opulent, are averse to such a course. They reduce their victims to the alternative of suffering wrong or resorting to law, or, resting on their wealth, they will drag others into courts. Again, in determining the force of this Scripture, we must not overlook the difference of circumstances. A court in Corinth and a court in the capitals of England and Scotland are widely different things. The case, moreover, is now greatly altered. Christianity with us, so far from being an object of contempt, is part of the constitution of the country. The business of our courts of law, therefore, is conducted under the sanction of oaths founded on the Sacred Scriptures; so that the scandal attending the appeal of Christians to idolatrous tribunals is entirely done away. To some extent, therefore, the command of the apostle is actually provided for by the judicial arrangements of the land. Finally, these courts alone have the power to compel the wrong-doer to answer for his conduct, and to enforce the decisions of justice. But while thus much is due to truth, the spirit of the apostle's injunctions continues in full force, and will do so to the end of the world. Ver. 7-11. Things here present a very serious aspect; the state of mind out of which these contentions spring is not compatible with a state of salvation, which always implies a "new heart, and a right spirit." Here the wrong-doers are not to be confounded with the sufferers; to be grievously injured is not a crime, but a calamity, deserving, not reproach, but sympathy. While he reproves even the aggrieved for not "rather suffering wrong" than appealing to the heathen, he menaces the authors of the injury with perdition. Violation of justice in dealing with mankind is classed with the foulest crimes. All these things, however they may vary in their external manifestations, are traceable to the same root—"a heart not right with God." There is reason to fear that multitudes of professing Christians have but a dim and defective view of Christianity. How divine its spirit! How excellent its morality! With what grace and beauty Paul makes everything to bear upon the Gospel! These Corinthians themselves were a living proof that there was no depravity which might not be cleansed by the blood of Christ, no guilt which might not be cancelled through his merit, and no ruin which might not be renovated by his Spirit. Ver. 12-20. The union of the believer with Christ, and the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, are here set forth as the foundation of Christian morals. The twofold power thus brought to bear upon the faithful is such as nothing can withstand. Thus man is once more lifted up to God, and earth assimilated to heaven.

Chap. VII. 1-16. It is clear that the Church at Corinth had been troubled by the rise of questions on the subjects of marriage and celibacy, which led them at once to appeal to the apostle for a decision on the points in dispute. There is much in his replies which is entitled to the serious consideration of the people of God. The only part of the passage which more par-

5 Defraud ye not one the other, except it be with consent for a time, that ye may give yourselves to fasting and prayer; and come together again, ^dthat Satan tempt you not for your incontinency.

6 But I speak this ^eby permission, and not of commandment.

7 For I would that all men were even as I myself: ^fbut every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.

8 I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I.

9 But if they cannot contain, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn.

10 And unto the married I command, ye not I, but the Lord, ^gLet not the wife depart from her husband:

11 But and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, ^hor be reconciled to her husband: ⁱand let not the husband put away his wife.

12 But to the rest ^jspeak I, not the Lord; ^kIf any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away.

13 And the woman which hath an husband that believeth not, and if he be pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him.

14 For ^mthe unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband; else were your children unclean; but now are they holy.

15 But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases: ⁿbut God hath called us ^oto peace.

16 For what knowest thou, ^pO wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? or ^qhow knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?

17 But ^ras God hath distributed to every man, ^sas the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk: and so ordain I in all churches.

18 Is any man called being circumcised? let him not become uncircumcised: is any called in uncircumcision? let him not be circumcised.

ticularly calls for notice, is the expression, "Else were your children unclean; but now are they holy." The difficulty attending the explanation of the words is great; and, after all that has been written on the subject, it is but little, if at all diminished. Neither the Baptist nor the Pedobaptist theory suffices to remove the obscurity which rests upon it; but, happily, there is nothing material depending on it—it touches nothing that is vital in our most holy faith. Ver. 17-24. In every age there has been a strong disposition to rest on rites rather than on truth, and against this the apostle here sets himself; boldly declaring, in the face of Jewish prejudice and 20 Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called.

21 Art thou called being a servant? care not for it; but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's ³free man: likewise also he that is called, being free, ⁴is Christ's servant.

23 Ye ⁵are bought with a price: be not ye the servants of men.

24 Brethren, let every man, wherein he is called, therein ⁶abide with God.

25 Now concerning virgins, I ⁷have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, as one that hath ⁸obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful.

26 I suppose therefore that this is good for the present ⁹distress; I say, that it is good for a man so to be.

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But and if thou marry, ¹⁰thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned: nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you.

29 But this I say, brethren, the time is short: it remaineth, that both they that have wives be as though they had none;

30 And they ¹¹that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they possessed not;

31 And they that use this world, as not abusing it: ¹²for the fashion of this world passeth away.

32 But ¹³I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord:

33 But he that is married ¹⁴careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife.

34 There is difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman ¹⁵careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.

35 And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but for that which is ¹⁶comely, ¹⁷and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction.

36 But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely toward his bigotry, "Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God." Many shew an inclination to rest in the advocacy and approval of a system of sound doctrine, without believing it; many, perceiving the error of this, advance to "experience," so called, while forgetting that nothing is entitled to such an appellation which does not spring from the belief of the truth and the indwelling of the Holy Spirit; and a third class, setting light by both doctrine and experience, whether true or false, throw themselves on the moralities. Now, the last is equally wrong with the first and the second. True religion virgin, if she pass ^athe flower of her age, ^aand need so require, let him do what he will, ^ahe sinneth not; let them marry.

37 Nevertheless he that standeth steadfast in his heart, having no necessity, but hath power over his own will, and hath so decreed in his heart that he will keep his virgin, doeth well.

38 So then he that giveth her in marriage doeth well; but he that giveth her not in marriage doeth better.

39 The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; ¹only in the Lord.

40 But she is happier if she so abide, after my judgment: and I think also that I have the Spirit of God.

1 To abstain from meats offered to idols. 8 We must not abuse our Christian liberty.

NOW, as touching things offered unto idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.

2 And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.

3 But if any man ^alove God, the same is known of him.

4 As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice unto idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that ^bthere is none other God but one.

5 For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) 13 Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Paul sheweth his liberty. 7 Ministers ought to live by the gospel, 19 but to deny themselves for the good of others.

AM I not an apostle? am I not free? ^ahave I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? ^aare not ye my work in the Lord?

2 If I be not an apostle unto others, yet doubtless I am to you: ^afor the seal of mine apostleship are ye in the Lord.

blends all the three: the truth as it is in Jesus, cordially believed, will produce experience or affection, and such experience will lead to the keeping of the commandments. Ver. 25-40. Paul never forgot, for a moment, that there are two worlds, and that man's chief concern is with that which is to come. It is not easy, however, to "use this world as not abusing it." The extremes are, not using it at all, or idolising it; to do either is not difficult; the point is to hit the happy medium, which requires the wisdom that cometh from above. To a man whose eye is steadily fixed upon eternity, nothing will prove either elevating or depressing in the extreme; the causes of both, so far as they are earthly, will pass away.

Chap. VIII. 1-6. Although the heathen had forgotten the origin of sacrifice, they still retained some idea of its object, invariably connecting it with the guilt of men, and the mercy of the higher powers, through the shedding of the blood of the victim. Some of the accompanying services of the altar were remarkable for their resemblance to those of the Jewish temple. A portion of these sacrifices was consumed, and the remainder divided between the priests and the parties presenting them, who feasted on the same, inviting their friends to the banquet. Mere knowledge, without charity, is of little value. No knowledge, indeed, deserves the name, which is not imbued with love. The character, in this respect, ought to resemble that of the Lord Jesus, likeness to whom is the test of spiritual attainments. To be one with him is the perfection of excellence. We reason from the unknown to the familiar: "If any man love God, the same is known of him." Since men were on the earth, there never was an instance of one who loved God whom God did not both know and love. In the present case love and knowledge are synonymous terms—"We love him, because he first loved us." The family of God are taught by him to know himself, and the Lord Jesus, whom to know is life eternal. Nothing could present a more striking contrast to the fables of idolatry than the teaching of the apostle. The doctrine of "One God" set aside at once all the divinities of the heathen, and thus brought the human race once more to the footstool of the Father of all, who, through this Mediator, waits to be gracious to his erring children. Ver. 7-18. The statements here set forth concerning idolatry are true to nature, and constitute a strong feature in the evangelical system. In the whole we see the natural working of the human heart, under various degrees of enlightenment. Even in the divine family, the children have occasionally something to fear from those of larger growth and mature years. The infantile conscience is often weak, but, such as it is, it is the proper guide of babes in Christ; and an attempt to govern them by the consciences of brethren much farther advanced in spiritual things, would be to rob them of their dearest right, and divest them of their proper responsibility. The question is not, what is right or wrong in itself, but what these babes in their own conscience deem so. All deviations from this rule are full of peril. Too much has been made of the language before us, as bearing on Universal Redemption, and the doctrine of the perseverance of the saints. Whatever leads to sin, in its own nature, leads to perdition; and the tendency of small sins is to prepare for greater ones. The wages of all sin is death, and the purpose of God according to election only preserves the people of God from destruction by preserving them from sin; and for this purpose the amplest provision has been made by sovereign mercy.

Chap. IX. 1-18. Here the apostle goes on to illustrate the principle he has been laying down, by shewing that the strong should bear the burdens of the weak, and

3 Mine answer to them that do examine me is this;

4 Have we not power to eat and to drink?

5 Have we not power to lead about a sister, a ¹wife, as well as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?

6 Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working?

7 Who ^dgoeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who ^planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? ^ror who feedeth a flock, and ^eateth not of the milk of the flock?

8 Say I these things ^aas a man? ^ror saith not the law the same also?

9 For it is written in the law of Moses, ^tThou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. ¹Doth God take care for oxen?

10 Or saith he ⁱt altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, ^this is written: that he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thrasheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.

11 If we have ^sown unto you spiritual things, ⁱs it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?

12 If others be partakers of ^this power over you, ^are not we rather? Nevertheless we have not used this power; ^bbut suffer all things, lest we should ^hinder the gospel of Christ.

13 Do ye not know, that ^pthey which minister about holy things ^live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?

14 Even so hath the Lord ^ordained, that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.

15 But ⁱI have used none of these things; ⁿeither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me: ^rfor ⁱt were better for me to die, than that any man should make my glorying void.

16 For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!

17 For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a ^dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me.

18 What is my reward then? ^Verily, that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without charge, ^tthat I abuse not my power in the gospel.

19 For though I be free from all ^men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more.

20 And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;

21 To them that are without law, as without law, (being ⁿot without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.

22 To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: ⁱI am made all things to all ^men, ^tthat I might by all means save some.

23 And this I do ^for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.

24 Know ye not that they which ^run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? ^so run, that ye may obtain.

25 And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they ^do it to obtain a corruptible crown, ^but we an incorruptible.

26 I therefore so run, not as uncersubmit to acts of self-denial to promote their comfort and edification. The great fact to be attested by the apostles was, the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; and, therefore, it was necessary to have seen him in his risen state. And, in this respect, Paul was as fully qualified as any of his brethren; for although he had not seen the Lord Jesus before his death, he saw him after his resurrection, and received from him the sum of that knowledge which he was appointed to communicate to the Gentiles. What Paul enjoined he exemplified: he had the same rights touching the matter of support as the rest of the apostles; but these he waived for the sake of the Gospel, that his enemies might not be in a position to charge him with selfishness in the efforts he made for its propagation. No point is more clearly set forth in Scripture than the right of the servants of the Saviour to a reasonable subsistence. The law is so clear as to admit of no dispute: "Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel." In this there is nothing new or peculiar. It is only the introduction of the principle of the Jewish into the Christian dispensation. The priests and Levites had no inheritance among the children of Israel, and, therefore, no means of subsistence other than the tithes and first-fruits, oblations and presents. On these grounds, therefore, alone, they had a claim on their brethren. To this must be added the fact, that their time was consumed in the Temple service, which rendered the cultivation of other pursuits impossible. Ver. 19-27. The apostle here lays down a principle of great importance, as to the manner of dealing with parties whom it is sought to bring over to the Gospel. The evangelical scheme, from its wonderful mixture of justice and of mercy, is sufficiently offensive without unnecessarily adding to it. The great thing with the apostle was the conversion of men; and hence he was prepared to bear with such habits and prejudices as did not interfere with the grace of the Gospel. On this ground he circumcised Timothy, that he might obtain the ear of the Jews. But he took special care to apprise them, that neither was circumcision anything, nor uncircumcision, but regeneration, faith working by love, and keeping the commandments. He even told them that, if any man was circumcised with a view to justifying righteousness, Christ would profit him nothing. The principle deserves the notice of all who are concerned in spreading the Gospel. It is proper, it is duty, to consult tastes and prejudices, so far as it may be necessary and safe; but the moment they trench on the finished work of Christ, and justification by faith in his blood, free, full, and everlasting, without regard to merit of any sort, or works, either done, or to be done—then the teacher is to give place, no, not for a moment; since the Lord Jesus is the end of the law for righteousness to every believer. Paul's reference to the mortification of his own body, yields no support to the doctrine of Popish penances; it signifies nothing more than the resolute curbing of the old nature—a habitual watching against sin. The advocates of a certain system of theology make too much of the expression, "castaway," which is incapable of being made to support their favourite tenet of falling from grace. The apostle simply shews that, in his own case, he exemplifies his own lessons, tainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:

27 But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.

CHAPTER X.

1, 11 The Jews were examples to us both in their mercies and their judgments. 25 In using our Christian liberty, 28 we should be careful not to wound others.

MOREOVER, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea;

2 And were all ^abaptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;

3 And ^bdid all eat the same spiritual meat;

4 And ^cdid all drink the same spiritual drink; (for they drank of that spiritual Rock that ^dfollowed them; and ^ethat Rock was Christ:)

5 But ^fwith many of them God was not well pleased; for they were overthrown in the wilderness.

6 Now these things were our ^gexamples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.

7 Neither ^hbe ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

8 Neither ⁱlet us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

9 Neither let us ^jtempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents.

10 Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer.

11 Now all these things happened unto them for ^kensamples; and ^lthey are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come.

12 Wherefore, ^mlet him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

13 There hath no temptation taken you but such as is ⁿcommon to man: ^obut God is faithful, ^pwho will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also ^qmake a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.

connecting ends with means of Divine appointment. While in the ship, Paul told the company that none of them should be lost: when he saw the seamen, without whom the vessel could not be managed, trying to escape by stealth, he at once cried out, "Except these men abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved." Prevented from departing, they remained, performing their duty, and so the company were saved. So, too, Paul, in his address to the Romans, says, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die;" but the grace of God, which brings salvation, provides against this, teaching all who receive it, "denying all ungodliness and worldly lusts, to live soberly, righteously, and godly in the world."

Chap. X. 1-12. The Corinthians are here taught that neither ordinances nor gifts will save them, and that they have proof of being in Christ only in proportion as they hate and flee from sin. They are pointed to the 14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, ^rflee from idolatry.

15 I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.

16 The ^scup of blessing which we bless, is it not ^tthe communion of the blood of Christ? ^uthe bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?

17 For ^vwe, being many, are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of ^wthat one bread.

18 Behold Israel after the flesh. Are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?

19 What say I then? that the idol is any thing? or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?

20 But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils.

21 Ye ^xcannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils.

22 Do ^ywe provoke the Lord to jealousy? ^zare we stronger than he?

23 All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not.

24 Let no man seek his own, but every man another's ^{aa}wealth.

25 Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, ^{ab}that eat, asking no question for conscience sake.

26 For ^{ac}the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

27 If any of them that believe not bid you to a ^{ad}feast, and ye be disposed to go, whatsoever is set before you eat, asking no question for conscience sake.

28 But if any man say unto you, This is offered in sacrifice unto idols, ^{ae}eat not for his sake that shewed it, and for conscience sake: for the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof:

29 Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the other: for why is my liberty judged of another ^{af}man's conscience?

30 For if I by ^{ag}grace be a partaker, why am I evil spoken of for that for which I give thanks?

31 Whether therefore ^{ah}ye eat, or drink,

Jews for an illustration. The children of Israel were all typically baptized to Moses in the cloud and in the sea—in the passover they all ate spiritually and typically of the Lord's Supper—they all drank, of the miraculous rock, waters which were typical of the blood, grace, and spirit of Christ; and it profited them nothing, because of their unbelief and wickedness. The lesson of the whole is, let him who thinks he stands take heed lest he fall. Ver. 13-28. It is sometimes the believer's duty to maintain his ground, and fight—in that case, he will receive the help necessary to victory; in other cases, it is his duty to flee—and, then, the way will be opened for him. The great point is, to ascertain when the one course is duty and when the other. Mistake here may lead to serious consequences; but a heart intent only on obeying the truth, and promoting the Divine glory, will seldom be mistaken. The table of the Lord, as here set forth, points to the wall of sepa-or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.

32 Give ^cnone offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the ^cGentiles, nor to the church of God :

33 Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.

CHAPTER XI.

¹ Of covering the head in prayer. ²¹ Of profaning the Lord's supper. ²³ The apostle's account of its institution.

BE ye followers of me, ^aeven as I also am of Christ.

2 Now I praise you, brethren, ^bthat ye remember me in all things, and ^ckeep the ^dordinances, as I delivered them to you.

3 But I would have you know, that ^dthe head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; ^eand the head of Christ is God.

4 Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.

5 But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered, dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven.

6 For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.

7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as ^fhe is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.

8 For the man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man.

9 Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man.

10 For this cause ought the woman to have ^gpower on her head because of the angels.

11 Nevertheless, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; ^ybut all things of God.

13 Judge in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a ^zcovering.

16 But if any man ^{aa}seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither ^{ab}the churches of God.

17 Now in this that I declare unto you I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, ^{ac}I hear that there be ^{ad}divisions among you; and I partly believe it.

19 For there must be also ^{ae}heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place, ^{af}this is not to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For in eating every one taketh before ^{ag}other his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken.

22 What! have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? ^{ah}or despise ye the church of God, and shame them ^{ai}that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not.

ration which is raised between the Church and the world. This spiritual feast must not be confounded with the riotous banquetings of idolatry. When all men shall have become Christians, and when no man shall seek his own, but every man another's welfare, the effect will be to assimilate earth to heaven. Ver. 27-33. Here, again, the apostle urges on the strong the duty of respecting the consciences of the weak. The glory of God is the star by which the Christian ought to steer his way over the troubled ocean of this world. That star is always visible, and it will never mislead. He who follows Christ will at length, without fail, find him in heaven.

Chap. XI. 1-16. Popery has made much of the apostle's reference to tradition, but without cause; for he appeals to people whom he had brought out of the world, and formed into a Church, and who, therefore, were the depositaries of his own manifold instructions on doctrine, ordinances, and polity, throughout a lengthened period. Up to that time, they had no apostolic Scripture; they were, therefore, entirely indebted to the living voice of Paul for all they knew. The traditions of Popery are at variance with the Word of God, which is the sole reason for withholding it from the people. The Bible and Popery cannot co-exist. The disadvantages under which the Churches laboured in apostolic times, notwithstanding the abundance of inspired men, were far from inconsiderable: as the case of Popery shews, the oral instructions of inspired men were liable to be mixed with error, and seriously corrupted. There is now an end to this: the Divine communication is complete and perfect; and it only remains for the faithful in everything to take for their watchword—"To the law and the testimony." But when the Canon of Scripture was completed, and the whole of the precious treasure collected into a volume, then the sole reign of tradition was at an end, and the Churches, through all the earth, and through all time, were blessed with the lively Oracles; thenceforward there was an end to uncertainty. By degrees, however, the Scriptures were withdrawn. People of a contentious spirit must, as foolish men, be answered according to their folly—"We have no such custom, neither the churches of God." Ver. 17-26. There is no spectacle on earth so incongruous as division amongst Christians surrounding the table of the Lord. That spot, above all others, ought to be the centre of unity. The Corinthian Church completely lost sight of the true nature and object of the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, converting it into a social feast; and not only so, but forming themselves into parties the same as in common life, according to worldly relationships and class associations. The best mode of exposing and correcting error is to place beside it the Divine pattern. In our own day, in estimating the claims of Popery, for example, let any man take with him the New Testament, and proceed to a Popish chapel, and there let him compare what he reads with what he sees, and judge for himself. He will then be able to say, whether in that single point—to pass by a multitude that remain—there be, or be not, any substantial reason why the Popish priests keep back from the people the Sacred Scriptures. Popery withholds the cup entirely brake it, and said, Take, ¹eat; ²this is my body, which is broken for you: this do ³in remembrance of me.

25 After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, ¹This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ²ye do shew the Lord's death ³till he come.

27 Wherefore, ¹whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, ²shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But ¹let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh ¹damnation to himself, ²not discerning the Lord's body.

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

31 For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But when we are judged, ²we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto ²condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Spiritual gifts are various, 7 and bestowed for our profit 12 Christians, as the members of the body natural, are one.

NOW concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

2 Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, that ²no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus ¹accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.

5 And there are differences of ²administrations, ³but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which ²worketh all in all.

7 But ⁴the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.

8 For to one ⁵is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;

9 To another ⁶faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit;

10 To another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another ⁷discerning of spirits; to another ⁸*divers* kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues:

from them; and instead of giving them the bread—or rather its substitute—into their own hands, they make the people kneel down and protrude their tongues, on which they lay a wafer. The abuses of the Supper at Corinth were a thing of nought as compared with the outrages of Romanism, which has destroyed both its form and its essence. But this is neither all nor the worst. Popery tells its dupes that the wafer is actually the flesh of Christ, and that the wine is the very blood! If such were the fact, how comes it that the flesh only is given to the people, and all the blood appropriated to the priests? It is hardly practicable to advance much farther in the path of impious deception. It is impossible to offer a more flagrant insult to the majesty of reason. A system which has descended to such depths of iniquity will stick at nothing. Men so benighted and so prostrated as to endure this, will endure anything. Ver. 27-34. The abuse of the institution involved serious guilt: it was an indignity offered to the Son of God, which deserved to be visited with fatherly chastisement. The sin of the Corinthians mainly consisted in the manner. They ate and drank “unworthily,” “not discerning the Lord’s body.” The apostle, however, does not go about to correct the evil by abolishing the ordinance, or by commanding the erring people to abstain from it; he enjoins them to “examine” themselves, and to observe it as they ought. The term rendered “damnation,” has been a source of much disquiet to multitudes of sincere and devout believers. But the word here does not mean “damnation” in the sense of eternal punishment; it refers not at all to that, but simply to parental chastisement, inflicted expressly in mercy, “that they should not be condemned with the world.” This chastisement took various forms, all partaking more or less of a bodily character. The object of these chastisements was to lead the people to repentance; and, doubtless, the Spirit of the Lord sanctified them for that end. Already they extensively prevailed, without their knowing it: “many were weak and sickly among them, and many slept”—that is, they were dead. But although dead, they were not “damned;” they were “absent from the body, but present with the Lord.” The fears of many godly people on the subject are groundless. There is no danger of their falling into the errors of the Corinthians. A most important consideration is here suggested. Numbers of people, professing to be Christians, practise on themselves a deception in this matter: lest they should eat and drink “unworthily,” they neither eat nor drink at all, and take credit to themselves for their rejection of the Divine authority as a deed of merit! A greater mistake cannot be committed. If it be an error to observe a great command in a wrong manner, what must it be to trample that command in the dust? Is the former to be “guilty of the body and blood of the Lord,” and is the latter to be viewed as a thing attended with no danger? The command is absolute, and binding on all Christians. They neglect it at their peril! It is the very climax of inconsistency for men to profess and call themselves Christians, and despise the Lord’s dying command—a statute of his kingdom. His own decision is, “If ye love me, keep my commandments.”

Chap. XII. 1-13. The test of a claim to inspiration was the light in which the party making it professed to view the Lord Jesus Christ. It was in vain that such as spake against him said they were moved by the Spirit of God. All such stood self-condemned, seeing that it was the province of the Spirit to glorify Christ. On the other hand, no man could have faith to speak of Jesus in his Divine character, but under the influence of the self-same Spirit. Writers of a certain class misapprehend the import of these words—“A manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.” This Scripture has been strenuously urged as incontestable proof of the doctrine of what is called “common grace” and “common light,” as the property of every human being—grace which he has only to use aright in order to the regeneration, repentance, and faith, which bring salvation. But Paul is not here speaking of man as a race. Nay, he is not even speaking of the whole body of the Corinthian Church, but of that small class among them on whom was bestowed one or more of the “divers 11 But ^aall these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ.

13 For ^bby one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, ^cwhether we be Jews or ^dGentiles, whether we be ^ebond or free; and have been all made ^fto drink into one Spirit.

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; ^ais it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17 ^aIf the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? if the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 But now ^bhath God set the members every one of them in the body, ^cas it hath pleased him.

19 And if they were all one member, where were the body?

20 But now are ^athey many members, yet but one body.

21 And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you.

22 Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary:

23 And those ^amembers of the body, which we think to be less honourable, upon these we ^bbestow more abundant honour; and our uncomely ^cparts have more abundant comeliness.

24 For ^aour comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that ^bpart which lacked;

25 That ^athere should be no ^bschism in the body; but ^cthat the members should have ^dthe same care one for another.

26 And whether one member suffer, all

CHAPTER XIII.

1 All gifts, how excellent soever, are nothing worth without charity. 4 The properties thereof.

THOUGH I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and ^ahave not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And though ^bI have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; ^cand though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, ^dI am nothing.

3 And ^athough I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and ^bthough I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

5 Doth not behave itself unseemly, ^aseeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, ^bthinketh no evil;

6 ^aRejoiceth not in iniquity, but ^brejoiceth ^cin the truth;

7 ^aBeareth all things, believeth all things, ^bhopeth all things, ^cendureth all things.

8 Charity ^anever faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

gifts" specified, enjoyed, and abused. The entire strain of his argument is to shew that the sum total of these gifts, of whatever kind, were given, not to gratify the individual possessing them, but to edify the Church, and to promote the glory of Christ. Such is the import of the expression, "to profit withal." it is not that the party might profit by it to secure the conversion of his own soul, but that he might "profit the Church." The man possessing the gift is presumed to be previously converted, and it was as such that he obtained the gift. Ver. 14-31. The kingdom of God is remarkable for its unities—one faith, one Lord, one baptism; and all the gifts here specified are from one Spirit. All the members of the Church of Christ in every age, and in every clime, form but one body. Right views of this would tend to suppress the risings of pride and vanity, as it shews that each member of the Church of Christ is just what the Spirit of the Lord makes him, and destined to accomplish the purposes the Spirit of the Lord intends: each in his place, therefore, whether high or low, is honourable; while none are to be deified, none are to be despised.

Chap. XIII. 1-3. The bulk of men are desirous to be considered great rather than good. The graces of the Spirit, even where they shone in strength, were not prized, admired, and courted; but it was deemed a glorious thing to speak with tongues, to cure sickness, to discern spirits, and in divers ways to work miracles! These things attracted notice, exciting envy in one quarter, and admiration in another. The professor was but too ready to plume himself on his gift, and to use it to gratify his own vanity rather than to promote the glory of the Saviour. To correct this grievous evil, Paul here assures them that these gifts made no part whatever of the Gospel salvation, and that they may even exist without it. Where there is no love there is no life: love is the very soul of piety; it is the prime grace of the Spirit; it is the crowning evidence of regeneration, conversion, and adoption. God is love; and every one that is born of God loves both the Father and the family. It is the test of true religion—"We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Ver. 4-13. Paul, instead of defining love, describes its operations, which he shews to be beautiful, glorious, and God-like. Wherever the Spirit of the Lord dwells, love will dwell, and manifest its presence by the 9 For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.

10 ⁴But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, ¹I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I ²thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For now we see through a glass, ⁴darkly; but then ²face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

13 And now ¹abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these ^{is} charity.

1 Prophecy preferred before speaking with strange tongues, ³⁰ but must be exercised in an orderly manner.

¹FOLLOW after ²charity, and ³desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue ⁴edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth ⁴edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied: ¹for greater ^{is} he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the church may receive edifying.

6 Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, ⁴what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by ²revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?

tongue words ²easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air.

10 There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them ^{is} without signification.

11 Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh ^{shall} be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even so ye, ²forasmuch as ye are zealous of ⁴spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in an unknown tongue, ¹my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful.

15 ²What is it then? ³I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also; I will sing with the spirit, ⁴and I will sing with the understanding also.

16 Else, when thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?

17 For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 ¹I thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all:

19 Yet ²in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, than ^{by my voice} I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue.

20 Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit ¹in malice be ye children, but in understanding be ²men.

21 In the law it is written, With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord.

22 Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, ²but for them which believe.

23 If therefore ¹the whole church be presence of all these things. These, therefore, are the attributes which ought to mark the character of every professing Christian. They will exist in a great variety of measures; but still, even in their smallest degrees, they will be in such strength as to shew that "if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." By the failure of prophecy, is to be understood its accomplishment, when it shall cease to be prophecy, and become history. Tongues will cease with the present world: as at the outset language was one, so will it be again. What is now pursued, possessed, and praised as knowledge, will then vanish away. The arts and sciences of time will be of no use in the world of spirits! Faith, as receiving the Divine testimony concerning Christ, and laying hold upon his righteousness, is indispensable to justification; hope, the power which springs from the promises, produces comfort, purity, and strength: and both will last as long as the Church on earth; but in heaven they will cease, or exist for other objects. Not so charity, or love; as a ruling power of the renewed soul, it not only occupies the chief place here, but will do so in heaven, where it reigns, and its power will remain through all eternity the same.

Chap. XIV. 1-25. There is no species of greatness so little understood, or so little cultivated, as that which is indisputably the highest—moral greatness; the greatness of the prophets and apostles, and the Lord Jesus Christ. Such greatness is nearly identical with goodness, or Christian benevolence—looking forth in steadfast, continued endeavours to diffuse truth and holiness, love and happiness, among mankind. While all knowledge is power, the knowledge of God, as producing love, is incomparably the highest power. Love operates in the way of benevolence, and the result is usefulness, or the formation of happiness. He is, therefore, the greatest man who, on Christian principles, most lays himself out to promote human welfare. While the rage of the Corinthians was to obtain shining gifts, Paul here shews that the useful gifts are much more to be coveted. What he enjoins he, as usual, exemplifies: he avows that he estimates every gift by its adaptation to further the come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad?

24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all:

25 And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so, falling down on his face, he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth.

26 How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying.

27 If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church; and let him speak to himself, and to God.

29 Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge.

30 If any thing be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the first hold his peace.

31 For ye may all prophesy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted.

32 And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.

33 For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints.

34 Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law.

35 And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church.

36 What! came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you only?

37 If any man think himself to be a

CHAPTER XV.

4 By Christ's resurrection, 18 he provech the necessity of our resurrection: 21 of which he shows the fruit, 35 and manner, 51 together with the change that shall pass on those who shall be then alive.

MOREOVER, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand;

2 By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain:

3 For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures;

4 And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures;

5 And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve:

6 After that he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

7 After that he was seen of James; then of all the apostles.

8 And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.

9 For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

10 But by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.

11 Therefore, whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.

cause of God. Happy will it be when Christians universally shall come to cherish similar feelings! Ver. 26-40. The picture here presented redounded but little to the credit of the gifted portion of the Church; when they assembled, one would sing a psalm, another would discuss a doctrine, a third would speak in an unknown tongue, a fourth announce some revelation which had been made to him, and a fifth address himself to the work of interpreting. Thus they presented a scene of utter confusion, conducing neither to the edification of the Church, nor to the conversion of the world. Paul put an end to all this by an explicit statement of what was to be done. The comparative merits of the useful and the shining are determined by the mode in which Paul speaks of them: the useful he enjoins them to covet; if the shining—the gift of tongues—descend on any of them, they are not to “forbid” the exercise of them. In the one case there was to be intense desire; and in the other, devout toleration.

Chap. XV. 1-11. The facts of the Gospel, while few, are stupendous. Paul here sets them forth in a manner which strikingly illustrates the nature of faith, and the means of salvation. The appeal of the apostle here, as everywhere, is to the Scriptures; while specially adapted to meet the case of the Jews, it was remarkably calculated to impress the mind of the Gentiles. The plan was much suited to bring the subject to a brief issue. In arguing with the sons of Abraham, the apostle affirms that the Scriptures spake thus and thus; it was therefore competent for them to say whether they did so or not. Did they largely testify to the sufferings of Christ? Did the sacrifices foreshadow his sufferings and death, or did they not? As to the resurrection, did the Scriptures foretell that the person whose death they foretold should rise again, or did they not? The apostle urges that such is the fact, and cites the Scriptures in proof of his allegation. Then as to the actual resurrection, the apostle offered all the evidence of which the case admitted, and that in a measure the most ample. The chief disciples often saw and conversed with their Lord, and latterly he appeared to the extraordinary number of five hundred. Ver. 12-32. The universal Church is deeply indebted to the perverse spirits of the Church of Corinth for this sublime and glorious discourse on the most important subject, next to the Gospel itself, that can occupy the human mind. From this great argument, more than from any other Scripture, we learn the true place and 12 Now, if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen:

14 And if Christ be not risen, ^athen is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found ^afalse witnesses of God: because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.

16 For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised:

17 And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins.

18 Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.

19 If in ^athis life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

20 But ^anow is Christ risen from the dead, and become ^athe first-fruits of them that slept.

21 For since by man ^acame death, by man ^acame also the resurrection of the dead.

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

23 But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterward ^athey that are Christ's at his coming.

24 Then ^acometh the end, when he shall have delivered up ^athe kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority and power.

25 For ^bhe must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 The ^alast enemy ^athat shall be destroyed is death.

27 For ^ahe hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith, All things are put under ^ahim, ^ait is manifest that he is excepted which did put all things under him.

28 And when ^aall things shall be subdued unto him, ^athen shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be ^aall in all.

29 Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?

30 And why stand we in jeopardy every hour?

31 I protest by ^ayour rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I ^adie daily.

32 If ^aafter the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantage it me if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die.

33 Be not deceived: ^aevil communications corrupt good manners.

34 ^aAwake to righteousness, and ^asin not; for ^asome have not the knowledge of God: I speak ^athis to your shame.

35 But some ^aman will say, ^aHow are the dead raised up? and ^awith what body do they come?

36 ^aThou fool, ^athat which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die.

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other ^agrain:

38 But ^aGod giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: but ^athere is one ^akind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.

40 ^aThere are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the ^aglory of the terrestrial is another.

41 ^aThere is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for ^aone star differeth from ^aanother star in glory.

42 So also ^ais the resurrection of the dead; it is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption:

the vital importance of the doctrine of the Resurrection in the economy of redemption. It is the only proof of the acceptance of the atonement of Christ on behalf of the lost. In the absence of it, there was, there could be, no ground for solid hope. Without atonement there is no salvation; and without the resurrection, no atonement. These doctrines stand or fall together. Jesus rose, not merely as an individual, but as the Representative and Forerunner of his people: his resurrection was the pledge and pattern of theirs. The range of the apostolic communication is so great, and in some of its points so involved, that there is difficulty in fully comprehending it. The order of the resurrection, however, seems clear, and likewise the fact that the end of all things is immediately to succeed. It is, nevertheless, impossible fully to comprehend what is comprised and implied in the Saviour's "delivering up of the kingdom" to God. Wise and holy men have in vain endeavoured to solve the mystery of the question. We only see through a glass darkly, beholding dim shadows rather than substantial objects. It is probable that it amounts to something like this:—The administration of the Lord Jesus, as Prophet, Priest, and King to his people will then be closed, forasmuch as everything included in it will have been realised; the resurrection of the dead will consum-mate the work begun at the incarnation; the Judge having ascended his throne, and the whole race of Adam having been brought before him, each receiving "for the deeds done in the body," there will be a lasting separation of the righteous from the wicked, and both classes will be carried each to their own appropriate place. While the Saviour's peculiar and specific work will then have been terminated, he will continue to sustain the same relation to his people, remaining, throughout eternity, the object of their unutterable love, gratitude, adoration, and praise. To Paul was reserved the peculiar honour of instructing the Church in this momentous question. The future was divided between him and John; the other apostles were called to do but little in the way of prediction. Ver. 33, 34. Man is so constituted that he cannot remain unaffected by the state of society around him. Intimate and constant communion with wicked men cannot fail to corrupt the morals. The fellowship of the Church at Corinth was clearly of a very mixed character, which largely accounts for the state of things set forth in this and the next chapter. The corruption displayed was not simply the result of the remaining imperfection which cleaves to the best, but of the introduction of unconverted men. Although, when the purposes of Providence required it, the 43 It is sown in dishonour, it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power:

44 It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.

45 And so it is written, "The first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a quickening spirit.

46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual.

47 The "first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is "the Lord from heaven.

48 As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

49 And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

50 Now this I say, brethren, "that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51 Behold, I shew you a mystery; "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be "changed, 52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, (for the trumpet shall sound;) and "the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must "put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and "this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory.

55 O death, where is thy "sting? O "grave, where is thy victory?

apostles had the gift of discerning spirits, it appears that in the matter of baptism, and admitting men to the Church, they were left to their unaided reason. Where proof as to repentance towards God and faith in the Lord Jesus were credible, the parties were at once baptized, and received to the fellowship; and accordingly there were those who crept in unawares, dishonoured the Church, and brought disgrace on the Gospel. The number of these was of course in proportion to the number which were baptized; and in no place where Paul laboured does the presence of Divine power seem to have been so remarkably manifested as in Corinth. A portion of them had "not the knowledge of God"—a circumstance which accounts for all that followed. Ver. 35-58. Then, as now, the spirit of carnal curiosity often usurped the place of solemn inquiry, touching points of eternal moment. But folly often succeeds in opening the gates of Wisdom: its objections called forth one of the sublimest portions of inspiration. While the apostle almost always goes direct to the cross, having reached it, he never fails to look up to the crown, and to assert the claims of its Divine Wearer. In the resurrection, he beholds the complete emancipation of the people of God from the slavery of sin, and their introduction to all the privileges of adoption. Well may they continue always abounding in the work of the Lord, inasmuch as their labours shall not be in vain in the Lord!

Chap. XVI. 1-11. The Gentiles were at once taught their obligations to the Jews for the glorious Gospel, which they had been the means of communicating to them; and the distress of the Jewish Christians in Palestine soon furnished an occasion of giving it a prac-

NOW concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye.

2 Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, "as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.

3 And "when I come, "whomsoever ye shall approve by your letters, them will I send to bring your "liberality unto Jerusalem.

4 And if it be meet that I go also, they shall go with me.

5 Now I will come unto you, when I shall pass through Macedonia; (for I do pass through Macedonia;)

6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, "that ye may bring me on my journey whithersoever I go.

7 For I will not see you now by the way; but I trust to tarry a while with you, "if the Lord permit.

tical manifestation. Why is the first "day of the week" fixed upon for this particular course of action? There is only one conceivable ground for it; on that day the Lord Jesus rose from the dead, and on that day the Church came together for instruction, worship, and the observance of ordinances. Then, what could be more appropriate than to combine with these the exercise of Christian benevolence? This and the parallel passage unite to constitute an irrefragable argument for the change of the seventh to the first day of the week, which then prevailed throughout Christendom, and which has done so ever since. We have here the true theory of Christian contribution set forth, with all the simplicity, reasonableness, and efficiency, which characterise the injunctions of Scripture. It is to be done weekly; it is to be done by every one; and the amount is to be regulated according to the prosperity of the week. Were this system to be universally acted upon, it would forthwith work a financial revolution throughout the whole Christian world, which would put a new face on religious observance. It would constitute a universal income-tax for purposes of charity and piety, which would prove more than sufficient for every demand. Ver. 12. In the days of the apostles, as well as since that period, the measure of opposition to the Gospel has always been in proportion to the success which has attended its proclamation. It is only when piety exists in power, that it calls forth the spirit of hostility in its various forms. This portion of Scripture is one of great importance as bearing on the apostolic authority. They possessed and exercised no lordship over the people, or the preachers; the present verse supplies a very striking illustration. Instead of ordering, he "greatly desired" Apollos to proceed to Corinth to help on the work in that most ^yThe first epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi by Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, and Timotheus.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

This epistle was written about a year after the first, probably in the beginning of 60. There is much in it bearing a personal and social character, which renders it of special interest to the Church of Christ. This and the other epistle, indeed, in relation to the working and the management of Churches, possess a value much beyond that of the other epistles of the New Testament. We are thrown into the midst of a great, wealthy, and highly gifted church, and permitted to witness the manner in which it is dealt with by an inspired apostle. Both the epistles, the second more especially, are full of life and business. We behold Christianity a living power working in the heart of the Gentile multitude, and see Nature maintaining a steady war with Grace. It were much to be desired that the people of God should be thoroughly familiar with these rich and wonderful communications.

important city. It might have been supposed that such a desire would have had with Apollos all the force of a law. How could such a request, concerning such a matter, be refused? How could Apollos set himself against a judgment so clearly stated, and a request so strongly urged? To us, at this distance of time, the refusal seems strange; but whatever may have been the reason, the fact is upon record. That fact, however little it may redound to the credit of the spirit or temper of Apollos, is one of deep significance, as touching apostolical authority and rule. Ver. 13-24. Where the Gospel is but newly planted, or is still weak, it is a great blessing to have among the churches men of large means and a large heart, who "addict themselves to minister to the saints"—that is, give themselves to the constant exercise of hospitality. Such a man was Stephanas, and such was his house. This is a material circumstance. The household shewed the father's abundant grace, and walked in his honoured footsteps. Where such is the case, the presumption is that the work will not be limited to one generation; otherwise death may work a lamentable change, as it has often done. Paul enjoins that such men and such families are to be held in great esteem for their work's sake and the love that dwelleth in them. The harmonies as well as the diversities of character in the Church of God are worthy of notice.

Priscilla and Aquila, in the matter of salutation, towered far above the rest. Their hearts were more fully in the act; it was "much in the Lord." This zealous couple, who had been the meek instructors of Apollos, had a church assembling in their own humble habitation. They earned their bread by manual labour. Having met Paul at Corinth, as they were both of the same trade, they remained, and worked, and lived together for the space of a year and a half; and when he went to Ephesus, they accompanied him. By some this church has been represented as their family; but there is no proof that they had any: the presumption, indeed, is the contrary. Moreover, household assemblies were then common. The charity of the apostle is a model for all saints. It was not less remarkable for its comprehensiveness than for its exclusiveness. It comprehended all, without distinction, that loved the Lord Jesus Christ; and it excluded all who did not. No matter what their talents, gifts, wealth, or position might be, if the enemies of the Lord, they could have no place amongst Paul's friends; whereas, whatever their humility, poverty, or social condition, if they loved the Lord, they were at once taken to his heart.

Chap. I. 1-12. How endearing the view here given of the Father of mercies, as the comforter of his afflicted 4 Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.

5 For^a as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, ^aso our consolation also aboundeth by Christ.

6 And whether we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and salvation, which is ¹effectual in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.

7 And our hope of you is steadfast, knowing, that as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life:

9 But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, ^athat we should not trust in ourselves, but ^bin God which raiseth the dead;

10 Who ¹delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver; in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us:

11 Ye also helping together by prayer for us, that, for the gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons, thanks may be given by many on our behalf.

12 For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in ^asimpli-city and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world, and more abundantly to you-ward.

13 For we write none other things unto you than what ye read or acknowledge, and I trust ye shall acknowledge even to the end; children! There is no teacher like experience; the best comforters are those who have themselves been the most intense sufferers. The heart of affliction is approachable to none other. The Saviour knows what his people require, and makes special provision for every emergency. Peculiar suffering for Christ never fails to be attended by peculiar succour; as is the day, so is the strength. The kingdom of heaven is so constituted, that the same rights belong to every individual of it; privileges and obligations are equal: each for all, and all for each, is the rule and the motto. When blessings have been obtained, it is always both the privilege and the duty of the suppliants to make a proper acknowledgment in the shape of thanksgiving. It is of the utmost moment that these facts should obtain a proper lodgment in the hearts of the Church; properly to feel them, and uniformly to act upon them, would be to produce effects of which we have no examples in modern times. No joy is comparable to that which arises from the testimony of a good conscience. It is the voice of God to the soul, imparting to it happiness and power. Ver. 13-24. The Son of God, Jesus Christ, is preached by the apostle here, as everywhere, with a power which nothing could withstand. The unction from the Holy One was a blessing common to the apostles and their converts. The "earnest of the Spirit in their hearts" was the source of their courage and perseverance, confidence and joy. The stamp of the Divine hand is incapable of counterfeit; it is not simply a possession of itself, but a pledge of more—a foretaste of the inheritance which awaits them.

Chap. II. 1-11. Meetings of Christian friends ought always to be seasons of mutual satisfaction, which requires that there should be between them a perfect understanding. Where such is not the fact, it is generally a good reason for postponing an interview till matters, if possible, have been adjusted. Thus the solicitude of the apostle was founded in human nature, and the course he adopted was entirely successful in leading the Corinthians to repentance. Where penitence is sincere and deep, offenders should be forgiven, and restored to the privileges of Christian fellowship; and that should be done with cordiality, in order to heal the wounds which sin has made, and to comfort the mourner. In this, as in all other matters, their model is the Father of mercies and the God of all consolation. There is no event which the malice of the Wicked One will not turn into an occasion of temptation. In all that belongs to the Church of Christ he is ever on the watch for evil: he has a hand far greater than is generally supposed in the strife, confusion, and evil work which often distract the best Churches. Cases of discipline are occasions which he too often succeeds in rendering subservient to his own objects. "We are not ignorant of his devices," is an expression of terrible significance. Ignorance on this point is favourable to his success, whereas knowledge prompts to watchfulness and prayer, by which he is disappointed. To be ignorant, therefore, is to fall into the snare, and so to be undone. Ver. 12-17. "Rest in spirit" is necessary to effective labour; intense anxiety, by drying up the soul, is a source of weakness. As Paul had gone to Troas expressly to preach the Gospel, and a 2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote this same unto you, lest, when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom ^aI ought to rejoice; ^bhaving confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.

4 For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; ^cnot that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.

5 But if any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part; that I may not overcharge you all.

6 Sufficient to such a man is this ¹punishment, which was inflicted of many.

7 So that contrariwise ^aye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such an one should be ^cswallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you, that ye would confirm your love toward him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, ^awhether ye be obedient in all things.

10 To ^awhom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes for-gave I it in the ^aperson of Christ;

11 Lest ^aSatan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 Furthermore, when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and a door was opened unto me of the Lord, 13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother; but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia.

14 Now ^athanks be unto God, ^awhich always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, ^ain them that are saved, and in them that perish.

16 To the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life: and who is sufficient for these things?

17 For we are not as many, ^awhich ^ccorrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ.

CHAPTER III.

1 The apostle shows the faith of the Corinthians to be a sufficient attestation to his ministry. 6 He ascribes all his sufficiency to God: 7 declaring that the ministry of the gospel was more glorious than that of the law.

DO we begin again to commend ourselves? or need we, as some others, epistles of commendation to you, or letters of commendation from you?

2 Ye ^aare our epistle written in our hearts, ^bknown and read of all men:

3 Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be ^athe epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of ^athe living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart.

4 And ^asuch trust have we through Christ to ^aGod-ward:

5 Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; ^abut our sufficiency is of God;

6 Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: ^afor the letter killeth, ^abut the spirit ^agiveth life.

7 But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away;

8 How shall not ^athe ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious?

9 For if ^athe ministration of condemnadoor had been opened to him of the Lord, it might have been supposed that his success would have led to his continuance; but it was not so. His anxiety about Titus was such, that he departed, and went to Macedonia. Why was he so concerned about Titus? The reason is plain: Titus had been to Corinth, and Paul was unpeakingly anxious to learn from him the effect of his former letter, and the true state of the Church at the time. At length Paul found him, and was much rejoiced by his report. This triumph in Christ, doubtless, refers to the practice which then obtained among the Romans. When great generals subdued kingdoms, converting them into provinces of the Empire, it was customary to honour them on their return with a triumph at Rome. On this occasion the hero of the hour, during the procession, was seated in a chariot of ivory, wearing a crown of laurel or gold, and accompanied by the trophies of his victory. Notwithstanding the analogy which the subject presents, the contrast was greater than can be easily conceived. On the one side was the destruction of men's lives, and on the other their salvation! There, all was cruelty; here, compassion! Here, the true glory of the Creator; there, the false glory of the creature. The "sweet savour" refers to the odours and incense burnt before the conqueror in the procession. It was common to lead in chains the most distinguished of the captives, some of whom, at the close of the ceremony, were slain, and others suffered to live, so that the odour and incense were to them, respectively, the savour of life unto life, and of death unto death. Thus the Gospel is a savour of life to all that believe, and of death to all that reject it! The eternal condition of every man will depend on the use he makes of his privilege. Life and death are set before him, and he must choose the one or the other. In one most material point, however, the resemblance fails. The death of those destined to destruction was the mere arbitrary act of the authorities, apart from moral considerations; whereas death, here, is uniformly the punishment of rebellion against God, and the rejection of the Son of his love.

Chap. III. 1-11. Paul, in proof of his apostleship, appeals to the power which had attended his ministry among the Corinthians, and proved the Divine character of his mission. The foes of the apostle could only oppose words to deeds, and malice to miracle; and yet people believed them. Faith is less dependent on evidence than on the state of the heart; error is often believed without proof, and truth rejected in spite of it. The New Testament, or Covenant, signifies the Covenant of Grace; by this covenant provision is made for the renovation of the soul, the forgiveness of sins, the imputation of righteousness, and the preservation of the faithful unto salvation. This New Covenant was not unknown to the Old Testament Church. Jeremiah, referring to it, states that God would put his laws in the inward parts of his people, and write them in their hearts. The moral law was the "ministration of death," inasmuch as it knew nothing tion be glory, much more doth ^mthe ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.

10 For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth.

11 For if that which was done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious.

12 Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great ²plainness of speech;

13 And not as Moses, ²which put a veil over his face, that the children of Israel ²could not stedfastly look to the end of that which is abolished:

14 But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same veil untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which veil is done away in Christ.

15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read, ²the veil is upon their heart.

16 Nevertheless, ⁴when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away.

17 Now ¹the Lord is that Spirit: and ²where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass ¹the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as ²by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Paul's sincerity and diligence in preaching, 8 and his troubles for the same.

THEREFORE, seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not;

2 But have renounced the hidden things of ¹dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but, ²by manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

of mercy. Yet even that dispensation, considered by itself, was glorious; although compared with that of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, its lustre was dimmed, and in a manner lost. Justice is, doubtless, an attribute full of glory in an unfallen world; but for those who have fallen from their first estate, and incurred the penalty of transgression, it is terrible. Mercy alone can meet their case, and that mercy is to be found only in the Gospel. The ministration of the Spirit, therefore, is unspeakably more glorious in the sight of fallen men. Ver. 12-18. This glorious Gospel inspires boldness in those who are accepted in the Beloved to publish the glad tidings of great joy. No folly is so impenetrable as that of pride and prejudice; the glory of Christ could not be seen by those who were filled with them. Till the veil be removed, the Jew will never turn to the Lord to receive his blessing, and rejoice in the privileges of his salvation. The souls of the Elect are united with the Lord Jesus, through faith in the Divine testimony concerning him; and that faith is maintained by the indwelling of the Eternal Spirit. That Spirit implies freedom from sin, both in its guilt and in its power. He prompts the soul to a perpetual war, and renders it victor over everything connected with the old man. Thus the believer is happy in service, humble in worship, strong in hope, and set apart for the service of the Lord, as a vessel meet for the Master's use.

Chap. IV. 1-4. The reception of mercy invigorates the soul. The truth of God is intended to bear on the consciences of men. Religion is essentially and emphatically a thing of conscience. Nothing is accomplished till conscience has been roused from its slumber; once awakened, nothing will satisfy it but the riches of grace, the blood of the cross, the finished work of the Lord Jesus! Although the Gospel is as clear as the light, it is hid to those who are blinded by sin; and till the Spirit of God open the eyes of their understanding, they will never perceive the glory of God in the face of Jesus. The god of this world resorts to every artifice to keep them in darkness, that he may keep them in bondage; this is the sole condition of the maintenance of his empire. When the light of the Gospel once shines into them, they become conscious of their condition, and from that moment impatient to be freed from their fetters, that they may enter into the liberty of the sons of God. Jesus, as "the image of God," is the pattern of his people, who are all renewed in his likeness. Ver. 5-12. The theme of all true preaching is, "Christ Jesus the Lord;" this alone is the truth which the Spirit will bless to the salvation of souls. All wisdom which excludes this is folly, and the arts of mere heathen eloquence will prove utter impotence for quickening men dead in trespasses and sins. The Eternal Spirit will use nothing but his own testimony to renovate the souls of the elect. Men who have watched through the darkness of the night, and beheld the sunrise, are as conscious of the change as of their own existence; and the subjects of grace are not less conscious of the shining of the Spirit of God into their hearts, and of the discovery of the 16 For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day.

17 For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory;

18 While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.

CHAPTER V.

1 In hope of immortal glory, and in expectation of it, and of the general judgment, he laboureth to keep a good conscience.

FOR we know, that, if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

2 For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven:

3 If so be that being clothed, we shall not be found naked.

4 For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

5 Now he that hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit.

6 Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord:

Let him be.

7 (For we walk by faith, not by sight:)

8 We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.

9 Wherefore we labour, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him.

10 For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.

11 Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men: but we are made manifest unto God; and I trust also are made manifest in your consciences.

12 For we commend not ourselves again unto you, but give you occasion to glory on our behalf, that ye may have somewhat to answer them which glory in appearance, and not in heart.

13 For whether we be beside ourselves, it is to God; or whether we be sober, it is for your cause.

14 For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead:

15 And that he died for all, that they which live should henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

16 Wherefore, henceforth know we no man after the flesh; yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.

17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, which flows from the light thus imparted. It is a thing of the most intense reality, producing effects the most extraordinary. Pride is the reigning sin of men, and, hence, the entire Gospel system is so constructed as to provide for its humiliation both in the propagators of the Gospel and in the receivers of it. Nothing is more obvious than that there must be a Divine power attending the Gospel, since nothing else can produce the effects which flow from it. Nothing was more clear than that the "excellency of the power is of God, and not of man." Without learning, rank, wealth, or station, had the apostles been left to themselves, it would never have been said of them that they "turned the world upside down." Ver. 13-16. As the Church exists for Christ, everything exists for the Church; "All things are for your sakes." Thus Divine wisdom carries out the purpose of Divine love. The privilege of prayer is generally understood; the duty of thanksgiving is not so. It is, indeed, too little thought of; but answers to prayer ought to produce corresponding thanksgiving. The religion of the heavenly world consists, in no small degree, of thanksgiving. This is an exercise in which angels, as well as the redeemed of the Lord, can engage, and even unite with them. Ver. 17, 18. It is most consolatory for the people of God to know that their afflictions partake of the nature of seed, which will, without fail, bring forth fruit to their eternal welfare in the world to come. The smallest good or evil acquires an unutterable importance, the moment that it is impressed with the stamp of eternity. Good that shall last for ever is good indeed! Why, then, should the people of God murmur at the troubles which the Gospel may bring upon them? They who have done most for the Lord will, unquestionably, enjoy most; but suffering is greater than doing, and the chief of sufferers will be the chief of saints.

Chap. V. 1-4. A frail tent presents a striking contrast to a substantial house, founded on a rock, and constructed with the most durable materials. These, however, are but imperfect emblems of the bodies which Christians now occupy, and those which will be furnished them at the resurrection. Through trial, disease, decay, and death, the present abode is one of affliction, manifested by sadness, sighs, tears, and groans, which will be unknown in the house from heaven. Life here, to the people of God, under its happiest condition, is still, more or less, one of pain and sorrow; it is a burden to the spirit, and a source of manifold trouble. Death, however, is not to be sought for its own sake, but as a step to life eternal; before we can obtain possession of the other body, we must surrender the present: flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom. Ver. 5-15. The "earnest of the Spirit" is the special portion and privilege of the elect; it is the first-fruits of the felicity of heaven. This is the source of all that grace, peace, confidence, consolation, and joy, that keep the heart and mind. If we have faith here, we shall have sight hereafter—nothing can separate between the child of God and his inheritance. The judgment to come has ever been a great power in the Christian system. The hardest heart is not wholly impervious to the idea. The conviction that it is just, and must come to pass, is too deeply rooted in the human soul to be wholly extirpated. It is a part of man's constitution; his thoughts have ever "accused or else excused one another." Were this fact, and the doctrines therewith connected, to be thoroughly realised by any individual, or number of individuals, the result would be a course of life which would lead a godless world to entertain doubts of their perfect sanity. Even in the times of the prophet, they who "departed from iniquity were accounted mad;" but such conduct as arises from the correct knowledge and implicit faith of the Gospel awakens a charge of much increased passed away; behold, all things are become new.

18 And ¹all things are of God, ²who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and ³hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation;

19 To wit, that ¹God was in Christ, ²reconciling the world unto himself, ³not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath ⁴committed unto us the word of reconciliation.

20 Now then we are ¹ambassadors for Christ, ²as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you ³in Christ's stead, ⁴be ye reconciled to God.

21 For he hath made him to be sin for us, ¹who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

CHAPTER VI.

4 Of Paul's faithfulness in the ministry. 14 Exhortation to avoid idolaters.

WE then, as workers together with him, ¹beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.

2 (For he saith, I have heard thee in ¹a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation.)

3 Giving no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed:

4 But in all things ¹approving ourselves ²as the ministers of God, ³in much patience, in ⁴afflictions, in necessities, in distresses.

intensity. Even the most zealous of the prophets could hardly be compared with the Apostle of the Gentiles. No wonder, then, that he seemed "beside himself" to men ignorant alike of the glorious Gospel and the true end of human existence. When the love of Christ shall once exert its constraining power on the world; it will put a new face on the human family. Ver. 16-21. The Gospel has to do, not with classes of men, but with the species—it is needful for all, and provision is made for its proclamation to all. The converted portion of the Jews completely changed their minds concerning the Messiah; they no longer cherished the delusion that he was to be a temporal prince, subduing the world, and rendering them the masters of mankind. Although they saw that he was, indeed, to establish a monarchy infinitely higher, more glorious, and more enduring, they perceived that it was to be of a spiritual character—"not of this world." This revolution of opinion, which, probably, first reached perfection in the mind of Paul himself, was such as to bring with it a change in all that appertained to man. Every believer of it was "a new creature; old things had passed away, and all things had become new." A hostile world is being subdued by blood; the love which gave the Lord to die for men, once understood and believed, becomes a power sufficient to conquer all things. A world listening to and receiving this Divine record, forthwith becomes a world reconciled; man reciprocates the love of God, and earth is assimilated to heaven.

Chap. VI. 1-13. By "receiving the grace of God in vain," is not to be understood the belief of it with the heart; since whenever it is so believed, it will produce its proper effects; but where the message comes, and men will not hear it, or hearing will not receive the love

7 By ¹the word of truth, by ²the power of God, by ³the armour of righteousness on the right hand and on the left,

8 By honour and dishonour, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true;

9 As unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed;

10 As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things.

11 O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, ²our heart is enlarged.

12 Ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels.

13 Now, for a recompence in the same, (I speak as unto my children,) ¹be ye also enlarged.

14 Be ye not ²unequally yoked together with unbelievers; ³for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?

15 And ¹what concord hath Christ with Belial? ²or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?

16 And ¹what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ²ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, ³I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and ⁴I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

17 Wherefore, ¹come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; ²and I will receive you,

18 And will be ³a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty, of it, then it comes in vain. To "receive," generally means to believe, but it cannot really be so here; men may profess to receive it when they do not. Such profession is vain for purposes of salvation; such an issue will, notwithstanding, redound to the condemnation of the hypocrite. The brilliant portrait here drawn serves to reveal the nature of the life led by the apostles and first preachers; the Christians of these days have but a slender conception of the sufferings they underwent for their contemporaries, and the generations which were to follow. Ver. 14-18. This is one of the most important New Testament scriptures, as bearing on the interests of individuals, families, and the Church of God; neglect of the injunction here laid down has led to innumerable evils in every age of the world. The expression has clearly a reference to the laws of Moses, by which animals of different kinds were not allowed to be yoked together; such unions were unseemly, unnatural, and such as even the beasts themselves recoiled from. For a Christian to be united in marriage with an idolater, was both morally and spiritually improper, and could only be attended by loss and danger to the Christian, and with misery to both. Although priestly and ritual idolatry has disappeared in our land, another, and a far more perilous kind of it, survives; and hence the precept is still binding with undiminished force. While, externally, things on all sides are wonderfully changed, human nature continues the same; the Christian and the idolater are still opposed to each other in spirit, purpose, and pursuit, as much as when the words of the apostle were originally uttered. This unequal yoking, also, abounds on every hand, and is attended with all its original and lamentable consequences. But the principle goes beyond matrimony, and comprehends all needless

CHAPTER VII.

8 His tenderness toward those whom he had reproved.
10 His description of true repentance.

HAVING therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all ^afilthiness of the flesh and spirit, ^bperfecting holiness in the fear of God.

2 Receive us; ^cwe have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, we have defrauded no man.

3 I speak not this to condemn you: for I have said before, that ^dye are in our hearts ^eto die and live with you.

4 Great is my boldness of speech toward you, ^fgreat is my glorying of you: ^gI am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful in all our tribulation.

5 For, when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side: ^hwithout were fightings, within were fears.

6 Nevertheless God, ⁱthat comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by the coming of Titus;

7 And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted in you, when he told us your ^jearnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me; so that I rejoiced the more.

8 For though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent, ^kthough I did repent: for I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

9 Now ^lI rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry ^mafter a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.

10 For godly sorrow worketh ⁿrepentance to salvation not to be repented of:

CHAPTER VIII.

1 He stirreth them up to contribute to the saints.
16 Commendeth Titus and others.

MOREOVER, brethren, ^bwe do you to wit of ^cthe grace of God bestowed on ^dthe churches of Macedonia;

2 How that ^ein a great trial of affliction, ^fthe abundance of their joy, and ^gtheir deep poverty, abounded unto ^hthe riches of their ⁱliberality.

friendships and close intimacies with ungodly men, which are fraught with danger to the righteous. On behalf of these forbidden marriages and friendships, it has, however, been often urged by the erring party, that they hoped to benefit the unbelieving; but very rarely, indeed, has such a hope been realised. Apart from the fact, however, Christians may not do evil that good may come. When God has spoken, there is an end to all discussion as to the possible benefits of transgression. The commandment is absolute—"only in the Lord." in everything else, believers may consult their feelings, taste, and judgment. Let all Christians, then, ponder the precept, that they may learn both their duty and their danger. The promise made to obedience is most precious. Should it, in any case, cost the foolish heart a pang, no matter; the pang will be compensated a thousandfold in time, and the blessing will extend to eternity.

Chap. VII. 1-8. This exhortation refers to the promises contained in the closing verses of the previous chapter. Thus the promises are specially intended to bear on Christian sanctification. They are the foundation of hope, which is one of the greatest powers known to human nature. Without this, there is neither strength nor happiness. The believer is to make his spiritual progress not a thing by-the-bye, but a business. He is in everything to labour after conformity to the Divine law and the Saviour's example. Living up to the light he possesses, and the strength he enjoys, he is to be ever looking to Jesus for more of all that he needs.

Ver. 9-16. There are two sorrows known to men, and followed respectively by their appropriate results—life and death. Godly sorrow can be felt by none but godly men who have fallen into sin, or by true penitents waking up from the sleep of death. In the one case, it springs from a sense of ingratitude and conviction of unfaithfulness—of sin against light and love, promises and vows; and in the other, it is the fruit of rebellion and guilt—feeling danger, and yet apprehending mercy. The "sorrow of the world," although altogether different in its nature and results, is yet a terrible reality; it works death, involving both soul and body in eternal ruin. Sin has often the effect of proving the truth of grace. It did so in the case of Peter, whose "bitter weeping" did more to demonstrate that his heart was right than the loudest boasting or aught else could ever have done. The Corinthian Church presents a striking illustration of the general truth. As a community, they had seriously erred, and they sincerely repented, losing no time in repairing the wrong they had done. An example is here set by which modern Churches may profit. Notwithstanding the evils which prevailed to such an extent in the Church at Corinth, it is clear that there was among them a vast amount of true religion. It is gratifying and cheering to think that the same remark applies to all modern denominations of Christians. Even where carnality lamentably abounds, there is much true piety, not a little of which, it may be, is hid from human eyes.

Chap. VIII. 1-5. Every condition of life serves to prove and illustrate piety. The extreme poverty of the 4 Praying us with much entreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us the fellowship of ¹the ministering to the saints.

5 And this they did, not as we hoped; but ²first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God:

6 Inasmuch that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same ³grace also.

7 Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in ¹faith, and utterance, and ²knowledge, and in all diligence, and ³in your love to us; ⁴see that ye abound in ⁵this grace also.

12 For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

13 For I mean not that other men be eased, and you burdened;

14 But by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want; that there may be equality:

15 As it is written, He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack.

the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you.

24 Wherefore ⁵shew ye to them, and before the churches, the proof of your love, and of our boasting on your behalf.

CHAPTER IX.

¹ He sheweth why he sent Titus, 6 and stirreth them up to be bountiful in alms, 10 which yield them a bountiful increase.

FOR as touching the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you:

2 For I know ¹the forwardness of your mind, for which I boast of you to them of Macedonia, that Achaia was ready a year ago; and your zeal hath ²provoked very many.

3 Yet have I sent the brethren, lest our churches of Macedonia "abounded unto the riches of their liberality;" such was their zeal, that out of their poverty they gave more than, with less zeal, they would have given had their wealth abounded. Their conduct pre-eminently adorned their profession. Had they contributed from their opulence in such a spirit, it would have been most creditable; but when they had need to receive rather than to give, and yet gave so plentifully to those that were still poorer than themselves, they furnished the highest proof the case admitted, that their hearts had been enlarged by the Gospel. There is some difficulty as to the fifth verse, which may easily be overcome: "not as we hoped" may be rendered, "not as we feared;" since the original word is used both ways. In this view the apostle is to be understood as fearing that, from their poverty, they would not be able to make a collection; in the former view it would signify that their liberality far exceeded his hopes. In either case, the great truth remains the same—that they gave themselves first to the Lord, and then to the apostles, to be taught his will; and then shared their little substance with their still more impoverished brethren. Ver. 6-24. Paul, together with his extraordinary spirituality, uniformly shews himself a consummate man of business, prompt to use appropriate means for the accomplishment of important ends. That multitudes may be brought to act in harmony, there must be both system and agency; this matter, therefore, was committed to the skilful hands of Titus, who brought it to a happy termination.

The ninth verse supplies a motive to charity, which will remain in unimpaired force to the end of the world; the example of Jesus, once realised, a mine of charity will be opened, which will never be exhausted by the wants of the poor, or the necessities of the kingdom. The Church of God is a family, and the Father's pleasure is, that the rich members of it shall help the poor, the strong bear the burdens of the weak, and whatever is wanting to the one shall be supplied by the other. The case of the manna in the wilderness furnishes a striking illustration. The "brother whose praise was in all the churches" is not made known to us; but all antiquity concurred in the belief that he was Luke; and such is the probability. As a man of character, therefore, he was "chosen of the churches" to "travel" with the apostle to Jerusalem with the contribution. A lesson of prudence in money matters is here taught to ministers, officers, and leading men in the Church of God; it is not enough that they be upright, and that the Churches confide in them; the arrangements ought to be such as to protect them against the possibility of slander.

Chap. IX. 1-15. Here, again, we have a striking example of Paul's business habits. He everywhere illustrates his own doctrine, that Jehovah is the God of order, and not of confusion. It is much to be desired that modern Christians would carry their business into their religion, and their religion into their business; this is indispensable to the exhibition of perfect Christianity.

boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf; that, as I said, ye may be ready:

4 Lest haply if ¹they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, you) should ²be ashamed in this same confident boasting.

5 Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your ¹bounty, ²whereof ye had notice before, that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness.

6 But this I say, ¹He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

7 Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for ¹God loveth a cheerful giver.

8 And ¹God is able to make ²all grace abound toward you; that ye, ¹always having all-sufficiency in all things, ²may abound to every good work:

9 (As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: ¹his righteousness remaineth for ever.

10 Now ¹he that ministereth seed to the sower, both minister bread for your food, and ²multiply your seed sown, and ³increase the fruits of your righteousness:)

11 Being enriched in every thing to all ¹bountifulness, ²which causeth through us thanksgiving to God.

12 For the administration of this service not only supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God;

13 (While by the experiment of this ministration, they glorify God for your ¹professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men.)

14 And ¹by their prayer for you, which long after you for ²the exceeding grace of God in you.

15 ¹Thanks be unto God for ²his unspeakable gift.

CHAPTER X.

1 Paul's spiritual might and authority. 12 Not to stretch beyond our measure.

NOW I Paul myself beseech you ¹by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who in ²presence am base among

Paul does not satisfy himself with the display of the Saviour's example, in order to stimulate Christians; he also appeals, with the utmost force, to another powerful principle in human nature. The proportion between sowing and reaping is established by the Divine equity, and nothing can disturb it. The Corinthians, therefore, are given to understand that life is a seed-time, and every Christian a husbandman, and that the breadth of the sowing will determine the amount of the reaping. All charity, to possess any value before God, must be heart-work, without regard to the views our fellow-men may entertain concerning us. It is not with them we have to do, but with the Father of lights, the Searcher of hearts, and the Giver of every good and perfect gift. How cheering the statement—"God loveth a cheerful giver!" Man, in this, resembles God; a valuable gift, you, but being absent am ¹bold toward you:

2 But I beseech you, that I may not be bold when I am present with that confidence wherewith I think to be bold against some, which ²think of us as if ³we walked according to the flesh.

3 For though we walk in the flesh, ⁴we do not war after the flesh:

4 (For ¹the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but ²'mighty' through God ³to the pulling down of strong holds;)

5 Casting ¹down ²'imaginations,' and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to ³the obedience of Christ;

6 And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled.

7 Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? ¹If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him of himself think this again, that, as he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's.

8 For though I should boast somewhat more of our authority, (which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction,) I should not be ashamed;

9 That I may not seem as if I would ¹terrify you by letters.

10 For his letters ¹(say they) are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.

11 Let such an one think this, that such as we are in word by letters when we are absent, such will we be also in deed when we are present.

12 For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they, measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, ¹are not wise.

13 But we will not boast of things without our measure, but ²'according to the measure of the ¹rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you.

14 For we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you; for we are come as far as to you also in preaching ¹the gospel of Christ:

15 Not ¹boasting of things without our accompanied by an express grudge, is deprived of half its value. Christians, in giving, are ever to remember that they are only giving what they have received from their heavenly Father to less favoured portions of the brotherhood, and that the ocean of his bounty has neither bottom nor shore. To make a good use of what we have, is the sure way to obtain more. Multitudes have become wealthy through liberality, and others poor by hoarding. "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, yet it tendeth to poverty."

Chap. X. 1-6. "The meekness and gentleness of Christ" is a wonderful expression. Remembering that he is our model, it behoves us at all times to study his example. These attributes, therefore, ought to con-measure, that is, of other men's labours; but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be ⁸enlarged by you according to our rule abundantly, 16 To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's ⁹line of things made ready to our hand.

17 But ¹⁰he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

18 For not he that commendeth himself is approved, ¹¹but whom the Lord commendeth.

3 But I fear, lest by any means, ⁴as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from ⁵the simplicity that is in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh ⁶preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye ⁷receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear ⁸with him.

5 For I suppose I was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles.

6 But though I be rude in speech, yet not in knowledge: but we have been thoroughly made manifest among you in all things.

7 Have I committed an offence in abasing myself, that ye might be exalted, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely?

8 I robbed other churches, taking wages of them, to do you service.

9 And when I was present with you, and wanted, ⁹I was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me the brethren which came from Macedonia supplied; and in all things I have kept myself from being burdensome unto you, and so will I keep myself.

10 As ¹the truth of Christ is in me, ²no man shall stop me of this ³boasting in the regions of Achaia.

11 Wherefore? because I love you not? ⁴God knoweth.

12 But what I do, that I will do, that I may cut off occasion from them which desire occasion; that wherein they glory, they may be found even as we.

13 For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

14 And no marvel; ¹for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.

15 Therefore it is no great thing if ²his ministers also be transformed as ³the ministers of righteousness; ⁴whose end shall be according to their works.

16 I say again, Let no man think me a fool: if otherwise, yet as a fool ⁵receive me, that I may boast myself a little.

17 That which I speak, ⁶I speak it not after the Lord, but as it were foolishly, in this confidence of boasting.

18 Seeing that ⁷many glory after the flesh, I will glory also.

19 For ye suffer fools gladly, seeing ye yourselves are wise.

20 For ye suffer, if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take of you, if a man exalt himself, if a man smite you on the face.

21 I speak as concerning reproach, ⁸as though we had been weak. Howbeit, whereinsoever any is bold, (I speak foolishly,) I am bold also.

22 Are they ⁹Hebrews? so am I. Are they Israelites? so am I. Are they ¹⁰the seed of Abraham? so am I.

23 Are they ¹¹ministers of Christ? (I speak as a fool,) ¹²I am more: in labours more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft.

stitute a prime element of our character. The utter absence of these virtues renders questionable the truth of a man's profession. If that which was most prominent in the Lord himself be not at all observable in his professed people, there is reason to fear either that they deceive themselves, or that they are departing from the living God. The weapons of this world's warfare are, in their own way, mighty: navies and armies, with their instruments of destruction, are terrible in acting against man and his works; but for moral and spiritual purposes, they are utterly impotent. Not so the weapons used by the apostles—inspiration, tongues, and miracles, all bespeaking the presence and the power of God. Before these the powers of the world were as nothing. Ver. 7-18. The false teachers, and enemies of the apostle, had nothing to oppose to his mighty deeds, but groundless insinuations, bitter and slanderous speeches. Their ignorance fed their vanity, which led the apostle to overwhelm them by a statement of facts touching his apostolic labours. It behoves the faithful to glory only in the Lord, and to rest satisfied with nothing short of the Divine approbation; with this they can well afford to face the frowns, and to set at nought the hostility of the world.

Chap. XI. 1-9. It is always humbling to see men, great and good, who have done and suffered much for the cause of Christ, requiring to defend themselves against the slanderous accusations of men noted only for vanity, noise, and mischief: yet such was often the condition of the holy apostle. While the rule is silence, there are occasions when, for the truth's sake, this must be done; and, when that is the case, it should be gone about with the air of a "man of God," and the spirit of a faithful servant of the Lord. The way in which Paul here argues is deeply affecting: "When I was present with you, and wanted, I was chargeable to no man." It is painful to see the Divinely-commissioned apostle—the spiritual parent of so numerous a progeny, abounding in wealth—in want of bread, and under the necessity of looking elsewhere for a morsel to satisfy the cravings of hunger! There was verily a fault among the Corinthians in suffering these false teachers, from whom they had received no benefit whatever, to introduce and maintain such a state of things as rendered this delicate determination of the apostle necessary. Ver. 10-15. The firmness of the apostle, as here exemplified, is not a little remarkable. He attached the utmost importance to the preservation of the most perfect independence even of the which it is not ²lawful for a man to utter.

5 Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.

6 For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me.

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me ^aa thorn in the flesh, ^bthe messenger of Satan ^cto buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.

8 For this thing ^aI besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.

9 And he said unto me, ^bMy grace is sufficient for thee; ^cfor my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather ^dglory in my infirmities, that ^ethe power of Christ may rest upon me.

10 Therefore ^mI take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, ⁿfor Christ's sake: ^ofor when I am weak, then am I strong.

11 I am become a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you; ^pfor in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though I be nothing.

12 Truly ^qthe signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

13 For what is it wherein you were inferior to other churches, except it be that ^rI myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.

14 Behold, the third time I am ready to come to you; and I will not be burdensome to you: ^sfor I seek not yours, but you: for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

right-minded portion of the Church; this he did simply to "out off occasion from those who desired occasion." There is here a principle of prudence which Christians do well to consider when placed in circumstances that seem to call for it. Paul, notwithstanding his unparalleled forbearance, here speaks out with great boldness, calling those impostors by their proper names—"false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ." How such men should have gained a footing, and kept it for a single day, among the Corinthians, is quite unaccountable. They neither imparted nor possessed any spiritual gifts; they could work, and they attempted to work, no miracle; they gave no proof whatever of a Divine mission;—and yet they succeeded to persuade many to consider them as apostles, and to reject the claims of Paul! This is one of the most extraordinary facts in history. These unprincipled and mischievous men he proclaims to be "ministers of Satan, transformed as ministers of righteousness," doomed to share with their master the reward of their iniquity. Ver. 18-33. We owe to these false apostles the touching picture here drawn of the sufferings of Paul, which throws a flood of light on his character and labours. Every part of it will reward prayerful perusal and devout meditation. It is a portrait of toil and suffering to which there is no parallel. Christians do well to imitate Paul, in glorying only in their infirmities. This is always safe; and, while it abases themselves, it exalts their Master: when they are weak, then they are strong; when they feel that they are nothing, to them the Lord is all in all.

Chap. XII. 1-5. The exact period of this marvellous vision it is impossible to determine. It has been supposed to have taken place after Paul's contention with Barnabas; and, in support of this view, reference has been made to Acts xxii. 17, where he says, "It came to pass, that, when I was come again to Jerusalem, even while I prayed in the temple, I was in a trance;" but there is no certainty in the matter, neither is it at all important. Ver. 6-18. Paul's "thorn," the messenger of Satan, has given risen to much useless speculation. The correct interpretation of the language requires attention to these two things: it was something peculiarly painful, and something which proceeded from the Wicked One—something deeply humiliating, and intimately connected with the body, and which immediately followed the heavenly vision. Satan might have been the agent in the infliction of it, or he might have used it to distress the feelings of the apostle; at any rate, he had materially to do with it. But beyond what is here related by the apostle himself, nothing is known concerning the subject. It is more important, however, to notice the recorded result: it drove the apostle straightway to the mercy-seat.

15 And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you; though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.

16 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

17 Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?

18 I desired Titus, and with him I sent a brother: did Titus make a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?

19 Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves unto you? we speak before God in Christ: but we do all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.

20 For I fear, lest, when I come, I shall not find you such as I would, and that I shall bewail many which have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanness, and fornication, and lasciviousness which they have committed.

CHAPTER XIII.

THIS is the third time I am coming to you. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty in you.

4 For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God: for we also are weak in him, but we shall live with him by the power of God toward you.

5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves: know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?

¶ The second epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi, a city of Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas.

The answer, however, notwithstanding the urgency, was delayed; but the afflicted suppliant persevered, till at length he succeeded. The thing sought, indeed, was refused in terms, but the spirit of it was graciously and fully granted. It deserves to be particularly noted, that Paul presented his prayer directly to the Lord Jesus, which, if the passage stood alone, would prove his proper divinity; he heard the cry of his servant, and answered him from his holy hill. The fact is full of instruction to the people of God. The Saviour knows what is for their good, and it is cheering to reflect that even their erring prayers will be rectified by his compassionate wisdom, and that he will deal with them in love and mercy. What is best for them he will give in such measure, and in such manner, as shall most promote their own welfare, and his glory. When the lesson of Divine love shall have been fully learned, then each will glory in his infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest on him. Ver. 19-21. Paul, notwithstanding his letters and messengers, still had reason to fear that, in visiting Corinth, he would not find things in a satisfactory state. While, for aught that appears to the contrary, they were, in point of privilege, the most favoured Church in the heathen world, they were, as a fellowship, far from purity; they had among them a large mixture of unconverted men. The picture here drawn of their moral condition is frightful, and such as it is not easy to reconcile with so great an amount of spiritual gifts. There are few Evangelical communities in our time that would not gain by a comparison with the Church at Corinth—a fact which shews that there is no connexion between gifts and graces, miracles and piety.

Chap. XIII. 1-9. The apostle had been to Corinth once, and he had made up his mind to visit it a second time; but when ready, he was prevented by circumstances, and now he was a third time intent on a journey to them. Menace was foreign to the spirit of the apostle; and nothing but a sense of duty could have led him to speak as he does here, when he forewarns the offenders that he will not spare. So hardened were a portion of the Church, that, notwithstanding all the signs, wonders, and mighty deeds which Paul had performed in their city, they actually demanded a proof of Christ speaking in him. There are no lengths to which misguided men will not go; and the servants of the Lord should be fully prepared for it. The Corinthians are here given to understand that, instead of preposterously examining into the ground of Paul's apostleship, they would be better employed in examining into the state of their own souls. If the Spirit of Christ was in them, they bore his image, and his kingdom was set up in their hearts. These were the points with which they were concerned. If in very deed they were the people of God, these things marked their characters. Ver. 10-14. An awful intimation is here given by the apostle of a mysterious power committed to him, which, under circumstances, might be used for the punishment of the rebellious. The prayer here presented clearly indicates the perfect unity of Father, Son, and Spirit. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ includes all that is treasured up in him for the good of his people and necessary to their salvation. The love of the Father comprises all that it has provided for his children; it includes their election, predestination, calling—justification, sanctification, and adoption. In the communion of the Holy Spirit are comprised his gifts, graces, and lessons—comfort in sorrow, strength in weakness, and assistance in supplication. With all

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

The date of this Epistle is uncertain, but its object is clearly to counteract the efforts of those false teachers who were labouring to mar the work of the apostle, by urging on his converts throughout Galatia the necessity of circumcision, and the observance of the laws of Moses, as well as faith in the Gospel, in order to justification and salvation. These men made a skilful use of circumstances to strengthen their cause: Paul had not been one of the twelve Apostles who accompanied the Saviour, and received from him the Gospel communication; circumcision was still preached in Judea, and the laws of Moses observed under the eyes of the true Apostles in Jerusalem, and even Paul himself, in some cases at least, had practised it. All these points admitted of easy explanation in conformity with the true doctrine of justification; but setting aside the explanation, these men employed the facts to support their own views, and to uproot those of the apostle, as well as to overthrow his authority. In this, as in cases of opposition, the cause of truth, in the end, was the gainer: the conduct of those men led Paul to discuss the subject of justification in a manner so full and perfect, as at once, and for ever, to settle the question. Special service in this way has been rendered to the Church in every age. The argument of this Epistle was wielded with mighty power by Luther in his assaults on Popery, and is still available against all who would substitute anything for, or mix up anything with, the pure Gospel of the grace of God, as a ground of hope before him.

CHAPTER I.

1 Paul wondereth that they have so soon left him and the gospel, 11 which he learned, not of men, but of God.

PAUL, an apostle, (not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead.)

2 And all the brethren which are with me, unto the churches of Galatia:

3 Grace be to you, and peace, from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ,

4 Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father:

5 To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6 I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel:

7 Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

8 But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

9 As we said before, so say I now again, these things, and all the things which these imply, the saints are rich indeed, requiring nothing the world can give, and dependent on nothing the world can take away.

Chap. I. 1-10. Paul at once asserts the Divine authority of his own mission, and the vicarious sufferings of Christ. The opening of the epistle is marked by unusual reserve and dignity; there is none of the affectionate and endearing language which distinguishes the other Epistles, although he melts as he advances. The conduct of the Galatians had been such as to shake the confidence, and to check the current of fatherly feeling. After expressing his astonishment, he at once directs his thunder against the false teachers, as men who, whatever they might pretend to the contrary, were enemies alike to the Gospel and the Lord that bought them. No terms, therefore, were to be kept with them: on that subject there was no room for discussion; they were setting themselves against the clearest light, endeavouring to sever the Church from the Lord of Glory, and, therefore, to be dealt with summarily. Ver. 11-24. Paul had no personal reasons for opposing the doctrine; for if 10 For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

11 But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

12 For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it;

14 And profited in the Jews' religion above many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,

16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood:

it had been true, none occupied a better position than himself, alike on the score of birth, education, and character. His conversion, therefore, was proof of his sincerity, and the teaching which led to it was sufficient guarantee for knowledge. All that he taught he obtained, not from men, but directly from the Lord Jesus. Everything he taught concerning doctrine, experience, ordinances, or polity, he had received by immediate revelation. His call and qualification, therefore, had in them much more of the marvellous and supernatural than those of any of the twelve Apostles. So perfect, indeed, was his knowledge, so complete his preparation for his work, and so self-evidencing the whole, as to preclude the slightest doubt on the subject, and to leave him as satisfied of the truth of the revelation made, and the commission given, as of his own existence. Having no need, on any ground whatever, to communicate with the other Apostles, he sought no interview with them, but proceeded at once to the field of his labours. It was no wonder if Paul's conversion made a great impression on the Gentile Churches; they might well look on it as a most material circumstance in connexion with Jewish persecution, and the progress of the Gospel. The power 17 Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus.

18 Then, after three years, ^aI went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

19 But other of the apostles saw I none, save James ^xthe Lord's brother.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not.

21 Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia;

22 And was unknown by face unto ⁷the churches of Judea which were ⁱⁿ Christ:

23 But they had heard only, that he which persecuted us in times past, now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

24 And ^athey glorified God in me.

CHAPTER II.

1 He sheweth when he went up again to Jerusalem, and why. 14 Of justification by faith, and not by works. 19 They that are so justified live not in sin.

THEN, fourteen years after, ^aI went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.

2 And I went up by revelation, ^band communicated unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but ¹privately to them ^cwhich were of reputation, lest by any means ^dI should run, or had run, in vain.

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our ^eliberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, that could accomplish it was equal to anything; and after this no man was to be despaired of. They rightly judged that he was intended for great and arduous service, and they, therefore, glorified God for his arrest and conversion. The conversions of the bitterest enemies of Christ are among the best evidences of the truth of the Gospel, and such converts are among the most valuable instruments for promoting his cause on the earth. Among the whole Jewish nation, probably, there was not in the general estimation a young man so unlikely to become a Christian, and an apostle of Christianity. The conversion of the High Priest himself was not less likely; and had it occurred, it would hardly have excited more astonishment. The wisdom of God is strikingly manifested in the event, and in everything connected with it. Had Paul, previous to his conversion, been an obscure, quiet, and harmless youth, the change would have attracted no notice; but Paul was the hope of the High Priest, and his name the terror of the Church of God. When the High Priest gave him letters to Damascus, he little anticipated the occurrences which were at hand, and the part to be performed by the youthful zealot throughout the world; and as little did the young man himself. The ways of the Lord are a great deep, and he leads the vessels of mercy in a way which they know not.

Chap. II. 1-10. It was not till after a long course of years, that Paul went up to Jerusalem and saw the Apostles. At his first visit he met Peter and James, and tarried with them a few days, but received from them no knowledge which he had not before. This was three years after his conversion; and, eleven years after, no, not for an hour, 'that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

6 But of those who seemed to be somewhat, whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: ^aGod accepteth no man's person; for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing to me:

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;

8 (For ^bhe that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, ^cthe same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles:)

9 And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived ^dthe grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that ^ewe should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

10 Only they would ^fthat we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do.

11 But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

12 For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew, and separated himself, ^gfearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And ^hthe other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly, according to ⁱthe truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the

he went up again by express revelation; but the object of this visit was neither to receive instruction nor sanction from the Apostles, but to answer a very different purpose in the arrangements of Divine Providence. The case of Titus demonstrates the course pursued by Paul, who neither circumcised him before, nor suffered him to be circumcised at Jerusalem, which so far went completely to establish his position. On this occasion, Paul stated frankly to the Apostles the Gospel which he preached among the Gentiles; and the interview brought him neither correction nor instruction. The Apostles saw at once that he had been taught in the same school with themselves, and taught as abundantly to profit, and that he was clearly called to the apostleship of the Gentiles. His work was its own witness. The power which everywhere attended him was undeniable proof of the Lord's presence. Thus tested, indeed, the proofs of his mission far exceeded those even of the most favoured of the other Apostles. They, therefore, fell in promptly with the obvious arrangements of Providence, and, leaving Paul to work among the heathen, confined their labours to their own countrymen. The only suggestion on which they ventured was, that the poor among the Gentile Churches should be remembered; but even that was unnecessary, for the same truth, wherever received, produced the same effects. Paul was forward to it. Ver. 11-16. The case of Abraham, which was a great historical fact, now served a special purpose, as powerfully bearing on the question of justification by the simple faith of the Gospel. Men of fixed principles ought to be unmoved; but the fear of man bringeth a snare, which the most resolute and adroit do not always escape. Peter, notwithstanding Jews, ^awhy compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

15 We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles,

16 Knowing ^athat a man is not justified by the works of the law, ^bbut by the faith of Jesus Christ, even ^cwe have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: ^dfor by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

17 But if, ^ewhile we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, ^fis therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I ^athrough the law am dead to the law, ^bthat I might live unto God.

20 I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, ^cbut Christ liveth in me: and ^dthe life which I now live in the flesh ^eI live by the faith of the Son of God, ^fwho loved me, and gave himself for me.

21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then ^aChrist is dead in vain.

CHAPTER III.

it was ^aaccounted to him for righteousness.

7 Know ye therefore, that ^athey which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.

8 And the scripture, foreseeing that ^aGod would justify the heathen through faith, ^bpreached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, ^cIn thee shall all nations be blessed.

9 So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law are ^aunder the curse: for it is written, ^bCursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

11 But ^athat no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, ^bThe just shall live by faith.

12 And the law is not of faith: but, The man that doeth them shall live in them.

13 Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, ^aCursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:

14 That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we ^amight receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.

15 Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's ^acovenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.

16 Now ^ato Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, ^bwhich is Christ.

17 And this I say, that ^athe covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, ^bthat it should make the promise of none effect.

18 For ^aif the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: ^bbut God gave it to Abraham by promise.

19 Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the pro-his characteristic courage, and perfect knowledge, was, for the moment, led astray by the presence of men less enlightened than himself. Instead of endeavouring to improve their views, he submitted to their prejudices; not so Paul, who brought the matter to an immediate issue by boldly stating the truth. He shewed that Jew and Gentile were on a perfect level before God, and both justified on the same grounds, and by the same means. Ver. 17-21. The law holds forth no encouragement to men to look to it for justification. Its demands are, explicit obedience, or death! Its business is to detect sin; it knows nothing of its removal. Paul here views himself as one with Christ, and, therefore, crucified with him on the accursed tree. As he died in Christ, so Christ lived in him. Can anything more strikingly, more beautifully, set forth the identity which obtains between Christ and his people? What can more forcibly expose the folly and the falsehood of those systems which set aside the Saviour's substitution and atonement for the sins of men? Had the law been able to justify those who broke it, the death of Christ would not have been necessary; and if he had died, it must have been to accomplish other ends than atoning for the sins of men. There is, therefore, but one method of justification, which is by faith in the blood of Jesus Christ. There is no other name given under heaven among men whereby we can be saved; but there is no sinner so great that he may not, in this way, escape the wrath to come.

Chap. III. 1-12. The great fact which Paul had been constantly pressing on the attention of the Gentile Churches, was the Cross of Christ. The doctrine deduced from this fact formed the central truth of the Christian system. Without atonement there was no Gospel, and there could be no salvation. The Galatians had shewn their folly by the culpable readiness with which they had received the statements of men who came to them without credentials, and in spite of the Divine evidence by which Paul had most abundantly supported the apostolic character of his ministry. Paul appeals to their own experience and observation in condemnation of their own conduct. By his means they had received the Holy Spirit, imparting both gifts and mise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator.

20 Now a mediator is not a mediator of one; but God is one.

21 Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.

22 But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.

23 But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed.

24 Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster.

26 For ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ.

27 For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.

28 There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.

29 And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

CHAPTER IV.

1 We were under the law till Christ came, 4 but Christ freed us. 22 We are the sons of Abraham by the free woman.

NOW I say, That the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all;

2 But is under tutors and governors, until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world:

4 But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law,

5 To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.

6 And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.

7 Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.

8 Howbeit then, when ye knew not God, ye did service unto them which by nature are no gods.

9 But now, after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage?

10 Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years.

11 I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain.

12 Brethren, I beseech you, be as I am; for I am as ye are: ye have not injured me at all.

13 Ye know how, through infirmity of the flesh, I preached the gospel unto you at the first.

14 And my temptation which was in my flesh ye despised not, nor rejected; but received me as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus.

15 Where is then the blessedness ye spake of? for I bear you record, that, if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy, because I tell you the truth?

graces. What gift or grace had those false teachers conferred on them? Paul, in addition to "ministering the Spirit," had worked miracles among them — thereby proving the Divine character of his mission, and the power of his ministry. What had the false teachers done? The conduct of the Galatians would not bear to be looked at in the light of common sense. It was altogether irrational, and more resembling that of men bewitched than that of men endowed with a sound mind. Ver. 13-29. Christ having taken the place of his people, and suffered in their stead, redeemed them from the consequences of breaking the law. The blessing of Abraham was the thing that was promised to him; and this they obtained through the death of the Son of God in the room of the guilty. The law is not against the promises, therefore, but in harmony with them. What the law could not do, the promises did, by the blood of sprinkling, and the righteousness of faith. The law was the schoolmaster to bring men to Christ, that they might be justified by faith in his atoning sacrifice, without works. All who believe in him are the children of God, who have been born of the Spirit, and are now become his temple. In Christ all distinctions are lost. The whole mass of regenerated spirit constitutes but one spiritual body, of which he is the Head. Abraham and all the faithful, whether Jew or Gentile, stand on the same foundation; as their guilt was accounted to Christ, and he suffered for it, so his righteousness is accounted to them, and they are saved by it. He is the end of the law for righteousness to them, and they are all complete in him.

Chap. IV. 1-11. Chance has no place in the empire of Providence. All events have their place in the mighty system; and nothing can derange their order. At the appointed period God sent forth his Son to perform the work assigned to him from eternity. Christ became the Son of man that men might become the sons of God; and the Divine Spirit dwells in all such as the Spirit of adoption. The children of God are his heirs through Jesus Christ; and none will fail of their inheritance. Work and merit have nothing to do with the matter: they reach their privileges through their birth, which is of the mere mercy of God; so that boasting is excluded. It is often profitable for Christians to be reminded of their state, character, and conduct before conversion. This should not offend, but humble them, and awaken a strong sense of obligation. It is particularly important to recollect that, in the union between God and them, the first movement was made by him; and not only so, but he imparted the power and grace which disposed and enabled them to meet him. It ill becomes those who have been the subjects of so much mercy and bounty to forget their Heavenly Benefactor, and return to courses they have long given up, and from which they confessedly derived no satisfaction, to say nothing of the danger to which they were thereby exposed. Ver. 12-16. The apostle now changes his voice, and gives free vent to the affection he cherished for the Galatian converts. Experience is a great help to a teacher. Paul quite understood the feelings of those misguided people; he had been reared with those notions which were operating so fatally among them. He had therefore compassion, and besought

17 They ²zealously affect you, but not well; yea, they would exclude ⁶you, that ye might affect them.

18 But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you.

19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until ⁴Christ be formed in you, 20 I desire to be present with you now, and to change my voice; for I ⁶stand in doubt of you.

21 Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons; the one by a bond maid, the other by a free woman.

23 But he who was of the bond woman was ⁷born after the flesh; ⁸but he of the free woman was by promise.

24 Which things are an allegory: for these are the two ⁷covenants; the one from the mount ⁸Sinai, ⁹which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar.

25 For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and ⁹answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.

26 But ¹⁰Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.

27 For it is written, Rejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not: for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband.

28 Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise.

29 But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born ¹¹after the Spirit, even so it is now.

CHAPTER V.

1 He moveth them to stand in their liberty, 3 and not to observe circumcision, 13 but rather love. 19 The works of the flesh, 22 and fruit of the Spirit.

STAND fast therefore in ¹the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.

3 For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is ²a debtor to do the whole law.

4 Christ ³is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ⁴ye are fallen from grace.

5 For we through the Spirit ⁵wait for the hope of righteousness by faith.

6 For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but ⁶faith which worketh by love.

7 Ye did run well; who did ⁷hinder you, that ye should not obey the truth?

8 This persuasion cometh not of him that calleth you.

9 A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.

10 I have ⁸confidence in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwise them to leave what he had left, and to build their hopes where he had built his—on the stoning sacrifice of Christ. Converts invariably love their spiritual parents; in the absence of this love, one of the principal proofs of conversion is wanting. True Christians require no exposition of verse 14; they, too, remember when they viewed the instruments of their conversion as “angels of God, even as Christ Jesus.” The heart leaped at the very sound of their names! The houses they dwelt in were viewed with reverence and love. They know “the blessedness,” the happiness, they spoke of. These words come home with peculiar power to the hearts of Christians who never knew happiness till they knew the Gospel, and were brought under the blood of sprinkling. Under the influence of that precious feeling, they would “have plucked out their own eyes” to please or comfort their spiritual fathers. There is nothing they would not have done or suffered to shew their gratitude and love. Great, then, as well as lamentable, is the change which puts an end to all this, and introduces an opposite state of mind, leading them to view their spiritual parents as enemies, only because they tell them the truth. The system which can produce such a state of things requires nothing else to prove that it is not of God. Ver. 17-31. To produce such effects always demands both time and labour, which nothing will supply but great zeal. Zeal, therefore, is a good or a bad thing, according to the object on which it is expended. If the object be wrong, then the more zeal the more mischief. It is, nevertheless, to be regretted that, in many cases, the advocates of error are far more active and industrious than the advocates of truth. Now, this ought not to be: truth allied to apathy, and error to energy, are not equally matched. “My little children,” is language which shews that the parental feelings of the apostle had again burst forth in all their strength and fulness. Where the work of grace is true, though weak and languid, it admits of revival and invigoration. The apostle earnestly desired that the new nature might be so developed as to deliver his erring children from that infantile condition which had rendered them the dupes and victims of the false teachers. Christians are safe just in proportion as they approach the fulness of the stature of perfect men in Christ. Among those who are really established, strengthened, and settled, there are fewer of those backslidings, and fewer of those falls by which the Gospel is dishonoured. Gainsay it who may, nothing is more sure than that all confidence in legal righteousness will leave its subjects, whatever their zeal and effort, outside of heaven; whereas all who put their trust in the work of Christ will infallibly gain the kingdom.

Chap. V. 1-15. Although freedom is a thing so precious, it is in hourly danger; it is so assailed, both from within and from without, that nothing can preserve it but constant watchfulness. The foe, when he appears, must find no quarter, but be repulsed, attacked, pursued, and slain. The natural condition of the Christian is one of constant warfare; his armour is never to be laid aside till he has completed his conquest, and entered into rest. The work of Christ is all his own, and his salvation a pure gift; all, therefore, who will add to it their own works, forfeit the blessing. If their self-righteousness prompt the attempt to add even a little, they will be left to do it all, and must take the consequence. Salvation must be either all merit, or all grace; there can be no mixture. Every Church has derived from the Lord Jesus the power to cut off from its fellowship those who renounce the faith, and set themselves to overthrow the Gospel. Every community of Christians ought also to cast out from its bosom all public teachers who “trouble” the Church by minded: but he that troubleth you shall bear his judgment, whosoever he be.

11 And I, brethren, ^hif I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? then is ⁱthe offence of the cross ceased.

12 I would they were even cut off which trouble you.

13 For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; ^konly use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, ^lbut by love serve one another.

14 For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, ^mThou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

15 But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.

16 This I say then, ⁿWalk in the Spirit, ^oand ^pye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.

17 For ^qthe flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

18 But ^rif ye be led by the Spirit, ^sye are not under the law.

19 Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness,

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, ^theresies, 21 Envyings, murders, ^udrunkenness, ^vrevellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, ^wthat they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

the diffusion of doctrines at variance with the Scriptures. Liberty and love should always go together; liberty without love is rather an evil than a good. Love is the prime element of Christian happiness, both in the Church and in the family. Christians, by love, serve one another, and thus lighten the burdens and mitigate the sufferings and sorrows of life. Why is "the carnal mind enmity against God," and not "subject to his law?" What is there in the law that ought to be hateful to it? The whole of it is comprised in a single sentence—the love of God, and the love of man. What is there in this to provoke hatred? Is it not just and equal? Is it not even good and holy? Who can object to being loved by everybody, and receiving at their hands, as circumstances may require, the offices of love. But is it not fair and just that he who is loved by all, should, in turn, himself love all? Would such a state of things make the world less happy than it is now? How great, then, must be the fall of man, who now hates both his Creator and his fellow-men! How can he be happy—how can he enter heaven! Ver. 16-21. If the kingdom of heaven is to be established among men, the root of the matter must be gone to. All attempts at improving the old, the unrenewed man, must be given up; nothing will meet the case but regeneration by the Spirit of God, and his indwelling in the soul he has created anew. That once done throughout all the earth, the kingdom of heaven will actually have been established; the will of God will then be done on earth as it is in heaven. All God's people have his Spirit, and are led by him, and all who are thus led will endeavour to walk in his ordinances and commandments blameless. In the awful catalogue of sins which is here set forth, will be noticed things of which few even among professed Christians make much. They act as if such things were very venial shortcomings, involving no danger, and requiring little notice; such as "hatred," "variance," "malice," "wrath," "strife," and "envy;" but these things here rank with idolatry, drunkenness, and murder! Flowing from the same source, they indicate the same state, and alike exclude from the kingdom of heaven. Many appear to have a very defective view of the nature of true holiness, and its necessity, in order to enter into the paradise of God. Ver. 22-26. The fruits of the Spirit are full of beauty; the very sight of them is refreshing and delightful to the eye of the renewed mind. What is heaven itself but a region filled with these fruits in perfection and abundance? Such fruits, then, every child of God brings forth in his measure; there is no salvation without them—they are, in fact, a part of salvation—they spring from health of soul, which is its very essence. Men cannot be justified who are in no degree sanctified; change of state is evidenced by change of character. No man, professing to be Christian, can pamper the flesh instead of crucifying it, and indulge vile affections instead of labouring to extinguish them. "As a man's heart is, so is he," and "as the outward, so is the inward man." They who are on their way to heaven are learning its language, and cultivating its manners.

Chap. VI. 1-5. The apostle having closed the controversial part of his epistle, and added the precious passages on experience of which we have just been speaking, closes with a series of important admonitions and counsels. All doctrine is valuable, chiefly as bearing on the heart and the life. Few things are less understood by the Churches of Christ than the proper management of backsliders. Notwithstanding the peril attendant on their condition, and the express duty set forth by the Sacred Scriptures, both of the Old and of the New Testament, they are but too generally left to of the flesh 'reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.

9 And let us not be weary in well-doing: ^mfor in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.

10 As we have therefore opportunity, let us ^ado good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith.

11 Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand.

12 As many as desire to make a fair shew in the flesh, they constrain you to be circumcised; only ^olest they should suffer persecution for the cross of Christ.

13 For neither they themselves who are circumcised keep the law; but desire to themselves. This is largely the result of a spurious and a culpable delicacy; there is a fear lest it should be thought an undue interference. Now, this is just to further the ends of the Wicked One, and to withhold from the erring children of God the help which their Father has provided for them. The history of the consequences of such conduct in a single Christian denomination would present an appalling narrative. The results throughout the universal Church are known only to Him who knows all things. With proper watchfulness, and skilful treatment, there would be few exclusions from the fellowship of the saints; and if the duty were properly performed, few of those who have been separated would be unrecovered. A thoroughly revived piety would, in these respects, lead to the happiest consequences. Ver. 6-8. It is simple justice that the teachers of everything useful to society should receive suitable compensation, or otherwise their labours cannot be long enjoyed. The Lord Jesus hath "ordained that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel." It deserves notice, that the duty is here inculcated, not on the Church collectively, but on every individual member of it. The measure of the contribution is left to his own sense of obligation, taken in connexion with his ability. The communication is supposed to be made directly to the minister, to the exclusion of all intermediate agency. In the state of society then existing, this was the natural order of things; and it was particularly healthful. The method, both on behalf of the teacher and of the learner, from the natural constitution of man, is most salutary. The state of things which now prevails in the Church of God is so artificial as no longer to bear the slightest resemblance to apostolic times. This is, in some measure, the result of circumstances; and, with vigorous piety among the Churches, proper arrangements, and active office-bearers, the principle, under new forms, might be carried out with success and efficiency: but a state of things the reverse of this most extensively prevails among the Churches of our times. The bulk of those who are "taught in the word" give themselves no concern about the maintenance of the teacher. Instead of "communicating to him in all good things," they leave him to live as he may, apparently taking for granted that all is right. The duty, from its nature, is one which, if the party be so disposed, it is easy to neglect. This very ease forms a snare into which millions fall. There is no difficulty in avoiding any method to which Churches may have recourse for the support of the Gospel; but whatever is saved in this way will prove a loss in the end. Multitudes spend in the vanities of an hour, or the luxuries of an evening, many times more than they contribute in a year for the support of the man who teaches them the way to heaven! He marries, he baptizes, he breaks the bread of life to them during their journey to the world of spirits, soothes them in sorrow, visits them in sickness, buries them when dead, and then sits among survivors as one that "comforteth the mourners." Such is the man, and his services, whom they neglect, or put off with offerings which are rather a thoughtless mockery, than a sincere and affectionate acknowledgment. Why will not such men ponder the verses immediately succeeding? Those words ought to make their ears tingle! They may deceive, and they may mock the servant, but let them remember that they have to do with the Master, who searches all hearts, and notes all actions. Ver. 9, 10. With respect to the bulk of Christians, there is reason to believe that in all things they begin well, and go on for a season; conscience is tender, and the heart warm—all duties are light, and nothing is deemed a sacrifice: but there is danger of weariness, which is, therefore, to be watched and prayed against. The Lord himself constantly went about doing good; and his example is the rule for his people. While the beneficence of Christians extends to all men, it has an especial regard to the household of faith. Ver. 11-13. Men in error, if sincere, however they may be pitied, or blamed, are yet entitled to respect; but it is otherwise with those whose concern is not the glory of God, or the welfare of their fellow-creatures, but the furtherance of the ends of carnal policy, personal vanity, and self-interest. As Paul began with the Cross, so he ends with it, vehemently deprecating any glory other than that which is founded on the sufferings of Christ. As a suitable complement to this, he repeats his all-important declaration, that neither is circumcision anything, nor uncircumcision, but the regeneration of the soul. "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away, and all things are become new." Apart from this he taught that everything was worthless, while this assured salvation.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

Ephesus was one of the principal spheres of apostolic labour. Paul spent there no small part of his public life. It was the chief city of Ionia, in Asia Minor, famous for its Temple of Diana, deemed one of the Seven Wonders of the World. Though once the metropolis of that region, it is now a poor village—an impressive example of the change to which everything human is subject. The Epistle was written during Paul's imprisonment at Rome; and its object was to confirm the converts in the faith and hope of the Gospel. It is framed on the apostle's usual principle: we have first a statement of doctrine, and then an application of the whole to the heart and life—an excellent model for public teaching. It is remarkable for its ample development of the great principles of the Christian dispensation; the views it sets forth of the love of the Father, and the glory of the Son, are wonderful for their depth and fulness. The Epistle, as a whole, in proportion to its magnitude, is one of the most precious in the New Testament.

CHAPTER I.

4 Of election, 5 and adoption, 11 which is the fountain of man's salvation.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, ^ato the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus:

2 ^bGrace be to you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 ^cBlessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings ^din heavenly ^eplaces ^fin Christ;

4 According ^gas he hath chosen us in him ^hbefore the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love:

5 Having ⁱpredestinated us unto the adoption of children ^jby Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will,

6 To the ^kpraise of the glory of his grace, wherein ^lhe hath made us accepted in the Beloved:

7 In ^mwhom we have redemption through his blood, ⁿthe forgiveness of sins, according ^oto the riches of his grace;

Chap. I. 1-12. "Saints," and believers in Christ Jesus, mean the same thing; the sanctity was the result of the faith which purified the heart, and, while it justified, also made holy. Where the heart is full of grace, the mouth also will be full of praise. Well may the man bless God whom God has blessed with spiritual blessings in heavenly things in Christ! Nowhere have we a more explicit, full, and commanding view of the great doctrine of the election of grace than is here presented. Learned men, of a certain school, have strenuously laboured to prove that the choice here specified was one, not of individuals, but of nations, and that it merely means that thenceforth the Gentiles were to enjoy the same privileges as the Jews. This is simply to misapprehend the apostle, or to misrepresent him. The choice is not one of believers to salvation—a choice founded on the foresight of their faith and works—but a choice of sinners to faith itself, and all the blessings which flow from it. To say that the ground of the choice is faith and obedience foreseen, is to do away with justification by grace altogether, and to introduce the works of the creature as the ground of his hope. So far from the election being founded in holiness foreseen, the holiness itself is actually represented as the fruit of the election; they are chosen to be holy, and not because of holiness. The predestination produces the holiness, not the holiness the predestination. But why this attempt to set aside the sovereignty of God? Does any objection lie against personal election to salvation that does not equally lie against national election to the means of it? The difference is purely one of imagination. The principle is the same; but they who contend for the national election, view it merely as an election to means: whereas with respect to individuals, it is an election also to ends; so that the end, the salvation of souls, is infallibly secure. Predestination has no other foundation than the purpose of God; and the result is to the praise of his glory. Ver. 13-23. Faith comes by hearing; and all who believe receive the Holy Spirit, whereby they are sealed to the day of redemption. As salvation begins with Divine teaching, so it is carried on by it; and without it there is no progress. With it, however, the convert goes on from strength to strength, till he appears in Zion. All the gifts and graces in which the Christian rejoices are from the Spirit of the Lord. When he shall descend in power, his presence in the hearts of his people will prove the best commentary on these verses. All attempts apart from this will only be a darkening of counsel by words without knowledge. His Church once filled with that power, the world will bow before her, and hasten to submit to the sceptre of his grace. The apostle, in his epistles, incessantly appeals to matters of experience,

16 Cease not to give thanks for you, ^bmaking mention of you in my prayers;

17 That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, ^cthe Father of glory, may give unto you ^dthe spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him:

21 Far ^jabove all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and ^kevery name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come;

22 And hath ^lput all things under his feet, and ^mgave him to be the head over all things to the church, 23 Which is ⁿhis body, the ^ofulness of him that filleth all in all.

CHAPTER II.

1 What we were by nature, 5 and what we are by grace.
10 We are created for good works.

AND you ^{hath} he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins;

2 Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience:

3 Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past ^ain the lusts of our flesh, ^bfulfilling the ^cdesires of the flesh and of the mind; and were ^dby nature the children of wrath, even as others.

all tending to shew how entirely religion is a thing of the heart. The understandings of all the saints are enlightened to make glorious discoveries of the grace of the Lord and the glory of his kingdom. This light all need; and all may have it for the asking. As the seal of the Holy Spirit, there is no safety without it; it is one of the chief marks of God's children. The same power which raised from the dead the Lord Jesus, quickens his people. No human energy would suffice for that purpose. Jesus, as the Head of his Church, is set above all power in heaven and in earth; and where the Head is, so the body will, in due time, appear. It is impossible to conceive of the Church in a more ennobled aspect than when it is said she is "his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all." With such a fountain, she may well be full of light, truth, and grace; and happy may they be whose privilege it is without stint to share in the fulness!

Chap. II. 1-9. There is nothing that so comes within the scope of our own experience as the course of our own lives. If we were the subjects of maladies, we cannot but remember the fact: and if the progress of our disease received a check, and we are now in the way of recovery, and using certain means for that purpose, we are conscious of it as much as of our own existence. When we have been buried in deep sleep, and have been awakened, the fact is so thoroughly a thing of experience, that, were any one to dispute it, we should deem him trifling or demented. Just so it is when we are

4 But God, ^awho is rich in mercy, for ^bhis great love wherewith he loved us,

5 Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ; (^cby ^dgrace ye are saved;)

6 And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus;

7 That in the ages to come he might ^eshew the exceeding riches of his grace, in ^fhis kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.

8 For ^gby grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God:

9 ^hNot of works, lest any man should boast.

10 For we are his workmanship, ⁱcreated in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ^jordained that we should ^kwalk in them.

11 Wherefore remember, that ye ^lbeing in time past ^mGentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands;

12 That at that time ye were ⁿwithout Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, ^ohaving no hope, and ^pwithout God in the world:

13 But now, in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off ^qare made nigh by the blood of Christ.

14 For he is ^rour peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down ^sthe middle wall of partition ^tbetween us;

15 Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, ^ueven the law of commandments ^vcontained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain ^wone new man, ^xso making peace;

16 And that he might ^yreconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity ^zthereby; awakened from the sleep of sin. It is much fitter to humble the pride of man to be told that salvation is of grace, and that all human merit is shut out; but when they are apprised that even the faith itself through which they are saved is not of themselves, but the gift of God, that humiliation is deepened. Such is the state of the human soul, that no measure of evidence and moral suasion is alone sufficient to command credence in the Divine record. It is so full of blindness, pride, and prejudice, that it will resist it all, and remain in unbelief. Wherever faith, therefore, appears, it is the fruit of the Spirit's action on the soul. Ver. 10-22. How cheering the fact, that all believers are the workmanship of God, created in Christ Jesus to good works, in which God has ordained that they should walk! Thus we see that every view of the Divine purpose set forth in this epistle directly bears on purity and obedience. The apostles knew nothing of any predestination which trampled on morality, and left Christians to live as they listed, and sinning that grace might abound. None of the primitive disciples so learned Christ. All distinctions between Jews and Gentiles are now at an end; their purposes are served, and therefore they have passed away. The ceremonial law, as a wall, stood between them; but it is now removed, that they may meet and mingle freely. The party-wall in the temple was an emblem of that separation, but the temple itself is now demolished, and is only a thing of history. Jews and Gentiles form but one mystical body, the descend-

17 And came ^aand preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh.

18 For ^bthrough him we both have access ^cby one Spirit unto the Father.

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but ^afellow-citizens with the saints, and of ^bthe household of God;

20 And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, ^cJesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone;

21 In whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth unto ^dan holy temple in the Lord:

22 In whom ye also are built together for ^aan habitation of God through the Spirit.

^a Gen. 5. 24.

^athe fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been ^ahid in God, who ^acreated all things by Jesus Christ:

10 To the intent that now, unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places, might be known by the church ^athe manifold wisdom of God,

11 ^aAccording to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord:

12 ^aIn whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of him.

13 Wherefore I desire that ye faint not at my tribulations for you, which is your glory.

14 For this cause ^aI bow my knees unto ^athe Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, 15 Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named,

16 That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, ^ato be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man;

17 That ^aChrist may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, ^abeing rooted and grounded in love,

18 May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height;

19 And ^ato know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, ^athat ye might be filled with all the fulness of God.

20 Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, 21 Unto him ^abe glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The apostle exhorts to unity, 7 and declares that God giveth divers gifts to men. 18 He calls them from the impurity of the Gentiles, 24 to put on the new man, 29 and to cast off corrupt communication.

THEREFORE, the prisoner ^aof the Lord,) beseech you, that ye ^awalk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, ants of one common stock, and the heirs of one common glory. The Gentiles were far off from God through ignorance and sin; the Jews were nigh in point of privilege, but they did not profit from it. The Church of Christ constitutes a holy temple in the Lord, inhabited through the Spirit. In that temple Christ himself is the chief corner-stone, while the prophets and apostles occupy the next place of importance; and the general structure is formed of living materials—souls made new creatures. Let Christians, then, understand the extent of their privilege, and the dignity of their position, and walk worthy of it. With such prospects, all the glory of earth is but dust and ashes.

Chap. III. 1-12. Next to death-bed counsels, those of prisoners for righteousness' sake are the most impressive. It was his fidelity to truth—that the Gentiles might remain in the enjoyment of the Gospel—which brought on Paul the persecution of his countrymen, and led to those events which issued in his incarceration at Rome. The term "if," clearly means "since," or "seeing, that you have heard," as there can be no doubt that the Ephesians were intimately acquainted with the facts and circumstances to which he refers. The calling of the Gentiles had been a mystery—that is, a thing concealed from the carnal mind, although it was clearly set forth in the writings of the Prophets. Ver. 13-21. The sufferings of the apostle formed one of the most precious departments of Christian evidence, since they proved his sincerity; and it was not in the nature of things that he should resolutely persevere when he had nothing to gain, but everything to lose, and even hazarded life itself by so doing; truth alone could explain a course so extraordinary. Intercession is one of the loveliest duties of God's people; and Paul at once teaches and illustrates that duty in this and other epistles. The Holy Spirit is the prime source of strength to the souls of the elect, both for doing and suffering. With Christ in their hearts, and grounded in love, there is nothing required to promote his glory to which they are not equal. The closing verses are peculiarly sublime, presenting the most exalted conception of the person, kingdom, and dignity of Christ.

Chap. IV. 1-16. Nowhere is the unity of the Divine system so strikingly set forth in the Apostolic Epistles as here. The unity of the Spirit is the oneness of mind and affection which he teaches. The objects of faith,

2 With all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, ^bforbearing one another in love;

3 Endeavouring ^cto keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

4 There is ^done body, and ^eone Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling;

5 One Lord, ^fone faith, ^gone baptism,

6 ^hOne God and Father of all, who ⁱis above all, and through all, ^jand in you all.

7 But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

8 Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, ^khe led ^lcaptivity captive, ^mand gave gifts unto men.

9 (Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?

10 He that descended is the same also that ⁿascended up far above all heavens, ^othat he might ^pfill all things.)

11 And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;

12 ^qFor the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, ^rfor the edifying of ^sthe body of Christ:

13 Till ^twe all come ^uin the unity of the faith, and of ^vthe knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the ^wstature of the ^xfulness of Christ:

14 That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;

15 ^yBut, ^zspeaking the truth in love, ^{aa}may grow up into him in all things, ^{ab}which is the head, even Christ:

16 ^{ac}From whom the whole body ^{ad}fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body, unto the ^{ae}edifying of itself in love.

17 This I say therefore, and ^ctestify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, ^din the vanity of their mind;

18 Having the understanding darkened, being ^ealienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, ^fbecause of the ^gblindness of their heart:

19 Who, being ^hpast feeling, have ⁱgiven themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.

20 ^jBut ye have not so learned Christ;

21 If so be that ye have ^kheard him, and have been taught by him, ^las the truth is in Jesus:

22 That ye put off, concerning the former conversation, ^mthe old man, which is corrupt according to the ⁿdeceitful lusts;

27 ^wNeither give place to the devil.

28 Let him that stole ^xsteal no more: but rather let him labour, working with ^yhis hands the thing which is good, that he may have to ^zgive to him that needeth.

29 ^{aa}Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good ^{ab}to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers.

30 And ^{ac}grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto ^{ad}the day of redemption.

31 Let all ^{ae}bitterness, and ^{af}wrath, and anger, and clamour, and ^{ag}evil-speaking, be put away from you, ^{ah}with all malice:

32 And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

the truth believed by Christians as the ground of hope, are one and the same. "The measure of the gift of Christ," signifies the degree in which he has been pleased to impart his gifts to his people. No man has aught that he has not received, and therefore there ought to be in the family of God neither jealousy nor idolatry. Each is just what his heavenly Father has seen fit to make him; all cannot be first, all cannot be last; neither can all occupy the centre. Divine wisdom has determined every man's position, and wherever that may be, it is for each to occupy it worthily. The Church, when it shall have been completed, will present a wonderful spectacle, illustrative of wisdom, power, and love. It will be the most glorious object in the universe. Ver. 17-29. A change of heart must be accompanied by a change of life; it is impossible to renew the heart and leave the character as it was. The picture presented in ver. 18 and 19, forms a mirror which reflects the moral likeness of the heathen world in perfection. Such, then, was the material on which the apostle had to work; yet even to such a people the Gospel proved the power of God unto salvation, justifying, sanctifying, and renewing the spirit of their minds, creating them anew in righteousness and true holiness. The soul, on its conversion, becomes undressed; every rag of the old man's costume is to be put off, and the raiment of righteousness put on. Not a single evil habit is to be reserved, not one sin to receive quarter. Ver. 30-32. It is everywhere assumed throughout this and the other epistles, that the Churches were perfectly acquainted with the doctrinal theory of the Gospel, touching Father, Son, and Spirit. To understand the epistles, they must have possessed a very large measure of knowledge. It is laid down as a general truth, that the Holy Spirit dwells in all believers, and that his presence constitutes a seal, marking them out as the children of God, and preserving them to the day of full redemption. The personality of the Holy Spirit is distinctly indicated by the language here used; a mere influence cannot be "grieved." The grieving of the Holy Spirit is a sin which only believers can commit, since he inhabits none other. The condition of a person who has done this is awful in the extreme. Who shall teach the man that has driven from his bosom the Divine Teacher? Who shall comfort him that has repelled the Divine Comforter? The state of such is deeply forlorn, and nothing can repair their loss but thorough penitence, and a fresh application to the blood of sprinkling.

CHAPTER V.

2 The apostle exhorteth to charity: 3 to avoid all uncleanness, covetousness, &c.: 11 to have no fellowship with the works of darkness, 15 but to walk circumspectly, avoiding all excess. 22 Duties of wives and husbands.

BE ye therefore ^afollowers of God, as dear children;

2 And walk in love, ^bas Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and ^ca sacrifice to God ^dfor a sweet smelling savour.

3 But ^efornication, and all uncleanness, or ^fcovetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints;

4 Neither ^gfilthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient; ^hbut rather giving of thanks.

5 For this ye know, ⁱthat no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.

6 Let ^kno man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things ^lcometh the wrath of God upon ^mthe children of ⁿdisobedience.

7 Be not ye therefore partakers with them.

8 For ye were sometimes darkness, ^obut now ^pare ye light in the Lord: ^qwalk as children of light;

9 (For ^rthe fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness, and ^srighteousness, and ^ttruth;)

10 Proving what is ^uacceptable unto the Lord.

11 And have no fellowship with the unfruitful ^vworks of darkness, but rather reprove ^wthem.

12 For ^xit is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.

Chap. V. 1-14. Following God, and walking in love, is the way to heaven. Christ's love is seen in his making himself an "offering and a sacrifice" for men. The "sweet-smelling savour" points to his atonement, and signifies that it was as satisfactory to Divine justice, as fragrant odours are to men. The language indicates approval, pleasure, delight. From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks: pure hearts utter pure language; "filthiness, foolish talking, and jesting," ill befit lips that have confessed sin, faith in Christ, and which are addicted to praise and prayer. The injunction here laid down is one of more importance than many professors seem to imagine; while they avoid "filthiness," "foolish talking and jesting" are lamentably prevalent, to the great detriment of piety. Such a style of speech does not comport with high spirituality of mind, and it is unquestionably among the things which grieve the Holy Spirit. Let the covetous man mark his sin, and his associates, and ponder his doom! To lower the standard in this matter, may be agreeable to those whose character will not bear its application; but all attempts in this way are "vain words," and to listen to them is to purchase peace at the expense of safety. The wrath of God must follow them, and none can hinder it. Wherever the Spirit is, there must be fruit—"in all goodness, righteousness, and truth." The style of the prophets and apostles in addressing the ungodly is harmonious. Nothing can exceed the freedom which characterises them; they speak as men to men, appealing at once to the understanding, the conscience, and the heart. That men, who profess to study the Word of God, and to be guided by it, should ever have come to entertain the notion that it is not permitted them to address sinners is extraordinary, since it goes in the face of all Scripture. Ver. 15-21. If business of all sorts requires vigilance and effort, is it to be supposed that the affairs of the soul may safely be left to chance? Nowhere in the New Testament have we a more remarkable directory for private worship than is here presented. Meditation is the life of the soul; it matters little what men read or hear—if they do not make it the subject of meditation, it can never profit them. Even a small measure of reading, if it be of the right kind, and of hearing, if what is preached be the glorious Gospel, will effect wonders in nourishing the soul, if it be thoroughly digested by meditation. This heart-communing is a thing of unspeakable moment—the prime secret of growth in grace, and real spiritual improvement. "Speaking to yourselves," is one way of becoming your own teachers; thus the soul can exhort, reprove, instruct, encourage, and comfort itself, even when there are none beside to perform these good offices. True poetry is the handmaid of devotion; "psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs" are ready-made provisions for the soul, much fitted to refresh and strengthen. To this is to be added the habit of ejaculatory prayer, which is the principal means of communing with God. Wherever these exercises form the delight of the soul, it is a proof of advanced piety. Ver. 22-24. Authority is essential to the welfare of every community, and that its ends may be realised, it must be exercised with firmness, love, wisdom, and equity. The light in which the apostle presents the matter deserves special notice. The power of the husband, while absolute, is limited by love; and no other restriction is needed. Thus it is with God himself and the wide universe; while the power is infinite, such too is the love. The domestic constitution rests on the same principle; every parent is absolute, but where the mind is properly constituted, the love is equal to the authority, and as such tempers it. The authority and the love are a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; ¹but that it should be holy, and without blemish.

28 So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies: he that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For ^awe are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 ^aFor this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.

32 This is a great mystery: but ^aI speak concerning Christ and the church.

33 Nevertheless, let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband.

inseparable, unless interfered with by depravity. The authority without the love, would form a tyranny. Ver. 25-33. While the wife is pointed to the Church as her example, the husband is pointed to Christ as his. How these comparisons and analogies dignify the matrimonial relation, and the domestic constitution! When such families shall have covered the world, the reign of truth and grace will be fairly established.

Chap. VI. 1-4. Matters being right between the parents themselves, the next subject of consideration is the children. The father's breast being the abode of truth and love, and the mother entirely devoted to the father, and the children to both, there will be unity, harmony, and happiness. The importance of the command to the welfare of society may be ascertained from the fact, that it is the first of the commandments to which a promise is annexed. In all ages, a special blessing has attended filial duty, while the neglect of it has ever been distinguished by the Divine displeasure. Ver. 5-8. Servants are children in the second degree, and, therefore, under corresponding laws. There must be distinctions in society; all cannot be their own masters; the vast majority of mankind must occupy dependant situations. This, however, is to be considered neither as a hardship nor as a degradation. The servant, in his place, is quite as honourable, and may be quite as happy as his master, frequently more so. The theory of service here set forth is as beautiful as it is holy. What the magistrate is in the nation, the master is in the family—the minister of God for good; he simply acts for Christ. The servant, therefore, in serving him, serves the Lord; and he is, therefore, enjoined to do the “will of God from the heart.” The master is everywhere merged in the Lord of all. In harmony with this state of things the servant is to look to Christ for his reward. After this, let no man dispute the dignity of labour. Whether he sway a sceptre, or move in the humblest path of society, he is equally serving the Lord. Before God the slave and the free labourer, when their work is done, will sit down together in their Father's house, enjoying the smile of parental favour. Ver. 9. Before the great God all distinctions perish; there all are men—none less, none more! The master must never forget that his servant is his brother, and that the common Parent requires him properly to sustain that relation. Ver. 10-24. The most abundant provision is made for all the necessities of the Christian; in nothing is the burden above the strength: all attempts at being strong in his own strength are foolishness; but to be strong in the Lord is to be, to all intents, omnipotent. To his “might” there is no limits; it made the world, and it sustains them. The humblest Christian, therefore, like the apostle, “can do all things through Christ strengthening him.” But the utmost strength will prove unavailing without appropriate armour; now He who knows both the enemy and his stratagems, has provided the panoply, and the Christian has simply to put it on. Thus strengthened, and thus clothed, one thing still remains, on which victory entirely depends. While constantly ¶ Written from Rome unto the Ephesians by Tychicus.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

Philippi is believed to have been the first place at which Paul preached the Gospel on the Continent of Europe. He was led thither by the vision of the man who said, "Come over into Macedonia, and help us." He was then at Troas, from which he immediately sailed to Samothracia, and, arriving at Neapolis, he proceeded to Philippi. The events which occurred there signalised that above all the other spheres of the apostle's labours. This Epistle was drawn forth by the affectionate generosity of the Philippian Church, who were distinguished above all other Churches by their solicitude for the comfort of the apostle. This Epistle is specially marked by the parental affection which pervades it.

CHAPTER I.

1 Paul's thankfulness and prayer to God for them. 21 His readiness to suffer.

PAUL and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all ^athe saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with ^bthe bishops ^cand deacons:

2 Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 ^dI thank my God upon every ^eremembrance of you,

4 Always ^fin every prayer of mine for you all, making request with joy,

5 For your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now;

6 Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath ^gbegun a good work in you, will ^hperform it until ⁱthe day of Jesus Christ:

7 Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all, because ^jI have you in my heart; inasmuch as both in my bonds, ^kand in the defence and confirmation of the gospel, ye all are ^lpartakers of my grace.

8 For ^mGod is my record, how greatly I long after you all ⁿin the bowels of Jesus Christ.

9 And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all ^ojudgment; bearing the sword of the Spirit, he must pray in the Spirit, and thus acting, he will prove more than a conqueror through Christ the Lord.

Chap. I. 1-11. The terms "bishop" and "elder" are used promiscuously, or interchangeably. Nothing but the Gospel could have produced the extraordinary affection which these verses display. It is the comfort of the distant and the dying pastor, that He who has begun the good work in his people will carry it on till the day of Christ. Ver. 12-26. Events, which it was feared would prove fatal to the cause of God, have often been the chief means of promoting it. Many a martyr by his death has given an impulse to the work which the labours of a life had failed to impart. But for Paul's imprisonment, it seems probable that the Gospel would not have 13 So that my bonds ^tin Christ are manifest in all ^uthe palace, and ^vin all other places;

14 And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear.

16 The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds;

17 But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.

18 What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.

19 For ^yI know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of ^zthe Spirit of Jesus Christ, found its way to the palace of the Caesars. The wisdom of God is too much for the craft of man, whose violence is often made to further what it was meant to obstruct. It is a great object to get public attention fixed upon the truth, even when it is brought about by men who are not friends to the Gospel, or to those who love it. Intercessory prayer is a great power when wisely and perseveringly wielded. The chief object of ambition with every Christian ought to be to magnify the Lord Jesus, whether by life or by death. True faith in lively exercise overcomes the fear of death, and brings near the glory of the rest which remains for the people of God. Ver. 27-30. The "conversation" of the Christian signifies more than speech; it comprises the whole of his deportment, private and public, both as a saint and as a citizen. Boldness becomes those who enjoy the promise 20 According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.

21 For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

22 But if I ¹live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot not.

23 For I am in a strait betwixt two, having ²a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:

24 Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.

25 And having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all, ³for your furtherance and joy of faith;

26 That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me, by my coming to you again.

27 Only ⁴let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, ⁵that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for ⁶the faith of the gospel;

28 And in nothing terrified by your adversaries: which is to them an evident token of perdition, ⁷but to you of salvation, and that of God.

29 For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake;

30 Having the same conflict which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

vain-glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.

4 Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

5 Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus:

6 Who, being in the form of God, ¹thought it not robbery to be equal with God;

7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him ²the form of a servant, and was made ³in the ⁴likeness of men:

8 And being found in fashion as a man, ⁵he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even ⁶the death of the cross.

9 Wherefore ⁷God also hath highly exalted him, and ⁸given him a name which is above every name:

10 That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth;

11 And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ ⁹is Lord, ¹⁰to the glory of God the Father.

12 Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, ¹¹work out your own salvation with fear and trembling:

13 For it is ¹²God which worketh in you, both to will and to do of his good pleasure.

14 Do all things without murmurings and disputings;

15 That ye may be blameless and ¹³harmless, the sons of God, without ¹⁴rebuks, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ¹⁵ye shine as lights in the world:

16 Holding forth the word of life; ¹⁶that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain.

17 Yea, and if I be ¹⁷offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all.

of Divine protection. If God be for them, it is of no importance who be against them. Perdition is the due reward of persecution, and it will be the certain lot of all such who die impenitent. It is most soothing for the believer to reflect, that everything in his lot, whether of trial or of comfort, is ordered by the Lord. It is ever to be remembered that faith, with the eternal life which follows it, is the gift of God, and that sufferings for Christ are to be viewed as special favour. These considerations were much suited to console and cheer the Philippians under their severe trials; and the principle will remain in force, and ready for use when required, so long as God shall have a Church on the earth.

Chap. II. 1-4. The mode of expression adopted in the opening verses is the strongest method of setting forth the points enumerated. Christian unity is a near approach to the perfection of the heavenly state. The chief enemies to that unity are pride and selfishness, which it is one of the main objects of the Gospel to uproot and destroy. Ver. 5-11. These verses supply an explicit statement of one of the most glorious truths of Revelation. How vividly they portray the Saviour's humiliation, work, and glory! Let them be thoroughly wrought into the soul of the Christian, and they will powerfully tend to preserve his heart in that state after which every saint ought to aspire. Ver. 12-18. The fact that God works in the souls of his people, is the strongest possible inducement for them to work too; since, with such co-operation, success is absolutely certain. Wherever the will is right, action will follow: the great thing to be attained is to harmonise the will of the creature with the will of the Creator. Ver. 19-30. Amid all the apostle's troubles, Timothy and Titus proved a steadfast comfort to him; whoever fell, they stood strong in the Lord. The tribute here paid to Timothy is very affecting, and the circumstances with which it is connected are alike surprising and humbling. But for the positive statement of the apostle, it would have been incredible. That, in apostolic times, in Paul's own immediate circle, amid tongues and miracles, signs, wonders, and mighty deeds, the spirit of selfishness should so have seized and subdued all with whom Paul had any connexion, is one of the most astounding and mortifying facts upon record. "All seek their own, and not the things which are Jesus Christ's," is language

18 For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me.

19 ⁶But ⁴I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timotheus shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort when I know your state.

20 For ¹I have no man ⁶like-minded, who will naturally care for your state.

21 For ¹all seek their own, not ¹the things which are Jesus Christ's.

22 But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel.

23 Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me.

24 But I trust in the Lord that I also myself shall come shortly.

25 Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, and fellow-soldier, ¹but your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants.

26 For he longed after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick.

27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death: ¹but God had mercy on him; and not on him only, ¹but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

28 I sent him therefore the more carefully, that, when ye see him again, ye may rejoice, and that I may be the less sorrowful.

29 ¹Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; ¹and ¹hold such in reputation:

30 Because for ¹the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, to supply your lack of service toward me.

CHAPTER III.

1 ¹He warneth them of false teachers; 18 and to decline the ways of carnal Christians.

FINALLY, my brethren, ¹rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you ¹it is safe.

2 Beware of dogs, beware of ¹evil workers, beware of the concision.

3 For we are the circumcision, which which represents a state of things forming the greatest contrast conceivable to the example of Christ himself, as set forth in the earlier part of the chapter. The beacon here lighted up should prove a warning to all who have anything to do with the kingdom of God. Grasping selfishness, and the hot pursuit of the present world, are wholly incompatible with elevated piety.

Chap. III. 1-11. False teachers would seem everywhere to have followed the apostle like his own shadow; which rendered it proper, on all occasions, to warn the people against them. Those men who were so intent on forcing circumcision on the Gentile Churches, were ignorant of the true import of the rite; they were properly designated the concision, since they were labouring to cut the tie of faith which united believers to Christ. Christians were the true circumcision, the only possessors of the state of mind it was designed to set forth. Paul had no reason, on personal grounds, to oppose the doctrine; he had been circumcised, and in all points a zealous disciple of Moses; but when he came to understand the true state of the case, apprehending ¹worship God in the spirit, and ¹rejoice in Christ Jesus, and ¹have no confidence in the flesh.

4 Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more:

5 Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee;

6 Concerning zeal, ¹persecuting the church; ¹touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.

7 But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.

8 Yea doubtless, and ¹I count all things but loss for ¹the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: ¹for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may ¹win Christ,

9 And ¹be found in him, ¹not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, ¹the righteousness which is of God by faith:

10 That ¹I may know him, ¹and the power of his resurrection, ¹and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;

11 If ¹by any means I might ¹attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

12 Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if ¹that I may apprehend that for which also I am ¹apprehended of Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, ¹forgetting those things which are behind, ¹and reaching forth unto those things which are before, 14 I press toward the mark, for the prize of ¹the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

15 Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, ¹God shall reveal even this unto you.

16 Nevertheless, whereto we have al-his danger, he fled for refuge to the cross of Christ. Ver. 12-17. While Paul taught the doctrine of the Cross, he gloriously exemplified it. The reference here is, doubtless, to the games of Greece, with which the people were perfectly acquainted. When Paul uttered these striking words, he was in chains at Rome; but his spirit was free, and bid defiance to the power of the Caesars to enslave it, or in any way to impede its movements. Even there he continued without interruption to run the race which was set before him, "looking unto Jesus," filled with his love, and animated by his example. Ver. 18-21. Nothing more strikingly illustrates the wickedness of the human heart than the passing touches the apostle gives from time to time, incidentally, of the carnality and depravity even of many professed converts. What a picture is here presented by the "man of God," in his dungeon and with his chains, in writing to his Philippian friends, while the tears streamed down his cheeks, as he thought of those who had professed to be believers on the Son of God! Even at that early day the tendency was everywhere visible to assume the form of godliness, while destitute of its power. People would not attend to the ready attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

17 Brethren, ^cbe followers together of me, ^dand mark them which walk so, as ye have us for an ensample.

18 (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the ^eenemies of the cross of Christ:

19 Whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, ^fwho mind earthly things.)

20 For our ^gconversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ:

21 Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The apostle proceeds from particular admonitions to general exhortations. 10 He declares his joy on account of their liberality towards him. 19 He concludes with prayers, salutations, and benedictions.

THEREFORE, my brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, ^hso stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved.

2 I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, ⁱthat they be of the same mind in the Lord.

3 And I entreat thee also, true yoke-fellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellow-labourers, ^jwhose names are in the book of life.

4 ^kRejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice.

5 Let your moderation be known unto all men. ^lThe Lord is at hand.

6 Be careful for nothing: but ^min every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made ⁿknown unto God.

7 And ^othe peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

8 Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are ^phonest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good fact that piety is a life, and not merely a creed, a rite, a profession.

Chap. IV. 1-7. We may gather from the entreaty of the apostle that there had been some misunderstanding between the individuals referred to, which it was of great importance to have settled. Woman, from the first, was a powerful auxiliary in the spread of the Gospel. Where true principle is in full operation, all agencies will be enlisted in the cause. Where personal piety is low, and human affection strong—rising to a species of idolatry to some particular minister—individuals, both male and female, have been known to labour most earnestly and effectively; while, as events have shewed, the real object was to glorify the man, rather than his Master in heaven. These women were of a better spirit; they laboured with Paul, with Clement, and with others—that is, with all who sought the salvation of men. The principle which governed them was not incorporated with flesh and blood: men were lost, and Christ had redeemed them by his blood, and commanded his Gospel to be made known to them. Under this authority these women loved, laboured, and prayed. May the pattern they present be everywhere realised in this and other lands! Ver. 8, 9. No class of persons are more culpable than those who represent the Gospel as fatal to morality. Its universal triumph would be the uprooting of every sin, and throwing over the whole earth a covering of practical righteousness. These verses, were there nothing else in the Sacred Scriptures, would suffice for the everlasting confutation of all such calumnies. It is in vain that we look to any portion of heathen literature for ought to be compared with them; alone, they are a complete epitome of Christian morals. The man who shall fully exemplify them would be a pattern of every excellence. Ver. 10-23. The facts here stated will, to the end of the world, redound to the honour of the Church of Philippi. They loved not in word only, but in deed and in truth. While supremely prizing the apostle's lessons, and revering his person, they remembered his necessities, and adopted means to alleviate them. While Paul, from the nobleness of his nature,

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

We have less reliable information concerning the Church at Colosse than any other in the New Testament. It was supposed by the ancients that the Church was planted by Epaphras; be this as it may, it is clear that they were faithful followers of the Lord Jesus. Hearing of Paul's imprisonment at Rome, they sent Epaphras on that long and arduous journey, to tell him how matters went with themselves, and especially to inquire after his health and circumstances. Hence originated that beautiful and precious letter we are now to consider. The Apostle, as usual, adapts himself to the circumstances of the Church addressed. He puts them on their guard against false teaching and vain philosophy. The tendency, if not the object, of the latter, was to seduce them from the simplicity of the Gospel of Christ. In doing this, he sets forth the most exalted views of the personal and mediatorial dignity of Christ, and the perfection of his righteousness. From the Epistle as a whole, it may be inferred that the Church at Colosse was in a prosperous condition.

CHAPTER I.

¹ Paul thanketh God for their faith; ⁹ prayeth for their increase in grace, ¹⁵ and describeth the true Christ.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother, ² To the saints and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Colosse: Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

³ We ^agive thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, ^bpraying always for you,

⁴ Since we heard of your ^cfaith in Christ Jesus, and of the love ^{which ye have} to all the saints;

⁵ For the ^dhope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in ^ethe word of the truth of the gospel;

⁶ Which is come unto you, as ^{it is} in all the world; and ^fbringeth forth fruit, as ^{it doth} also in you, since the day ye heard of ^{it}, and ^gknew the grace of God in truth:

⁷ As ye also learned of Epaphras our dear fellow-servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ;

⁸ Who also declared unto us your love in the Spirit.

⁹ For this cause we also, since the day we heard ^{it}, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding;

¹⁰ That ^hye might walk worthy of the

and his transcendent piety, was superior to noticing the cruel neglect of which he was the subject, yet both as a man and as an apostle he was far from insensible to it—less for his own sake, than for that of those who had failed of their duty. We have here another of those incidental points touching the character of the Church. Mark those emphatic words—"Now, ye Philippians, know also, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me, as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only. For even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again to my necessity." It thus turns out that the Church at Philippi were the main supporters of the apostle. Surely this was not among the things that are just, lovely, of good report, and that will bear thinking on.

Chap. I. 1-12. In these verses there is a full delineation of the grand outlines of Christian character. Experience is amply developed; the power and work of the Holy Spirit are strikingly indicated. Here Paul connects faith with love, as the two chief and distinguishing graces of the Church at Colosse. Where these graces are, they will be uniformly found accompanied by the whole family; they cannot exist alone. The phrase, "all the world," in the language of the time, meant principally the Roman Empire, which had been extensively pervaded by the Gospel. This fact shews the extraordinary efforts which had been made to spread the truth, and the success which had attended the endeavour. It is impossible for those who still dwell in flesh and blood fully to conceive of what is meant by being "partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." It can signify nothing less than perfect knowledge, holiness, and joy. Ver. 18-19. The depth and fulness of the communication here made is such as to overpower the finite mind. The real Godhead of Jesus is the only principle on which it can be at all expounded; on any other, all is darkness, confusion, and perplexity. Omnipotence alone is equal to the work performed; but omnipotence cannot be exerted by a creature; therefore say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.

21 And you, that were sometime alienated, and enemies ^{in your mind} by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled

22 In ^{the body of his flesh} through death, to present you holy, and unblameable, and unreprouable in his sight;

23 If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister:

24 Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and ^{fill up} that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh ^{for his body's sake}, which is the church;

25 Whereof I am made a minister, ^{according to the dispensation of God} which is given to me for you, ^{to fulfil} the word of God;

26 Even ^{the mystery} which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but ^{now} is made manifest to his saints:

27 To ^{whom} God would make known what is ^{the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles}; which is Christ ^{in you}, ^{the hope of glory}:

28 Whom we preach, ^{warning every man}, and teaching every man in all wisdom; that we may present every man ^{perfect in Christ Jesus}:

29 Whereunto I also labour, ^{striving according to his working}, which worketh in me mightily.

15 And, ^{having spoiled principalities and powers}, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them ^{in it}.

16 Let no man therefore judge you ⁱⁿ

Jesus Christ is God over all, and blessed for ever. He is the Head of the Church, to which he communicates all spiritual life, nourishment, growth, and strength. As the first to rise from the dead to immortal life, he is both the pledge and the pattern of his people's resurrection. The fulness that dwells in him comprises everything connected with his mediatorial work—authority, knowledge, wisdom, justice, truth, holiness, mercy, and grace; everything necessary to his office, work, and character. Ver. 20-29. "The blood of his cross" is the mighty instrument with which he works his wonders of reconciliation. The things in heaven that have been reconciled are, of course, the spirits of the just made perfect, and on earth, all true Christians. By the Gospel being preached to every creature under heaven, is meant the most extensive diffusion of it; it is a bold expression, significant of a stupendous result. It can mean nothing less than that it had spread into every country, and among all classes of mankind. "Glory," in every tongue, is the greatest term known to man, the highest pursuit, the supreme attainment. The glory of the world is false; that only is true which comes from God. It is the duty of all saints to seek, and their privilege to find it through the Lord Jesus. Paul's conception of the apostolic office was the highest conceivable. He had the most exalted view of the work of the ministry, in promoting the salvation of the lost and the edification of the faithful.

Chap. II. 1-12. Paul's love to the elect seems to have been inexpressible. No small portion of his time and strength would appear to have been devoted to special supplication on their behalf. He literally lived for them, and every hour he was ready to die for them! No other love of mere man ever attained to the same pitch of intensity. The Colossians were less in danger from the false teachers who everywhere so disturbed the Churches, than from philosophy, falsely so called, and vain deceit; from these there was peril, and there is peril still. In Jesus Christ dwells "all the fulness of the Godhead bodily;" that is, God dwells in man. Thus the mysterious person, Christ, is neither God alone, nor man alone, but God and man in one person. The expression "buried in baptism," is one of somewhat uncertain import. It is understood by one class as expressly referring to the mode of baptizing by immersion, since it is contended that sprinkling, or pouring, cannot be said to represent burial. Another class, however, view it as simply an analogical expression, such as being "dead with him," and "crucified with him." Ver. 13-15. It is instructive to mark the unity which prevails throughout all the teaching of the apostles: we have everywhere the same 'meat, or in drink, or ⁶in respect of an holiday, or of the new-moon, or of the sabbath-days;

17 Which are ^aa shadow of things to come; but ²the body is of Christ.

18 Let no man ⁷beguile you of your reward ⁸in a voluntary humility, and worshipping of angels, intruding into those things which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind;

19 And not holding the head, from which ⁷all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, ²increaseth with the increase of God.

20 Wherefore, ^aif ye be dead with Christ from the ⁹rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances, 21 (^bTouch not, taste not, handle not;

22 Which all are ^cto perish with the using,) after the commandments and doctrines of men?

which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry:

6 For ^awhich things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the ^bchildren of disobedience.

7 In the which ye also walked sometime, when ye lived in them.

8 But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.

9 Lie not one to another, seeing that ¹ye have put off the old man with his deeds;

10 And have ²put on the new man, which is ³renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him:

11 Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: ^abut Christ is all, and in all.

12 Put on therefore, ^aas the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering;

13 Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a ²quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.

14 And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.

15 And let ^cthe peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful.

16 Let ^bthe word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

17 And whatsoever ye do in word or principles concerning human nature, regeneration, the state of the renewed mind, the duty and the prospects of the believer;—all were dead, and are quickened; all were guilty, and are pardoned; all were polluted, and are sanctified; all were estranged, and are brought nigh; all were enemies, and are reconciled. The idea of forgiveness is set forth very strongly, and in various lights; the debt is cancelled; the bond is given up; the deed is destroyed. The ancients were accustomed to strike through a writing which it was intended to annul with a nail, which remained for ever invalid. All the ways by which bonds were or could be cancelled are here set forth, to shew how perfectly Christians are freed from the condemnation of the law. Their justification is complete and perfect; Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to all that believe. Ver. 16-23. Believers had entirely done with shadows, and rejoiced in Christ, the glorious substance of both type and prophecy. Popery is here visited with the severest condemnation for its false humility and creature-worship. Popery, Socinianism, and Infidelity are all assailed, and overthrown by the apostolic doctrine. Christ is all in all; as the Head, he is the centre of unity to his Church; they are united to him, and through him to each other, and so, like the human frame, compacted together, spiritually, by joints, tendons, and all the ties which Divine wisdom has provided. It matters not what people profess, if not "holding the head;" without Christ there is no salvation.

Chap. III. 1-4. All true Christians are risen with Christ their Head; and all have experienced a spiritual resurrection. Their hearts, therefore, follow their Leader, and their souls aspire to their final home. How secure their life! Hid with Christ in God, it is placed beyond the reach of danger; and in due season it will be displayed, when they shall ascend with him in glory. Ver. 5-14. Believers are required to be steadily and earnestly active in their own sanctification; its advancement is to be a study and a business; everything old is to be put off, and replaced by that which is new. The end of all the means of grace is the complete development of the "image of God." All earthly distinctions were to terminate in this; thus only can their election be manifested. The sovereign purpose of God lies at the foundation of everything; and this is only to be ascertained by what is done. Religion is essentially a thing of character; if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; the soul is renovated, and, through that, the whole life. Ver. 15-25. "The peace of God," is an expression significant of an idea full of importance; it is the fruit of pardon through the death of the Lamb. The unspeakable value of the Sacred Scriptures is here indicated; as the object of faith, they are the food of the soul; but in order to this, the Divine Volume requires to be made the subject of habitual study, meditation, and prayer. In no other way can it be understood, remembered, and felt. Edification is greatly more an individual operation than most people imagine; and hence every believer, under God, has it very much in his own hands. If he maintain constant fellowship with the prophets and apostles, in their writings, and keep near a throne of grace, nothing can prevent growth; while, in the neglect of these things, nothing can materially promote it. The same sweet and holy counsels are here set forth as were given to the Ephesians; nothing is wanted to purify and perfect society, and put an end to sin and misery, but the complete carrying out of the deed, do all ^ain the name of the Lord Jesus, ^bgiving thanks to God and the Father by him.

18 Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, ^aas it is fit in the Lord.

19 Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them.

20 Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is ^awell-pleasing unto the Lord.

21 Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.

22 Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eye-service, as men-pleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God:

23 And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, ^aas to the Lord, and not unto men;

24 Knowing that of the Lord ^aye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ.

25 But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons.

principles here laid down among the several classes here specified.

Chap. IV. 1-6. Of all Scripture exercises the most important is that of prayer, since on that the success of all the other means mainly turns. But prayer, from the abounding carnality of man, is an exercise of the utmost difficulty, and perseverance in it requires not only a rich supply of the Spirit of grace, but holy determination. The scope of prayer ought to be so wide as to include the whole family of God, both at home and in foreign lands—all the Churches, with their pastors, office-bearers, institutions, and operations. The greatest powers, the most shining gifts, and the most distinguished success, do not raise any man above the necessity of looking to the people of God for the help of their supplication. Nothing so much tends to enlarge the heart as intercessory prayer: Christians, in seeking the good of their brethren, find their own; in watering others, they themselves are watered. Ver. 7-18. Paul is considerate in everything that appertained to the Church: knowing their anxiety concerning himself, he adopted the surest means of making everything known to them, by sending messengers from his own immediate circle—men tried, and deserving the highest confidence. It is pleasing to observe that Marcus, sister's son to Barnabas, about whom so serious a disagreement arose between him and Paul, was not only reconciled to the apostle, but one of his chief companions, assistants, and comforts. It thus appears that Paul was powerfully supported in his endeavours at Rome to propagate the Gospel. The apostle is careful to embrace an opportunity of bearing his testimony to the character and zeal of his associates. In a few words, how beautiful a portrait he draws of Epaphras! His example supplies an animating lesson to teachers and pastors absent from their spheres of labour. Epaphras plied the only means at that time within his reach to promote the welfare of his friends. If he prayed that they might stand perfect and complete in all the will of God, it surely became themselves to strain after this blessed consummation. The case applies in all its aspects to the Church of Christ now on earth.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

Thessalonica was the metropolis of Macedonia. The Church there was planted by Paul. The object of the Epistle is to instruct, comfort, and establish the converts, who were in danger from their own philosophers, as well as the surrounding heathen. Not satisfied with enforcing morality on Christian principles, he enters largely into the evidence on which these principles rest. Certain errors and disorders prevailed among the Thessalonian converts, which he here endeavours to correct; other matters in the Church were not quite satisfactory, and the laws of Christ amongst them had not been properly administered. The Epistle has an important bearing on the entire management of Christian Churches.

CHAPTER II.

1 How the Gospel was preached unto them, and how they received it. 17 Why he was desirous to see them.

FOR yourselves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not in vain:

² But even after that we had suffered before, and were shamefully entreated, as ye know, at Philippi, we were ^rbold in our God to speak unto you the gospel of God with much contention.

³ For our exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile:

⁴ But ^sas we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, ^tbut God, which trieth our hearts.

⁵ For neither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloak of covetousness; ^uGod is witness:

⁶ Nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor ^vyet of others, when we might have ^wbeen burdensome, ^xas the apostles of Christ.

⁷ But we were gentle among you, even ^yas a nurse cherisheth her children:

⁸ So, being ^zaffectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.

Chap. I. 1-3. It is well when the walk and conversation of individuals and Churches are such that their best friends are led to give God thanks on their behalf. True faith always works, true love always labours, and well-founded hope always inspires patience. These are valuable points for self-examination. Christianity now, in its principles and objects, is precisely what it was then; and the same causes in the same circumstances never fail to produce the same effects. Ver. 4-10. The election here set forth is not to merely outward privileges or means of grace, but to saving benefits; these benefits comprise regeneration, faith, adoption, and all that is implied in salvation, both for time and eternity. Paul did not ascertain the election of these people by Divine revelation, but by the reception which they gave the Gospel. They believed it with the heart unto righteousness, and with the mouth they made confession unto salvation. The Holy Spirit was present to call the chosen, and to quicken them by his own almighty power. The Gospel was among them its own witness, and the converts were as sure of its truth as of their own existence; they therefore received it with joy, notwithstanding the persecution they had to endure from their fellow-countrymen. That very persecution served important purposes; it produced decision, it kept out false professors, and strengthened those who were sincere. The enemies in this case were the prime co-operators of the apostle: by their violence they helped forward the work. The idols were renounced, and the Gospel received with all gladness, while the people walked in love, and waited for the coming of the Lord.

Chap. II. 1-12. Perfect peace is not essential to the successful propagation of the Gospel; strife and tumult, despite the evils which attend them, serve to call forth courage, to brace humanity, and to wake up the spirit of prayer. The wrath of man drives the children of God to their Father for shelter, aid, and guidance. Tranquillity is a blessing, but it also has its dangers, since it is apt to engender security and sloth. Paul everywhere appears to have guarded against the possibility of fairly imputing selfishness to him. There was 9 For ye remember, brethren, ¹our labour and travail: for labouring night and day, because we would not be ¹chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you ¹the gospel of God.

10 Ye are ¹witnesses, and God also, how holily, and justly, and unblameably, we behaved ourselves among you that believe:

11 As ye know ^mhow we exhorted and comforted, and charged every one of you, (^oas a father ^{doth} his children,)

12 That ye would ^owalk worthy of God, ^pwho hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

13 For this cause also ^qthank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received ^{it} not ^{as} the word of men, but (as it is in truth) ^rthe word of God, which ^reffectually worketh also in you that believe.

14 For ye, brethren, ^tbecame followers of the churches of God which in Judea ^{are} in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they ^{have} of the Jews;

15 Who both ^ukilled the Lord Jesus and their own prophets, and have ^upersecuted us; and they ^vplease not God, and are contrary to all men;

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles, that they might be saved, ^wto fill up their sins alway: ^wfor the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.

17 But we, brethren, being taken from you for a short time in presence, not in heart, endeavoured the more abundantly to see your face with great desire.

18 Wherefore we would have come unto you (even I Paul) once and again; but ^xSatan hindered us.

19 For what ^yis our hope, or joy, or ^zcrown of ^zrejoicing? ^zAre not even ye ^din the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?

20 For ye are our glory and joy.

¹ He exhorteth to go on in godliness, ⁷ to holiness, ⁹ to love, ¹¹ to quietness, ¹³ and to moderate sorrow for the dead. ¹⁵ Of the resurrection, ¹⁷ and of the last judgment.

FURTHERMORE then, we ¹beseech you, brethren, and ²exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received obviously a principle in this which is as much in force now as in early times. It is of the first importance that the missionaries of the Cross should go forth "taking nothing of the Gentiles." This expression, from the Apostle John, clearly shews, that the other apostles were governed by this prudential consideration as well as Paul. Ver. 13-20. The conversion of the Thessalonians partook of a very strong type; it was marked by the utmost decision. The persecution to which, in common with the apostle, they were exposed, had the effect of rousing them to a pitch of feeling, and of energy, of no ordinary character. The tone of the apostle is peculiarly triumphant; his heart overflows with love to the people. The picture here presented of the Jews is deeply painful; their guilt was so great that it called for punishment to the utmost. Satan carefully watched the whole of the apostolic operations, and whenever an opportunity occurred to work mischief, he promptly took advantage of it; and such is still his course, so that the people of God should ever remember his "devices." The parental spirit nowhere breathes more strongly in the Apostolic Epistles than here: the sufferings of the Thessalonians, and the noble manner in which they had borne up against them, peculiarly endeared them to Paul's loving heart.

Chap. III. 1-7. The anxiety of Paul became so great on their behalf, amid their persecutions, that he had no rest till he sent Timothy to their aid, to establish and comfort them. Such help is peculiarly necessary under such circumstances; nothing is so much calculated to strengthen sufferers for conscience sake as the reflection, that, although man is its author, it is appointed of God to accomplish purposes of mercy to his chosen people; since he who appoints controls, and when his objects are accomplished, puts an end to it. The report of their stability filled him with gladness. To the heart of the spiritual parent no joy is comparable to that of hearing of us how ye ought to walk and ^ato please God, so ye would abound more and more.

2 For ye know ^bwhat commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For ^cthis is the will of God, ^deven ^eyour sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication:

4 That every one of you ^fshould know how to possess ^ghis vessel in sanctification and honour;

5 Not in the lust of concupiscence, even ^has the Gentiles which know not God:

6 That no man go beyond and ⁱdefraud his brother ^jin any matter: because that ^kthe Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you, and testified.

7 For ^lGod hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness.

8 He therefore that ^mdespiseth, ⁿdespiseth not man, but God, ^owho hath also given unto us his Holy Spirit.

9 But as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you; ^pfor ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another.

10 And indeed ye do it toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more;

11 And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you;

12 That ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and ^qthat ye may have lack of ^rnothing.

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope.

14 For ^sif we believe that Jesus died, and rose again, even so them also which ^tsleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

15 For this we say unto you ^uby the word of the Lord, that we which are alive ^vand remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep.

16 For ^wthe Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of ^xthe archangel, and ^ywith the trump of God: ^{ca}and the dead in Christ shall rise first:

17 Then ^{cb}we which are alive ^{cc}and remain shall be ^{cd}caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: ^{ce}and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

CHAPTER V.

1 The apostle describeth the second coming of Christ, and exhorts to vigilant preparation. 11 Various exhortations, admonitions, and encouragements. 26 Concluding prayers and salutations.

BUT of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly, that ^{ca}the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, Peace and safety, ^{cb}then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.

5 Ye are all ^{cc}the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 Therefore ^{cd}let us not sleep, as do others; but let us ^{ce}watch and be sober.

7 For they that sleep, sleep in the night; and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night.

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on ^{ca}the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet ^{cb}the hope of salvation.

9 For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to ^{cc}obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, 10 Who ^{cd}died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.

11 Wherefore ^{ce}comfort yourselves together, ^{ca}and edify one another, even as also ye do.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, ^{ca}and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;

13 And to ^{cb}esteem them very highly that children walk in the truth. Ver. 8-13. Nothing can exceed the spirit of prayer which breathes in these verses. How exalted a conception it gives of the mighty heart of the apostle! Truly the Spirit of God works in him mightily. It even exceeds ordinary comprehension; it resembles the outburst of a strong fountain.

Chap IV. 1-8. The soul that is born of God, is never afterwards to rest in any measure of attainment short of perfection; it will be satisfied only when it shall awake with the likeness of its Lord! While here, "more and more" is its desire and cry, till filled with the fulness of God. Pure piety is comprehensive of the whole man; personal piety must be combined with social justice. The spirit of adoption is uniformly manifested by doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with God. Ver. 9-18. The grand lesson which God teaches all his children, is to "love one another." They who have this lesson still to learn, have not been in the school of Heaven. Here, again, the apostle's rule is "more and more." Industry is the uniform accompaniment of true Christianity. Death, to the saints, is but sleep, from which the voice of the Lord will awake them; on the morning of the resurrection not one will be left behind. This is a great truth, which was hid from the world till the Lord revealed it by his Spirit. This wonderful communication is full of comfort; and it behoves the faithful to take care, that amid the sorrows of the grave, no mourner shall be permitted to forget it.

Chap. V. 1-8. The second coming of the Lord was another of those stupendous facts which Christ communicated to mankind. The "children of the light," is the most beautiful definition of the saints in Holy Scripture; it is comprehensive of the highest character, and the highest privilege. Nothing more remarkably bespeaks relation to God, the Father of lights. Ver. 9-18. The death of the Lord Jesus for his people, the foundation of all their hopes, meets us at every turn; it stands inseparably connected with every point of the Gospel in love for their work's sake. And be at peace among yourselves.

14 Now we ²exhort you, brethren, warn them that are ³unruly, comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men.

² The first epistle unto the Thessalonians was written from Athens.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

The object of this Epistle is to correct certain errors into which the Thessalonians had fallen concerning the Second Coming of Christ. They supposed Paul to have intimated that the end of the world was at hand, which was attended with serious consequences. In addition to clearing up that matter, and imparting to them much important instruction, the apostle records a prophecy of the utmost moment concerning the rise of the "Man of Sin." Nothing at that time was so improbable as the appearance of such a power; but in due time it sprang up, and in every particular it was found to correspond with the prediction. Had it been written after the event, and in the middle of the fourteenth century, it could not have been more exact. This single prophecy, had it existed alone, would have sufficed to prove the inspiration of the apostle.

system—with all duty, and all privilege, with present peace, and hope for the future. Where Christian piety has attained to something like maturity, the means of mutual comfort and mutual edification will be diligently cultivated, and attended by the happiest results. This will in no respect be to interfere with, or supersede, the pastoral office, but rather to support it, the people doing that for each other which can in no other way be effected. In that day, Christians will "know them which labour among them, and are over them in the Lord, and admonish them; and esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake." The troublers of the Church, and the thorns in the sides of pastors, are not those most advanced in gifts and graces, and who most lay themselves out in holy exercises, but the contrary; they are the carnal, the contentious, the vain, the proud, and the rebellious. Ver. 14-23. Even this Church of the Thessalonians, while one of the best in ancient times, was far from perfect; it had in it the unruly, the feeble-minded, and the weak, who were to be severally dealt with as their cases required. We have in these verses a most precious directory for personal edification; and they who shall steadily act upon it, need not despair of attaining the fulness of the stature of perfect men in Christ Jesus. They will be in the sure way to be sanctified wholly, and to have their whole spirit, and soul, and body, preserved blameless unto the coming of the Lord. Nothing can exceed the brightness of the light which shines forth in this chapter, and in the whole epistle. It is throughout radiant with glory. Brief as it is, if the Divine Spirit had given to men nothing else, it would have constituted a benefaction of unutterable value.

Chap. I. 1-10. Paul does not at once proceed to correct the mistakes of the Thessalonians; but gives vent to the overflowing affection of his heart towards them. The errors were confined to a few; the bulk of the Church eminently adorned the Gospel in the midst of the fiercest persecution. It does not appear that any of the apostolic Churches suffered so much from the surrounding heathen as the Thessalonians; but their conduct was every way such as to call forth sympathy and encouragement, and the apostle most abundantly met the necessities of the case. The guilt of the persecutor was great, and his punishment would be in proportion. When the troubles of the faithful ceased, his would only begin! The circumstances attending the Second Advent are here depicted in terms of the utmost terror to the ungodly man. That will be a day of glory to the saints, but a day of anguish unutterable to the enemies of the Gospel. The expression, "everlasting destruction," is entitled to special notice. The same term is employed elsewhere in the New Testament to express both the duration of happiness and the duration of misery; it is, therefore, at the peril of men to alter the sense of either. There have, nevertheless, been those who allowed to the one the stamp of eternity, while they limited the other to a period of time. Ver. 11, 12. As usual, the apostle assures them of his continued prayers for their support, comfort, and preservation. Jesus must first be glorified in his people, and then they will be glorified in him. In the saints there is no inherent worth; but it pleased the Father to count them worthy for the sake of Him whose name they bear, and to raise them to the adoption of sons.

Chap. II. 1-12. The way thus opened, Paul proceeds to the principal subject of his epistle, and shews them that the day of Christ was still far off; and not only so, but that it is to be preceded by great events, of which there was then no appearance. The Spirit of inspiration here draws a perfect portrait of Antichrist, in his principles, spirit, and proceedings—rise, triumph, and fall. This single prophecy would have sufficed to establish the apostle's claim to a Divine mission, and to the gift of inspiration. With this marvellous prediction, it is not wonderful that Popery should have interdicted the use of the Scriptures to the people, since they would have served to discover the iniquity of the system, and so to put an end to it. This is not merely a thing of history. Although the prophecy is well-nigh two thousand years old, the subject of it still exists, constituting the greatest moral power in Europe, or the world. People have only to take the New Testament, and compare the type with the antitype, to be satisfied, that never did key and lock more perfectly suit each other than the prediction and the accomplishment. Ver. 13-17. Paul, in all his addresses to the saints, refers, with grateful joy, to the election of grace, employing it to excite love, confidence, and hope. These people were chosen, not merely to the enjoyment of the same means of grace as the Jews, but to "salvation through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth." They were chosen to the end, not less than the means, and ample provision was made for rendering them efficacious. The "tradi-

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

Although Timothy had received a religious education, he had not entered into the full liberty of the Gospel. Paul was the appointed instrument of his conversion; and of all his sons in the Gospel, there was none in whom he had so much satisfaction: Titus was probably next. Timothy was not only called to the work at a very early age, but received ordination for the same. He was generally the companion of Paul in his labours and journeys; and his name is associated with that of the apostle in no fewer than six of his Epistles—an honour peculiar to himself.

Saviour, and Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope;

2 Unto Timothy, my own son in the faith: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God our Father, and Jesus Christ our Lord.

tions" here referred to, mean simply the whole body of Gospel instruction which had been communicated by the apostle and the other teachers—all that had been taught by the living voice. The Christian life is largely made up of good words and good works; and, knowing this, it is both the privilege and the duty of the people of God to be established therein.

Chap. III. 1-5. While Paul's life was consecrated to prayer for the Church, he was deeply solicitous to obtain their prayers in his own behalf. In this way he often sets forth the value of mutual intercession. The Gospel at the outset might be likened to a fountain breaking forth in the desert, for which no channel had been prepared, and which had, therefore, to force and find its own way. In Thessalonica it had carried away every obstacle, and ran like a river in its bed, humbling pride, overthrowing idolatry, quickening the dead, enlightening the dark, and renovating the people on every side. It is the Lord's own prerogative to establish his people, and keep them from evil, directing their hearts into his love, and into the patience of the Lord Jesus Christ. Ver. 6-12. We have in these verses one of the most plain and wholesome lessons to be found in Scripture. The state of things which called for it must have been very serious. The Christianity which the apostle taught was a thing of order and business, raising men and ennobling society. We see throughout the apostolic writings that Paul's independence in the matter of support often stands him in good stead. Those slothful and frivolous people who manifested a disposition to live at the expense of their industrious neighbours, receive a severe rebuke by the mere statement of the apostle, that he ate no man's bread for nought, but wrought hard to supply his own necessities. Nothing could exceed the pungency of the apostolic reproof, and the authority with which he charges them to reform their course, and act as became Christian men. Ver. 13-18. One of the great duties of Christian fellowship is here stated; every member of the community is in duty bound to secure the observance of the laws by which it is governed. Where reproof was required, it was to be administered in the proper spirit; and where it failed, they were to manifest their solemn disapprobation by withdrawing from the party in error, not in the spirit of hostility, but of brotherly kindness. The principle here laid down is one full of force at the present hour, and which will continue unrepealed while there is a Church upon the earth. The neglect of this is one of the most serious defects of modern Christianity; and few things would bode better for the Church of Christ than a powerful revival of this part of the discipline of the primitive Church.

Chap. I. 1-6. From the first there has been a contained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief.

14 And ^gthe grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

15 This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, ^hthat Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; ⁱof whom I am chief.

16 Howbeit ^jfor this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might shew forth ^kall long-suffering, ^lfor a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting.

17 Now, unto ^mthe King eternal, immortal, invisible, ⁿthe only wise God, ^obe honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

18 This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare;

19 ^pHolding faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away, concerning faith have ^qmade shipwreck:

20 Of whom is Hymeneus and Alexander; whom ^rI have delivered unto Satan, that they may learn not to blaspheme.

CHAPTER II.

1 Prayer to be made for all men, and the reason why. 9 How women should be attired. 12 They are not permitted to teach.

I ¹EXHORT therefore, that, first of all, ²supplications, prayers, intercessions, and ³giving of thanks, be made for all men;

2 For kings, and for all that are in ⁴authority; that we may lead a quiet stant tendency in men to "teach other doctrines" than those of the Scriptures. It is, therefore, the duty of all who love Zion to exercise a godly jealousy on this subject. Charity with its eyes open is a valuable attribute, but when blind, it is but too ready to become the auxiliary of mischief. Nothing is more to be reprobated, both in the Sunday-school and in the pulpit, than "curious questions" and "vain jangling." They may amuse the young and the ignorant, but they will not prove the means either of conversion or edification. The fountain of love is a "pure heart"—a heart renovated and inhabited by the Spirit of God. It is always accompanied by a good conscience, and sincere faith in the Lord Jesus. Ver. 7-14. This is a brief delineation of a Christian man; the law here referred to is the Mosaic law; the ceremonial law was then at an end. The law is "holy, just, and good," in itself considered, and it serves important purposes in the economy of redemption. It is the instrument of convincing men of sin, and thus of paving the way for their conversion; from this they learn their danger, and the need of a Saviour. To the believer, it is also of the highest service as a rule of life. While Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to all believers, love is the end of the law for obedience; since the whole of it is fulfilled in one word—love. But the law also serves to detect the absence of this love, and so to aid integrity and discover hypocrisy. In these respects it is good; but to set it aside in these cases, or try to modify it into a means of righteousness, is not to use it "lawfully." Ver. 15-20. The Gospel, in its most generalised state, is mostly expressed by this saying, "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." Such is its grace, that it sufficed for even Paul, the guiltiest man of his time in the whole world. There is a terrible import in the expression, "chief of sinners." Many excelled in wickedness, but Saul of Tarsus surpassed them all. He occupied the first place, and the next to him was at an immeasurable distance: "he made havoc of the Church, entering into every house, and haling men and women, committed them to prison;" and as if that had not been enough, "he persecuted them to strange cities"—"breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord," he had recourse to means by which he might extend the sphere of his devastation. His case, therefore, was all but hopeless; no man of his age was so deeply stained with the blood of the innocent, yet for this man there was salvation! After this, then, no son of Adam need despair; for in the nature of things, no human being ever can, in point of guilt, exceed this terrible persecutor. Yet even he obtained mercy, that in him first Jesus Christ might shew forth all long-suffering, for a pattern to those that should afterwards believe. The blood that could remove the guilt of so much cruelty and slaughter, and clothe the perpetrator with righteousness, slaying his enmity, and firing his heart with love, sufficed for salvation to every conceivable degree of iniquity.

Chap. II. 1-6. The sublime and glorious character of true Christianity comes nobly forth in the opening verses. The prayers of the Christian Church were a very material circumstance in the affairs of the world. The intercessions of the Church extended to the whole human race. The most wicked were not beyond her thoughts and sympathies; nothing can exceed the benevolence displayed in this remarkable scripture. There can be little doubt as to what was the character of the supplications offered for these governments and authorities; their personal salvation, doubtless, occupied a primary place. It was further proper to pray that they might be led and guided in their political conduct, in and peaceable life in ^call godliness and honesty.

3 For ^dthis is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour;

4 Who ^ewill have all men to be saved, ^fand to come unto the knowledge of the truth.

5 For ^gthere is ^hone God, and ⁱone mediator between God and men, ^jthe man Christ Jesus;

6 Who ^kgave himself a ransom for all, ^lto be testified in due time.

7 Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, (^mI speak the truth in Christ, and lie not,) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity.

8 I will therefore that men ⁿpray every where, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting.

9 In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with ^obroidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array;

10 But (which becometh ^pwomen professing godliness) ^qwith good works.

11 Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection.

12 But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence.

13 For ^rAdam was first formed, then Eve.

14 And Adam was not deceived; ^sbut the woman, being deceived, was in the transgression.

15 Notwithstanding ^tshe shall be saved in child-bearing, if they continue in faith, and charity, and holiness, with sobriety.

CHAPTER III.

1 How bishops, and deacons, and their wives, should be qualified: 14 and to what end Paul wrote to Timothy of these things.

THIS is a true saying, If a man desire ^athe office of a bishop, he ^bdesireth a good work.

2 A bishop then must be ^cblameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, ^dof good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach;

3 ^eNot given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous;

4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity;

5 (For ^fif a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of ^gthe church of God?)

6 Not ^ha novice, ⁱlest, being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil.

7 Moreover, he must have ^ja good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach and ^kthe snare of the devil.

8 Likewise must ^lthe deacons be grave, not double tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre;

9 Holding ^mthe mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

10 And let these also first be proved; then let them use ⁿthe office of a deacon, ^obeing found blameless.

11 Even so must ^ptheir wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.

12 Let the deacons be ^qthe husbands of such a way as to fulfil the purposes of mercy to a guilty world. It is instructive to observe with what ease, and grace, and propriety Paul, on every occasion, brings forward the Atonement; Jesus Christ "gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." The doctrine of the Cross had become an element in his very nature, verifying to the letter his own remarkable language as to carrying about with him the dying of the Lord Jesus, and his determination to know nothing among men save Jesus Christ and him crucified. The lesson is highly important as shewing the place which the Lord's death ought to have in the affections of his people. It connects itself with every part of the system, and every act of the believer's existence. The passage, moreover, is one of a class strongly insisted on as proving the universality of the Atonement, and shewing that Jesus Christ, in some sense, died for every human being. There has been a world of controversy on this subject carried on to very little purpose. Learning and logic are less required for dealing with the question than humility, candour, dependence on Divine teaching, and a solemn determination to act fairly by the Word of God, in all attempts to ascertain its import. The honest, patient, prayerful inquirer who makes the New Testament his study, will probably reach the conviction that an atonement was made for the sins of the whole human race; that, with respect to every one of them, all the purposes, whatever they may be, for which it was necessary, have been fully answered; that the Atonement, in the Scripture representation of it, bears the same aspect towards the entire family of man; that it is represented as a general remedy for a general evil, without exclusion of class or individual, removing whatever stood between them and salvation. It will further be found, that the benefits of this Atonement are everywhere represented as being received through faith in the Divine testimony concerning it; and that all who despise it are doomed to perish, as the punishment of their guilt in so doing. It will further appear that faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the gift of God, the effect of the regeneration of the soul by the Holy Spirit. It will, finally, be seen also, that a multitude of the human race, exceeding all calculation, have been chosen from eternity to salvation, and given to the Lord Jesus Christ; that he specially intended the salvation of all such by his death, and that he will save them accordingly. These are facts: philosophy, whether falsely or truly, so called, and systematic theology, may now step in, suggesting difficulties, and taking objections of all sorts, on all sides; but the simple Christian may safely leave their professors to settle their own disputes; nothing can alter the facts, and they are enough to answer the ends of personal salvation. The Holy Spirit has said all on the subject that is necessary; and it behoves the saints to read and meditate his testimony. Ver. 7-15. Paul clearly shews, that in opposition to the superstitious notions of both Jews and Gentiles at that period, all places were alike suited to worship. Wherever God and the suppliant meet, there the Most High may be worshipped in spirit and in truth. The mind filled with wrath, even when it is just and proper, is not in a fit state for devotion; and in all approaches to God the Christian must leave doubt behind, whether as to his heavenly Father's love or mercy, grace or power. The less of earth and its passions believers have about them, the better are they prepared to appear before the mercy-seat.

Chap. III. 1-7. A "bishop" means simply an elder, pastor, or overseer of a church or company of believers. The celibacy of Popery is incontrovertibly condemned in the description here given of a bishop. The ministerial portrait drawn here is both positive and negative; it one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well.

13 For ¹they that have ²used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and ³great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

14 These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly.

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in ¹the house of God, which is ²the church of ³the living God, ⁴the pillar and ⁵ground of the truth.

16 And, without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: ¹God was ²manifest in the flesh, ³justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory.

CHAPTER IV.

¹ The apostle foretelleth that in the latter times there shall be a departure from the faith. ⁶ He directs Timothy in respect to his doctrine and conduct.

NOW ¹the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils;

² Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having ³their conscience seared with a hot iron;

³ Forbidding to marry, and ⁴commanding to abstain from meats, ⁵which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth.

⁴ For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving:

⁸ For bodily exercise profiteth ¹little; but godliness is profitable unto all things, ²having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

⁹ ¹This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation.

¹⁰ For therefore we both labour and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is ²the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.

¹¹ These things command and teach.

¹² Let no man despise thy youth; but ¹be thou an example of the believers, ²in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.

¹⁶ Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this ²thou shalt both save thyself, and ³them that hear thee.

shews both what he must not, and what he must be. If closely examined, its extraordinary fulness will be apparent. Such is the standard set up by the Holy Spirit for all coming time; such are the approved bishops of the Lord Jesus Christ; such are the men whom he is exalted to give his people; and such are the greatest, best gifts he can bestow on them. Such were the men who filled the world with the doctrine of the Cross; and such are the men whom the Eternal Spirit will employ to finish what the apostles began. This matter is vital; it therefore behoves the Church of Christ to keep her eye steadily fixed upon the Divine model, in all the arrangements she may adopt for procuring a supply of faithful men for the ministry of the word. If from this standard there be an essential or material departure, the result will be disastrous. Ver. 8-13. Next to the office of the bishop in importance was that of the deacon; and here, too, the Divine criterion is laid down: the moral qualities absorb every other consideration. No mention is made of wealth or social position; he may be rich or poor, but he must be distinguished for moral and spiritual excellence. This pattern, like that of the bishop, is intended for every age of the Church. This office, like that of the bishop, has, among most Reformed communities, to a large extent been divested of its scriptural character. Ver. 14-16. We have here the most remarkable compend of the Evangelical system anywhere to be found in Scripture. The basis of the wonderful structure is the Godhead of the Lord Jesus. It was God that was "manifest in the flesh." Here is the centre of the great mystery, the soul of the mighty whole. After all that Revelation has done, or can do, to make things clear, the mystery remains great and incomprehensible. But if much darkness necessarily continues, much light now shines—all, indeed, that is necessary for salvation. The text has been the subject of much hostility among men who loved not the truth it sets forth; but after all that has been said, the text remains in all its Divine integrity and glorious fulness. It therefore only remains for Christians to believe, rejoice, and adore! The subject is so important, that it is communicated in a manner peculiarly emphatic. A religion without mystery is a religion without God, atonement, grace, and salvation.

Chap. IV. 1-5. The subject is so momentous that it is stated in a manner more than usually explicit: "The Spirit speaketh expressly." Here, again, as in the Epistle to the Thessalonians, we have another of those inspired portraits of Popery which fixed on it the brand of the Divine displeasure, and marked it out for destruction. The "faith" means the whole system of Christianity. Popery perfected, renounced every particle of the true Gospel; every doctrine was neutralised, every ordinance perverted. The prophetic, the priestly, and the royal character of Christ, while maintained in words, were absolutely set aside. The Scriptures were withheld from the people, and but glenderly used—and used only to be perverted—by the priests. The atonement of Christ was superseded, and his sceptre broken in pieces. The terms Justification and Sanctification were retained only to be transposed, and thereby divested of their principal and proper character. Sanctification, in the language of Popery, so far from being the fruit of justification, is the condition of it; and thus the work of the creature takes place of the work of Christ on the cross! Everything else is of a piece: the Gospel system and the Gospel kingdom are utterly destroyed, and a huge scheme of falsehood, imposture, and impiety raised in its stead. Ver. 6-11. It is no small part of the pastor's work to keep alive in the hearts of the flock the old truth. Spiritual hunger, the fruit of healthful piety, so far from complaining of this, will highly prize it, and profit from it. For the Christian teacher ever and anon to strive after 2 The ^celder women as mothers; the younger as sisters, with all purity.

3 Honour widows that are widows indeed.

4 But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to shew ¹piety at home, and to requite their parents: for that is ^dgood and acceptable before God.

5 Now she that is a widow indeed, and desolate, ^etrusteth in God, and ^fcontinueth in supplications and prayers night and day.

6 But she that liveth ²in pleasure is ^gdead while she liveth.

7 And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.

8 But if any provide not for his own, ^hand specially for those of his own ⁱhouse, he hath denied the faith, ^jand is worse than an infidel.

9 Let not a widow be ^ktaken into the number under threescore years old, ^lhaving been the wife of one man.

10 Well reported of for ^mgood works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have ⁿwashed the saints' feet, ^oif she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.

11 But the younger widows refuse: for when they have begun ^pto wax wanton against Christ, they will marry;

12 Having damnation, because they have cast off their first faith.

13 And withal they learn to be idle, novelty, is to neglect truth, and keep back the food by which alone the Lord nourishes the souls of his people. The doctrines of the Gospel are one thing, the philosophy of those doctrines another: the former may be likened to fruit, the latter to foliage. It is not by reasoning about the Gospel that men's minds are moved, but by the Gospel itself. It is not by scientific analysis of the "balm of Gilead" that the afflicted are healed, but by the balm itself. The carnal portions of congregations, nauseating spirituality, prefer speculation, portraiture, and eloquence; the children of the kingdom delight to hear of the blood and righteousness of its Head and Lord. Ver. 12-16. The Christian teacher, of whatever order, ought to be a living illustration of his own lessons. Paul could say, "The things ye have seen and heard in me, do." Happy all who can adopt his language! Notwithstanding Timothy's superior parts, and the special gift conferred upon him, Paul enjoins him to diligence and entire consecration. No native powers can enable a man to dispense with study. The attempt is presumption; and the result will be discredit on the one hand, and starvation on the other. Entire devotedness will inevitably be followed by profit; and the Church will not fail to perceive it. The minister's first concern is his own salvation, and his next that of his flock; and both objects are realised by the same means. Godly jealousy over his own heart, and steadfast adherence to apostolic doctrine, are two of the chief points by which the "man of God" should steer his course to the haven of eternal felicity.

wandering about from house to house; and not only idle, but tattlers also, and ²⁵busybodies, ²⁶speaking things which they ought not.

14 ²⁷I will therefore that ²⁸the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, ²⁹give none occasion to the adversary ³⁰to speak reproachfully.

15 ³¹For some are already turned aside after Satan.

16 If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.

17 Let ³²the elders that ³³rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the ³⁴word and doctrine.

18 For the scripture saith, ³⁵Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, ³⁶The labourer ³⁷is worthy of his reward.

19 Against an elder ³⁸receive not an accusation, but ³⁹before ⁴⁰two or three witnesses.

20 Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear.

21 I ⁴¹charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things, ⁴²without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality.

22 Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure.

23 Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thine often infirmities.

24 Some men's ⁴³sins are open before-hand, going before to judgment; and some ⁴⁴men they follow after.

25 Likewise also the good works of or presbyter; it stands opposed to the younger next adverted to. To "honour" widows means to support them; what delicacy of sentiment and expression! Christians are here taught the spirit in which they ought to treat the pious poor. A "widow indeed" is utterly helpless and friendless; such are the primary objects of the Church's care. They who have children, or grandchildren, are not such; they have claims which these, their offspring and descendants, are bound to respect. This is the dictate of nature, apart from all consideration of religion: men professing to be Christians, therefore, and neglecting their own flesh and blood, deny the faith, and are worse than unbelievers. There is reason to fear that this duty is not so well nor so generally understood as it ought to be; it is, perhaps, too much overlooked in public teaching, which is the only means of arousing conscience and correcting error. Again, it is to be feared, that those who are "widows indeed," and who are entirely supported by the Church, or the bounty of individuals, do not always fully understand and realise their own noble mission. Impotent, and apparently useless, by properly fulfilling their own vocation they may yet become the greatest benefactors to the Church, and the prime promoters of the cause of God. Let them only "continue in prayers night and day," and it is done! Ver. 9-16. Most expositors have thought that the apostle is here speaking of deaconesses, and fixing the age at which they are to enter upon office. There is no age fixed for the deacons, why then for the deaconesses? But there is no proof that such an office then existed: all the evidence looks the other way. Why may not the apostle be speaking of "the number" of those who received support from the Church, and specifying the age some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.

CHAPTER VI

1 Servants' duties. 3 To avoid corrupt teachers. 5 The gain of godliness.

LET as many servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, ^athat the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed.

2 And they that have ^bbelieving masters, let them not despise them, because they are brethren; but rather do them service, ^cbecause they are ^dfaithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. ^eThese things teach and exhort.

3 If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even ^fthe words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to ^gthe doctrine which is according to godliness;

4 He is ^hproud, knowing nothing, but ⁱdoting about questions and strifes of ^jwords, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings,

5 ^kPerverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself.

8 And having food and raiment, let us be therewith content.

9 But they that will be rich fall into temptation, and ^oa snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition.

10 For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have ^perred from the faith, ^qand pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

^vThe first to Timothy was written from Laodicea, which is the chiefest city of Phrygia Pacatiana.

at which it was to commence? On that supposition, it was natural for the apostle to refer, not to the work to be done by them, but to the aid to be received by them. Again, are not the good works here enumerated viewed as the ground of the claim to the support provided, rather than as a mark of fitness for the office of deaconess? Is not the apostle referring to widows who had seen better days, and who had used their prosperity, while it lasted, for the good of the Church and the glory of God? Ver. 17-25. The "double honour" here means suitable and ample maintenance. The principle seems to be that men who labour most shall be supported best: the equity is obvious.

Chap. VI. 1-10. "Servants" means slaves. The apostles made no direct attack on the governments of the world, which would only have been to multiply their adversaries, and to increase the difficulty of their work. It could have served no good end to sow the seeds of insurrection, and embroil society. They were, therefore, led by their Divine Monitor to abstain from this, and to go on implanting the principles of truth and justice, love and mercy, leaving them in due season, in their own way, to produce their proper effects; and the result through the whole earth has been such as to justify the wisdom of the apostolic course. Already Christianity has gone far to extinguish slavery, and it is in a sure way to finish what it has so gloriously begun. It seems clear, however, that there were men who thought otherwise, and were intent on diffusing different opinions; they might mean well, but they acted indiscreetly. Whatever their zeal, or pretence, they were "destitute of the truth," and hence knew not its liberalizing power. Generally, the best method of dealing with such men is, not to answer, but to withdraw from them. This course commended itself to the apostle. Ver. 11-16. Paul is ever intent on the practical, to the exclusion of all useless controversy. The charge here given is sublime and awful, and much fitted to impress Timothy, and all in every age who minister in holy things. Ver. 17-21. This charge, which is binding on the conscience of all ministers, demands the devout consideration of all men of opulence. They are seldom admonished of the dangers connected with wealth, and, therefore, unapprised of their peculiar peril. Few would envy wealth, if they but knew its spiritual dangers, to say nothing of the troubles in which it frequently involves them. The principal means of safety is, not increasing and hoarding, but ample, judicious, and unwearied distribution. The danger of the rich is increased by the fact, that the tendency of human nature is to render them impatient of admonition; and hence the man of God is strongly tempted to let them alone. Thus their tranquillity is consulted at the expense of their safety.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

Paul was twice imprisoned at Rome—first, when he appeared to prosecute his appeal; and next, when Nero was persecuting the Christians, on what ground is not known. This was about the year 65; and it is probable that then, during the latter period of the year, he wrote this Epistle. His pathetic appeals clearly shew that he considered his work drawing to a close, and had made up his mind to depart through martyrdom to glory. The object of the Epistle was to comfort and encourage Timothy, amid the dangers of the time, as well as to prepare him for the events which were at hand.

CHAPTER I.

1 Paul's love to Timothy, 8 whom he exhorts to suffer for the gospel's sake; 9 having respect to the mercy shewn him, 12 and the example set him. 16 Of Onesiphorus.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,

2 To Timothy, my dearly-beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and Christ Jesus our Lord.

3 I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day;

4 Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;

5 When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also.

6 Wherefore I put thee in remembrance, that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands.

7 For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

8 Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner: but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel, according to the power of God;

9 Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began;

10 But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel:

17 But, when he was in Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me.

18 The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day: and in how many things he ministered unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well.

CHAPTER II.

1 Timothy exhorted to constancy and perseverance; 14 and to avoid unprofitable disputes.

THOU therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus.

2 And the things that thou hast heard

Chap. I. 1-12. Happy the young man who has the constant prayers of the righteous; and happy the righteous, that no distance from those they love affects the privilege of prayer on their behalf! Descent from the godly is an honour and a blessing of no common character. Superior parts, and true piety, notwithstanding their paramount value, do not abate their possessor from the obligation to use every means for self-improvement, and the increase of capability for usefulness. Extremes try people. It requires courage for a man to avow himself a Christian, with the rack, the stake, the lions, or the cross before him; or, like Onesiphorus, to claim acquaintance with Christians in dungeons, waiting trial or execution; but the grace of the Gospel is sufficient for every emergency. Ver. 13-18. Paul himself was equally above false shame and the fear of man; his knowledge of the Lord, and hope of glory, rendered him more than conqueror over every foe. From these words it is clear that there had been a great falling away from the profession of the Gospel in Asia, and that some, whom he had deemed pillars, had failed him in the day of trial. Nothing in the epistle is more touching and beautiful than this prayer for Onesiphorus. To state what he did is to pronounce on him the highest panegyric. We know not where to look for a more remarkable illustration of Christian love, on the one hand, or of Christian gratitude on the other. Of all the Gentile benefactors of the apostle, the first place was, probably, due to Onesiphorus. He is here handed down to the latest ages as a pattern of holy courage and Divine philanthropy.

Chap. II. 1-13. Great strength is required for great service, and the "man of God" has the promise of an adequate supply. Fidelity to the Lord, and ability in setting forth his truth, are two of the leading qualifications of a competent minister of the Gospel. The resurrection of Christ was one of the great truths to be attested by the apostle. That, and the atoning sacrifice of me ¹among many witnesses, ^bthe same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also.

3 Thou therefore ^cendure hardness, as ^aa good soldier of Jesus Christ.

4 No man that warreth ^eentangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier.

5 And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully.

6 The husbandman ²that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits.

7 Consider what I say; ^fand the Lord give thee understanding in all things.

8 Remember that Jesus Christ, of the seed of David, was raised from the dead, according to my gospel:

9 Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evil-doer, even unto bonds; ^gbut the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory.

11 It is a faithful saying: ^hFor if we be dead with him, ⁱwe shall also live with him:

12 If ^kwe suffer, we shall also reign with him: ^jif we deny him, he also will deny us:

13 If we believe not, ^m*yet* he abideth faithful; he cannot deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers.

15 Study to shew thyself ⁿapproved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

16 But shun profane and vain babblings; for they will increase unto more ungodliness.

17 And their word will eat as doth a ^ocanker; of whom is Hymeneus and Philetus;

THIS know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come:

2 For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,

3 Without natural affection, truce-breakers, ¹false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, which preceded, were the two cardinal points of his history, and the prime elements of the Gospel system. Paul never forgot that God had a people whom he had chosen from eternity, and predestinated to salvation. For this elect community he endured all things, that they might attain eternal glory. Life will, beyond all doubt, follow death with Christ; suffering will be succeeded by royalty: the alternative is, to deny him, and to be denied by him; or to confess him before men, and be acknowledged by him before the Father and his holy angels. Ver. 14-26. Paul never wearies of cautioning Timothy against useless controversies, on the ground of their tendency to injure the souls of the faithful, as everything must do which heats the spirit, and turns it aside from the Lord Jesus. It is a shame for a man to occupy a position for which he has been at no pains to qualify himself. One of the conditions of an efficient ministry is, a right division of the word of truth, so that both individuals and classes may have their portion of meat in due season. No terms are so incongruous as Christ and iniquity; he came to destroy it, and they who profess to be his people must cease to love and practise it. Personal purgation is a matter in which the individual is actively and constantly to occupy himself; it must not be left to chance. The course here pointed out is a standing rule for pastors and teachers of every age. All virtues have their opposites; "gentleness," however precious, must not degenerate into weakness, nor patience into apathy. Aptness to teach is a gift indispensable to all whose business is to communicate the knowledge of the truth; nothing is more certain than that there is no call to the ministry where there is no qualification for it.

Chap. III. 1-9. Those awful days would be perilous to piety, and perhaps to life. The picture here drawn is frightful, and all the more so as the subjects of it are men "having a form of godliness," while the cultivation of such tempers, and the exhibition of such characters, were proofs that they denied its power. There is no measure of iniquity that may not be grafted on a profession of religion. They who would know what true Christianity is, should at once betake themselves to the written Word. Ver. 10-15. Those who have received grace to live godly in Christ Jesus ought not to be surprised if they are the subjects of persecution. They ought to rejoice in it, and accept it as the world's certificate to their separation and revolt against its spirit and 4 Traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures ^amore than lovers of God;

5 Having ^aa form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away.

6 For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts;

8 Now, as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also ^aresist the truth: men of corrupt minds, ^areprobate concerning the faith.

9 But they shall proceed no further: for their folly shall be manifest unto all ^amen, as theirs also was.

17 Notwithstanding ^athe Lord stood with me, and ^astrengthened me; that by me the preaching might be fully known, its god by whom it is led captive. Ver. 16, 17. The question of inspiration is here authoritatively settled; nothing can be more explicit than the testimony thus borne on this all-important subject. In our times great errors have been propagated on this head, against which the faithful ought always to be on their guard. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God" is language which cuts short all discussion; in the face of these words, to entertain a plea for "partial inspiration" is to rebel against the majesty of truth. The measure of inspiration was determined by the necessities of the case; where most was required, most was imparted; if less sufficed, less was given; but the whole was of that nature which constituted it the Word of God, in all points inspired, and on every subject infallible. Like the sun at noon, it gives light to all, but borrows none; not only are all artificial helps needless and useless, but lost in the Divine effulgence. It is the great storehouse of Divine knowledge, comprising whatever is necessary for the closet or the sanctuary. The man of God requires no other book than the Word of God thoroughly to furnish him unto all good works.

Chap. IV. 1-5. There is something awfully impressive in the charge here given to Timothy. Notwithstanding the pre-eminence of the situation in which he was placed, for ordaining ministers and superintending the affairs of the Churches, he was not to limit his concern to these things, but to labour with his utmost might in spreading the Gospel. It is not a little remarkable that such a departure from the faith should have followed so rapidly on the establishment of Christianity; no sooner did true piety begin to live than it began to die! Fable had more charm for the people than truth. The spirit of truth alone could establish its empire in the midst of a wicked world, and He alone could maintain it. Any withdrawal of his power would be attended with decay and death. Such times call for the utmost vigilance on the part of the servants of the Lord; nor is this all—they try the spirits of men by involving them in loss, trouble, and affliction. Ver. 6-15. Paul having taught the churches how to live, now teaches them how to die. His example is pathetic in the extreme, and full of encouragement to the faithful followers of the Lord Jesus. All who have in substance done the ⁷ The second epistle unto Timothy, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Ephesians, was written from Rome, when Paul was brought before Nero the second time.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TITUS.

Both Timothy and Titus were spiritual sons of Paul; they appear both to have occupied much the same place in his affections, and to have sustained a similar position in the field of evangelical operation, and to have discharged the duties of their office with equal ability and success. If any difference be observable, it would seem that Timothy was somewhat more prominent in point of labour and travel than Titus. They are, incomparably, the two most distinguished Evangelists.

10 For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, especially they of the circumcision;

11 Whose mouths must be stopped; who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

12 One of themselves, even a prophet of their own, said, The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies.

13 This witness is true: wherefore ^are-buke them sharply, ^athat they may be sound in the faith;

14 Not giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth.

15 Unto ^cthe pure all things are pure: ^bbut unto them that are defiled and unbelieving ^cis nothing pure; but even ^ctheir mind and conscience is defiled.

16 They ^aprofess that they know God; but in works they deny him, ^abeing work, are permitted to enjoy the prospect of the apostle. The crown of righteousness will be withheld from none who have fought the good fight, finished their course, and kept the faith. Ver. 16-22. While a more lion-hearted man than the apostle never lived, no man was ever more sensible either of kindness or of cruelty. In proof of this we may cite the whole of his epistles. According to the striking and most significant language of the apostle, in standing at the bar of Nero, he was in the lion's mouth, and it called for no common courage on the part of his friends to place themselves where they might probably be devoured. It is notwithstanding clear, that duty required them to do so, but their bravery was not equal to the occasion. Had not their cowardice been culpable, Paul would not have prayed that it might not be "laid to their charge." But if the yellow-servants failed the apostle, the Master remained faithful, standing by him, and delivering him out of the mouth of the lion.

The joy of deliverance seems to have been all the greater, seeing that from the abandonment of timid friends, it was wholly of the Lord.

Chap. I. 1-3. The election of grace and the common faith are the points which here come out at once. We see that, as in the letters to Timothy, elder and bishop are terms perfectly synonymous; they are used interchangeably without a particle of variation, and the character as well as the office is one. It is much to be regretted, that, in this important matter, apostolic example should ever have ceased to be followed; things, however, have been so managed, that the terms bishop and presbyter have become, in some respects, different offices, and descriptive of different systems of ecclesiastical government. The Apostolic Church was both Episcopal and Presbyterian, since the one was the other, and used interchangeably. Ver. 9-15. The bishop

CHAPTER III.

1 The apostle inculcates subjection to rulers, and good behaviour to all men. 9 He cautions Titus to avoid disputes, and shews him how to deal with heretics; 15 and concludes with salutations.

PUT them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work,

2 To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, shewing all meekness unto all men.

3 For ¹we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, ²serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

4 But after that ¹the kindness and ²love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,

5 Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but ¹according to his mercy he saved us, by ²the washing of regeneration, and ³renewing of the Holy Ghost;

6 Which he shed on us ²abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour;

7 That, ¹being justified by his grace, we should be ²made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

8 This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, required to be a man of fixed principle, "holding fast the faithful word as he had been taught." Sound doctrine was the basis of the episcopal character and qualifications. Flaming zeal, simply in itself considered, was no proof of sound principles—the presumption was rather the contrary. It is the power of zealous effort, carried on with wisdom and perseverance, to command comparative success even for the most pernicious error. "Sharpness" is quite compatible with meekness, and often necessary to just and merited rebuke. Ver. 16. These are awful words! They shew the extent to which the human heart is at once deceitful and wicked. The picture here presented is that of the worst of men "professing that they know God." This is the very climax of iniquity! It indicates that the predicted apostasy is perfected.

Chap. II. 1-10. No portraits are comparable to those of Inspiration: a few strokes and the outline is finished. The points are indicated with wonderful brevity, and nothing is wanted but their full development to complete the character. Things are put both positively and negatively in such a manner as to omit nothing at all important. Ver. 11-15. How very different a thing is the grace of God in the hands of the apostle from what it is in those of ignorance and unbelief! The wicked represent it as fatal to morality, and holding forth the strongest inducements to sin. Its lessons and its watch-words are sobriety, righteousness, and godliness; and where these are not found, it distinctly maintains that there is no religion. The very end of the death of the "great God and our Saviour" was to redeem his people from iniquity, to purify them, and to fire them with a zeal for good works. The shortest, surest method of confounding the ignorance of the gainsayer, is just to point to these and similar texts of Scripture. It deserves special notice that this scripture bears most explicit testimony to the perfect Godhead of Jesus Christ. This is too clear to admit of any rational dispute. In the New Testament the term "appear" is never applied to the Father, whereas the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ to judgment is of frequent occurrence. Christ will, indeed, come in his Father's glory as well as in his own; yet there will be no visible appearance of the Father, who was not incarnate, but of the Son, who was. For this his people wait, as for that which will put an end to all their toils, trials, and sorrows.

Chap. III. 1-7. Here, again, we have another of those passages so precious for their fullness of Gospel truth. The whole of the wonderful plan, as to doctrine, experience, and practice, is set forth in a word; not works, but mercy, introduces salvation. The Holy Ghost came through Jesus, and, so coming, regenerated and renewed the souls of the elect. Justification is wholly of grace, and the justified are made heirs of God, according to the hope of eternal life. Here is the whole scheme of the Gospel in epitome; the variety in expression and representation of which the case admits is boundless, but the essential principles and marvellous facts are unchangeable. This is to be constantly kept in mind in all evangelical teaching, whether of the old or of the young.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO PHILEMON.

Onesimus, as the slave of Philemon, had abundant means of hearing the Gospel under his master's roof, and probably also from the lips of Paul; but he continued a heathen, until at length, impatient of bondage, he fled to Rome. Poor and friendless, he was induced to inquire for Paul, who not only received him in his prison, but addressed him with affectionate fidelity on the concerns of his soul. He was a chosen vessel, and the time of his calling was come. The result was conversion, and surrender to the Lord Jesus. The Epistle, which is a perfect model of pathos, discretion, and love, will explain the rest.

1 Paul salutes Philemon; 4 rejoiceth to hear of his faith and love; 8 earnestly entreats him to receive into favour his fugitive servant Onesimus, now a consistent believer; 23 and concludes with salutations and benedictions.

PAUL, a prisoner of Jesus Christ, and Timothy our brother, unto Philemon our dearly beloved, and fellow-labourer,

2 And to our beloved Apphia, and Archippus our fellow-soldier, and to the church in thy house:

3 Grace to you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Ver. 8, 9. There is a true and a safe variety, and there is a false and a fatal one. To avoid sameness, and to give instruction the air of freshness and of originality, the primary elements of the Gospel may be left out. This will please the carnal ear, and it may be, command popularity; but it will grieve the devout, and starve the spiritual family. Amid a legitimate and never-ceasing variety of exhibition, there must be a substantial sameness, if the Gospel is not to be excluded, or so watered down as to be no longer the power of God to salvation. Paul had no fear of satiety from repetition, either as to doctrine or morals. "These things I will that thou affirm constantly," is an expression setting forth the law of the case. An incessant iteration of two or three points, without the endless combinations of which they admit, and which they require, is one extreme; and an incessant straining after novelties, to the exclusion of evangelical verities, is another. The true teaching of the Scriptures requires a well-proportioned and harmonious display of the Gospel, in all its principles, parts, and applications, after the model of the Epistles. Such a ministration will never fail to command the approval of the devout, and to be accompanied by the Divine Spirit, rendering it efficacious to all the purposes of salvation. Ver. 10-12. A heretic was a man who denied the evangelical doctrine, and thereby treached on the integrity of the Gospel, which amounted to a heinous transgression. When such men continued adhering to their error, in spite of repeated admonition, it became necessary to sever them from the Church, lest others should be contaminated. Ver. 13-15. Paul was a model in all the proprieties of social life; while prepared to the utmost for strife and suffering, if necessary to the cause of Christ, he was far from despising the blessings of peace, the bounties of Providence, and the comforts of life. He saw no religion in self-inflicted torture. His care to provide for the wants of his friends on their journey to advance the Gospel deserves notice from the Churches of Christ and the governors of missionary institutions.

Ver. 1-7. After the salutation, the apostle makes a devout and affectionate reference to the life, labours, and character of Philemon, all expressive of confidence in his high personal piety, which leads to the object of the letter. Ver. 8-14. Entreaty is more congenial to the loving spirit than authority, even where it rests on proper foundations. Paul was probably now upwards of sixty years of age, the period when the Jews began to look on men as aged. His years and his chain gave peculiar tenderness to his appeal. Other things being equal, piety greatly adds to the value of a slave, or even a freeman. Were the servants of the world brought under the thorough influence of Gospel principles, it

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE HEBREWS.

This Epistle was written from Italy about the year 64, and towards the close of Paul's imprisonment, or immediately after it. Its object is to confirm the Hebrew Christians in the faith of Jesus as their Messiah. The structure of the Epistle is peculiar. It is in the highest degree suited to the circumstances of the Jews, whose prejudices were of a character altogether different from those of the Gentiles. The apostle dwells with great force and fulness on the personal dignity of Christ. He shews that, to fulfil the Scriptures, the Messiah, when he came, must die to atone for sin, rise from the dead, and ascend into the heavens. It is clearly made out that all these points, and others, which, to the carnal Jew, might seem objections to the claims of Jesus, rightly understood were incontrovertible proofs of his mission.

of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high;

4 Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they.

5 For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son?

6 ^aAnd again, when he bringeth in the first-begotten into the world, he saith, would redoand, in a manner not to be conceived, to the interests of their employers. Ver. 15-25. Paul clearly seems to think that there was a special Providence in the present case. Time, place, and instrumentality in the matter of conversion, are all fixed by the Lord. Onesimus might have heard the gospel at Colosse, where his master resided, and have been brought to the Lord by other lips, but it was not so ordered. There is a time, a set time, to favour men as well as nations, and the means form part of the Divine plan. Had things been otherwise in the present case, the Church would have lost one of the most precious portions of Inspiration, and one of the most touching illustrations of Christian love on record. The epistle, moreover, possesses a particular value as bearing on the great question of slavery. Philemon is here distinctly told that he is to receive Onesimus "not now as a slave, but above a slave, a brother beloved." These words, rightly interpreted, will make short work with slavery, where both the master and the slave are Christians. Slavery is abhorrent, utterly and for ever abhorrent, to natural justice, Christian love, and the royal law. While the right to freedom is founded in nature, and precedes Christianity, Christianity, in the end, will everywhere establish that right, and introduce every soul of man to the fellowship of freedom. When once all men shall have come to know the truth, the result will be freedom alike from the slavery of man and of Satan.

Chap. I. 1-4. The Sonship, the Divinity, and the Atonement of Christ, are here set forth at once, somewhat in the manner of the first chapter of the Gospel of John. It was He who made the world, that became incarnate, and hung on the crosses. The Jewish High Priest, by the blood of the atonement, typically purged the sins of the people; but Christ, the true sacrifice, did so by his own blood. His work was in all points distinguished by unity; he was priest, sacrifice, altar, and

And let all the angels of God worship him.

7 And ²of the angels he saith, Who made^h his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire.

8 But unto the Son he saith, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever; 'a sceptre of ^hrighteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom.

9 Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath ^hanointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

10 And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning ^hhast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are ^hthe works of thine hands:

11 They shall perish, but ^hthou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment;

12 And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: ^hbut thou art the same, ^hand thy years shall not fail.

13 But to which of the angels said he at any time, ^h"Sit on my right hand, ^ountil I make thine enemies thy footstool?

14 Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?

with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and ²gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?

5 For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak.

6 But one in a certain place testified, saying, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or ^hthe son of man, that thou ^ovisitest him?

7 Thou madest him a little ^hlower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honour, and didst set him over the works of thy hands:

8 Thou ^hhast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. ^oBut now we see not yet all things put under him:

9 But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels ^hfor the suffering of death, ^hcrowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should ^htaste death for every man.

10 For it became him, ^hfor whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing ^hmany sons unto glory, to make ^hthe Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings.

11 For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, 12 Saying, ^h"I will declare thy name unto my brethren, ^hin the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.

13 And again, ^h"I will put my trust in him. And again, ^oBehold I and the children which God hath given me.

14 Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, ^hhe also himself likewise took part of the same; that ^hthrough death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, ^hthe devil;

15 And ^hdeliver them who through incense, and he perfected his work at once, making a full and a final atonement for all the sins of all his people. Having finished his work, he ascended into the heavens, and took his seat at the Father's right hand—a Royal Priest on the throne of his glory. Ver. 5-14. The expression, "This day have I begotten thee," has been the subject of much discussion. The opinions have been various, but, in principle, all harmonious. The central idea is the resurrection. Paul is not here discoursing of the Eternal Sonship of Jesus, but of his exaltation above the angelic hosts. The command to all the angels of God to worship him is a most significant circumstance as bearing on his proper divinity. This fully harmonises with the perpetuity of his reign, and the equity of his laws. The angels who worship the Lord have also the honour of advancing his kingdom. From this it is clear that the angelic hosts have much to do in the affairs of the Church on earth. The declaration here is general; but the holy Scriptures specify particulars in abundance. The doctrine is equally and eminently fitted to awe, encourage, and cheer.

Chap. II. 1-4. The doctrine of the previous chapter is here applied. Memory is treacherous, and requires to be watched and stirred up: things seldom thought of are likely in the end to be forgotten, when they will cease to be felt. Negligence is an error to be followed by penalty; there is no escape for those who condemn the great salvation. Ver. 5-13. Jesus Christ is universal Lord, and all must submit either to his love or his power; they who refuse to be saved must be crushed, for the Lord of all must vindicate his own authority—his boundless empire must exhibit no part dialoyal and unsubdued. The Christian salvation involves moral warfare in its most intense form. From the first hour to the present, it has been one continued conflict; the Captain himself was the principal sufferer, and in this way he was prepared for his office of High Priest. His soldiers were his brothers, and as such he was not ashamed to acknowledge them, notwithstanding his purity and perfection, dignity and glory. Ver. 14-18. Christ took humanity for the express purpose of making the atonement—for the destruction of the devil, and the deliverance of the saints. The devil, as the tempter of man, is the author of sin, and the cause of death. The people of God are delivered from the sting of death, and filled with the hope of immortality. They know that even death will result in their good, and that they will rejoice over their last enemy in the morning of the resurrection. The fear of death amongst ungodly men is still universal; whatever, in their madness, some of them may affect, it is terrible to the human race. But for fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.

16 For verily he ⁵took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham.

17 Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, ⁶to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.

18 For in that he himself hath ⁷suffered, being tempted, ⁸he is able to succour them that are tempted.

CHAPTER III.

1 Christ is more worthy than Moses. 7 Therefore, if we believe not in him, we shall be more worthy of punishment than hard-hearted Israel.

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of ²the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus:

2 Who was ³faithful to him that ¹appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house.

3 For ⁴this man was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he ⁵who hath builded the house hath more honour than the house.

4 For every house is builded by some man; ⁶but he that built all things is God.

5 And Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after;

6 But Christ ⁷as a Son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.

7 Wherefore (as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day, if ye will ⁸hear his voice,

8 ⁹Harden not your hearts, ¹⁰as in the provocation, in the day of ¹¹temptation in the wilderness:

12 Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, ¹⁸in departing from the living God.

13 But exhort one another daily, while it is called To-day; lest any of you be hardened through ¹⁹the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For ²⁰we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end:

15 While it is said, ²¹To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 For some, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcases fell in the wilderness?

18 And to whom swore he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not?

19 So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.

CHAPTER IV.

1 An admonition to humble fear. 3 The certainty of the heavenly rest. 12 The energy of the word of God. 14 The compassion of our High Priest used as a motive to earnestness in coming to the throne of grace.

LET us therefore fear, lest, ²a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.

2 For ³unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but ⁴the word preached ⁵did not profit them, ⁶not being ⁷mixed with faith in them that heard it.

3 For ⁸we which have believed do enter into rest; as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although ⁹the works were finished ¹⁰from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And ¹¹God did rest the seventh day from all his works.

the ignorance which prevails, the distress would be far greater. An adequate knowledge of the evil of sin, and its consequences, would be attended with vastly increased trouble of conscience, and fear of the wrath to come. The Saviour's sympathy arises from his sufferings; he has had experience of their trials and sorrows, and knows what is requisite to their solace and safety.

Chap. III. 1-6. The apostle now proceeds to shew the infinite superiority of Christ to the Jewish lawgiver. Moses had, indeed, performed the work assigned him with fidelity and honour, and as such he was deemed worthy of reward; but he was only a servant, whereas Christ was a Son. Ver. 7-19. "The Holy Ghost saith," is an expression of decisive bearing on the inspiration of the Psalmist, since his words bear the impress of a Divine Spirit. The people of God are never beyond the necessity of taking heed; should the evil heart of unbelief rise up within them, it will without fail prompt departure from the living God. Sin operates by way of hardening, and its work completed, even the Christian may be successfully tempted. As one of the methods of averting this great evil, Christians are here commanded to exhort one another daily. The test of true conversion is perseverance in the ways of the Lord; if they hold the beginning of their confidence stedfast to the end of life, the fact will demonstrate that they are partakers of Christ, and infallibly open to them the doors of heaven. It is impossible for the unbelieving to find admission there; their guilt and their uncleanness alike forbid it; but justified through the righteousness of Christ, and washed in his most precious blood, an abundant entrance will be ministered to every soul of the human family.

Chap. IV. 1-11. The fear which hath torment is not the fear of God's children in the enjoyment of Gospel liberty; but a holy fear of falling into sin is in the highest degree salutary, whereas a reckless confidence is the road to ruin. "Seeming" is the precursor of reality; wherever appearances are greatly against a man, there is reason to fear that there is something wrong: it is, therefore, expressly enjoined to the people of God that they shun the very appearance of evil. The great secret of spiritual progress is the mixture of the Word, whether read or heard, with faith: in the absence of this, it is of small importance what may be the character of the means

5 And in this place again, 'If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom ²it was first preached ¹entered not in because of unbelief:

7 (Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To-day, after so long a time; as it is said, To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

8 For if 'Jesus 'had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day.

9 There ^mremaineth therefore a ⁵rest to the people of God.

10 For he that is entered into his rest, he also ²hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his.)

11 Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of ⁶unbelief.

12 For the word of God ^ois quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, ²and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

13 Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are ⁴naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.

14 Seeing then that we have ^aa great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, ¹let us hold fast our profession.

15 For ²we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points ²tempted like as we are, ²yet without sin.

16 Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins:

2 ^aWho can ¹have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity.

3 And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.

4 And no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

5 So also ^bChrist glorified not himself to be made an high priest; but he that said unto him, ^cThou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee.

6 As he saith also in another place, ^dThou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec.

7 Who in ^ethe days of his flesh, ^fwhen he had offered up prayers and supplications, ^gwith strong crying and tears, ^hunto him that was able to save him from death, ⁱand was heard ^jin that he feared:

8 Though ^khe were a Son, ^lyet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;

9 And being made perfect, ^mhe became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him;

10 Called of God an high priest, after the order of Melchisedec.

11 Of whom we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing.

12 For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which ⁿbe ^othe first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat.

of grace enjoyed; there can be no profit from them. But with strong faith, even a limited amount of elementary knowledge, and a feeble but pure Gospel ministration, may abundantly subserve for purposes of edification. The closing verse presents a sample of the manner in which the apostle taught the doctrine of Divine sovereignty, electing love, and the perseverance of the saints. No encouragement is held out to blind confidence in God's purpose or promise, in the neglect of all the appointed means. The elect are commanded to make a business of their salvation; it is to be with them the one great thing of their existence. Ver. 12-16. The best illustration of this remarkable scripture is that which facts supply in the case of great outpourings of the Holy Spirit. Those whom he has slain have in their own souls the most impressive of all commentaries. The dividing of soul and spirit, joints and marrow, would seem to refer to the operation of the priest in dissecting the sacrifice. Nothing can escape the eye of Omniscience. A believing and confiding view of the Lord Jesus, as passed into the heavens, was most powerfully conducive to steadfastness in the faith. With such a precursor, such a protector, such a witness of all our deeds, we may well be strong, and quit ourselves like men. With him in view, we may well lay aside a paralyzing sense of guilt, and come with confidence to a throne of grace to ask a supply of all our necessities; and we shall not come in vain. Thus aided, we shall be more than equal to all trials, all burdens, and all dangers.

Chap. V. 1-11. Much is said in this epistle of the Saviour's sympathy and compassion. No qualities without these would have fitted the Lord to discharge the office of a high priest to sinful, suffering humanity. On the ground of his experience, he is entitled to the most implicit confidence of all his people. He has passed through all the more trying stages of human suffering, and, therefore, he perfectly knows the requirements of every condition, and all peculiar emergencies. Nowhere in the epistles have we aught so touching as the statement contained in the seventh verse. The thought of Emmanuel—God in human nature—"offering up prayers, with strong crying and tears," unto Him that was able to save him from death, may well move the heart of his ransomed people in every age. He was heard in the great thing concerning which he feared, and although the cup could not pass from him, he was strengthened to drink it. There was a priesthood which preceded

CHAPTER VI.

1 The apostle exhorteth not to fall back from the faith, 11 but to be diligent in good works, 18 because God is most sure in his promise.

THEREFORE, leaving the ¹principles of the doctrine of Christ, ²let us go on unto perfection; not ³laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of ⁴faith toward God, ² Of ⁴the doctrine of baptisms, and of ⁵laying on of hands, and of ⁶resurrection of the dead, and of ⁷eternal judgment.

that of Aaron, and excelled it, to which Melchisedec belonged; and of this order was Jesus. Ver. 12-14. No privileges of a religious nature were comparable to those of the Hebrews, and yet the bulk of them made little progress in the knowledge of Divine things. They resemble too many in this land of abounding instruction. The spiritual, like the bodily senses, admit of cultivation to an extent not to be credited in the absence of experience. A species of spiritual instruction may be acquired, which will detect error under every disguise, and in spite of the most confounding mixtures.

Chap. VI. 1-3. As in everything else there is progress, so ought there to be in religion; the believer's views should become more clear and profound. As knowledge increases, the analogy of faith becomes more and more apparent, and many of those things which at first staggered the inquirer, give way to distinct perception, and assume their own place in the Divine system. Ver. 4-9. These awful words have led to much controversy, and not a little distressed the people of God. The point to be determined is, the true character of the parties here described. One class of writers contend that they are hypocrites, and this is done to make the passage harmonise with a certain tenet of theology. But surely, to support the doctrine of the saints' perseverance, it is not necessary to do violence to the Word. Unless the parties here described be true Christians, it is difficult to perceive the force or the justness of the apostle's argument; nay, more, the very supposition is absurd, since it can involve no danger, and be no sin in a man to cease being a hypocrite and a deceiver. To put off a false profession is the first step towards putting on a true one. Again, does the character of a hypocrite come up to the language of the apostle? Is it so that a mere hypocrite is "enlightened"—has "tasted of the heavenly gift"—has been "made partaker of the Holy Ghost"—has "tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come?" On what ground is it affirmed that the parties so described are "not truly humbled," "not spiritually minded," and "without love to the Saviour and his people, his word and ordinances?" If that be a true description of a false profession, in what words shall we depict the true disciple, the man born of God, and an heir of glory? Let it be granted, as integrity seems to demand, that the parties here described are true Christians, and none other—what then? How does this touch the question of perseverance? It is only said, "If they shall fall away;" it is not affirmed that they did; and this style of statement and address was eminently fitted to prevent it. But why take a view so peculiar of this single passage, with its parallel in a subsequent chapter of the same epistle? No one great doctrine of Revelation is confined to one epistle; like a vein of gold, it pervades the inspired volume. When Paul, addressing the Romans, says, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die," he is simply stating a fact, and predicting a consequence; and no attempt is made to gloss the matter here by representing him as addressing false professors, or subverting the doctrine of perseverance. But wherein does this style of language differ from that held to Adam in Paradise? In both cases the principle is one, and the object in both is the same—to prevent sin by revealing its consequences. To live after the flesh would certainly be to die, as much as taking the forbidden fruit was. In the one case, the creature had the perfect power to keep his first estate; and, in the other case, the sovereign mercy and eternal purpose of God have abundantly provided against the final apostasy of his chosen people. In carrying out his purpose, however, he employs means adapted to the constitution of man. The Hebrews had much to encounter, and were surrounded by the strongest temptations to draw back. This awful admonition, therefore, was just what was wanted to nerve them for the conflict, by shewing that, to whatever evils steadfastness might expose them, those of apostasy would be infinitely greater. Ver. 10-20. As the sure way of escaping the evils he had just described, he exhorts every one of them "to shew the same diligence, to the full assurance of hope to the end." But, had he been addressing, not true believers, but false professors, surely this was not the entered, even Jesus, made ^aan high priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Christ Jesus is a priest after the order of Melchisedec, 11 and therefore more excellent than the priests of Aaron's order.

FOR this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;

2 To whom also Abraham gave ^aa tenth part of all: first being, by interpretation, King of righteousness, and after that also, King of Salem, which is, King of peace:

3 Without father, without mother, without ¹descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but, made like unto the Son of God, abideth ^aa priest continually.

4 Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even ^cthe patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils.

5 And verily they that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment ^dto take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they ^ecome out of the loins of Abraham:

6 But he, whose ²descent is not counted from them, received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that ^fhad the promises.

7 And, without all contradiction, the less is blessed of the better.

8 And here ^gmen that die receive tithes; but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that ^hhe liveth.

9 And, as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, ⁱpayed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father when Melchisedec met him.

11 If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) ^kwhat further need was there that ^lanother priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

13 For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.

14 For it is evident that our Lord ^msprang out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.

15 And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest, 16 Who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

17 For he testifieth, Thou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec.

18 For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof.

19 For the law made nothing perfect, but ⁿthe bringing in of a better hope did; by the which ^owe draw nigh unto God.

20 And inasmuch as not without an oath he was made priest:

21 (For those priests were made without ^pan oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, The Lord sware, and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec:)

22 By so much was Jesus made ^qa surety of a better testament.

23 And they truly were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death:

24 But this man, because ^rhe continueth ever, hath ^san unchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore ^the is able also to save them ^uto the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth ^vto make intercession for them.

26 For ^wsuch an high priest became us, who is ^xholy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens;

27 Who needeth not ^ydaily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, ^zfirst for his own sins, ^{aa}and then for the people's: for ^{ab}this he did once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh men high course to be adopted. Not thus did he deal with the corresponding class among the Corinthians.

Chap. VII. 1-10. This scripture has called forth a large amount of unedifying speculation. Melchisedec was, according to some, a mere man; according to others, more than a man; again, he was an angel—he was the Holy Ghost—he was the Son of God. Such are some of the positions which have been taken up by men professing godliness, and considered wise in their generation. It were a waste of words to attempt any refutation of such statements. Examined in the sober light of Inspiration, there is nothing perplexing about the passage; the name is beautifully significant of the character—King of righteousness, and King of peace. As a priest, he had no priestly parentage; and in this he differed from the Aaronic priesthood. Like Aaron himself, he received his appointment immediately from God. He had no fixed time for either beginning or ending his priesthood; he retained it till he died, unlike the Jewish priests, who began at the age of thirty, and ended at fifty. In these respects, therefore, he presented an emblem of the priesthood of Christ. Such is the sum of the Divine communication concerning Melchisedec. Freed from all those foolish fancies and unfounded mysteries with which it has been invested, it is reduced to its proper place among the emblems which foreshadowed the Son of God. Jesus was both a King and a Priest. As a Priest, he was not one of the established line; he stood alone and perfect both as to character and offering. The Jewish priest was merely a type, of which he was the Antitype; and by his appearance their offerings were to be for ever abolished. Ver. 11-28. The immortality of Jesus meets the necessities of the case of his people; he ever liveth to make intercession for them. As age has succeeded to age, and one generation of believers followed another, still he remains the same; and the result is his ability to save to the uttermost all who come to God by him. No sacrifice could accomplish this but that of "God manifest in the flesh." The value of his atonement is infinite; his power is infinite; his love is infinite; the Father has exalted him for the very purpose of saving his people; and that purpose, in all its parts, will, without fail, in due season be realised.

priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, ^a*maketh* the Son, ^bwho is ^cconsecrated for evermore.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Further evidence of the superiority of the Messiah's priesthood to that of Aaron; 7 and that the Sinai covenant was to be abrogated, to make way for a new and better covenant, through a superior mediator.

NOW of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: ^aWe have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens;

2 A minister of ¹the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.

3 For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer.

4 For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that ²there are priests that offer gifts according to the law;

5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, ^bSee (saith he) that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.

6 But now hath he ^cobtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is ^dthe mediator of a better ^ecovenant, which was established upon better promises.

7 For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.

8 For, finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make ^aa new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah:

9 Not according to ¹the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because ²they continued not in my covenant, and I ³regarded them not, saith the Lord.

10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel, after those

CHAPTER IX.

1 The tabernacle and its furniture, and the typical meaning of its ordinances. 10 An application of the subject to the priesthood, sacrifices, and covenant of Christ.

THEN verily the first covenant had also ¹ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary.

2 For there was a tabernacle made; the first, wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shew-bread; which is called ²the Sanctuary.

3 And after the second vail, the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all;

4 Which had the golden censer, and the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant;

5 And over it the cherubims of glory shadowing the mercy-seat; of which we cannot now speak particularly.

6 Now when these things were thus ordained, ^athe priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God:

7 But ^binto the second went the high priest alone once every year, ^cnot without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the ^derrors of the people:

8 ^eThe Holy Ghost this signifying, that ^fthe way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing:

Chap. VIII. 1-6. The excellence of the priesthood and sacrifice of Christ is so great as completely to disannul those of the Mosaic dispensation; the privileges of the New Testament unspeakably transcend those of the Old—the relations are those of shadow and substance. We have now done with the priesthood composed of frail and dying men. It only remains for us, then, to draw near to Him in the appointed way, resting on his righteousness, and relying on his mercy. It must ever be remembered that we have access only in one way, and acceptance only through one medium. Mistakes here will be fatal; no man can come to the Father but by Him, and none will come in this way except the Father draw him; and in this consists the sovereignty of grace. Ver. 7-18. The covenant here referred to was a promise, sovereign, absolute, and certain to all the people of God. We here find that Jeremiah, under the influence of the same Spirit as the apostle, in the fullest manner, delineates the work of grace on the souls of men, shewing that religion is a life, and faith a power; that justification and sanctification are inseparable; that the one is the evidence of the other, and that both constitute the Gospel salvation. God is the teacher of his own family, whom he seals by his Spirit, and sets apart for himself, that they may shew forth his praise.

Chap. IX. 1-10. It was, and still is, a great point in dealing with the Jews; to shew that the Mosaic tabernacle and its manifold services were only a shadow of spiritual things, which had in themselves no value for the salvation of men. Paul now removes the veil from the face of Moses, setting forth the nature and the end of the Old Covenant, together with the important use and efficacy of the institutions and ordinances of the New Testament worship. This makes way for the introduction of the subject of redemption by Jesus Christ, the offices he sustains, and the work he has performed. The first promise is clearly stated, with all those which were added to explain and to confirm it. To this succeeds the law and its worship; so that we are here presented with that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience;

10 Which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation.

11 But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building;

12 Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

13 For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh;

14 How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God?

15 And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator.

17 For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.

18 Whereupon neither the first testament was dedicated without blood.

19 For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people,

20 Saying, This is the blood of the testament which God hath enjoined unto you.

21 Moreover, he sprinkled likewise with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.

22 And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission.

23 It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us:

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;

26 (For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world:) but now once, in the end of the world, hath he appeared, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

27 And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment;

28 So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many: and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation.

CHAPTER X.

1 The weakness of the sacrifices under the law. 10 The sacrifice of Christ's body, once offered, hath for ever taken away sins: 26 but there is no hope for us if we once renounce our faith in him.

FOR the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those the sum and essence of the Ancient Economy. It thus appears that the tabernacle, and all that it contained, were typical of Christ in his relations to his people, and in the discharge of his priestly office. The tabernacle itself may be viewed as emblematic of the covering of his flesh; the table, of food for nourishment to his Church; the ark, of the hidden law of God in him; the altar of incense, of the sweet savour of his work for the sanctification of his people; the altar of burnt offering, of the sacrifice of himself for their sins; the candlestick with its seven branches, of the spiritual light imparted by the Lord Jesus. The golden censer set him forth as giving efficacy by his mediation and intercession to the prayers of all believers. The manna was a striking type of the Redeemer; Aaron's rod was an impressive emblem of mediatorial power; the spiritual Rock was to be smitten by the rod of the law, that it might send forth the waters of life. The tables of stone comprised the commandments, embodying the substance of the covenant made with Israel, which constituted a permanent record of his holy will; the altar, mercy-seat, and cherubim, furnish an emblem representing the throne of God, on which he was to shew favour through Christ to a fallen world. All the treasures of mercy are here laid up in Christ; the substance of which this was the shadow, we have in Immanuel, who is the glory of the true Israel. The entire of this wonderful system of figures was the work of the Holy Ghost, revealing his pleasure in those who executed the purpose that explained his will. From the figures we now pass on to the facts. Ver. 11-28. At length Christ himself appeared, and by his sacrifice fulfilled all that was predicted in these wonderful emblems. These things shewed the guilt and pollution of sin, and Christ gave reality to the whole, presenting the very things shadowed forth. The efficacy of this sacrifice is infinite, and therefore he becomes the proper Mediator of the New Covenant. To him his people may look for strength, guidance, and protection, under every variety of circumstance. He is their ever-living, ever-loving Almighty Friend! Whatever is for their good, they receive through him, in answer to their own prayers and his intercession; while their ignorance and folly, and whatever else might affect the acceptance of their supplications, are so ordered by him as not to prevent the blessings they require.

Chap. X. 1-18. The sacrifices had in themselves no power to cancel guilt, and thereby to disburden conscience; all the good which was obtained in connexion with them, was communicated for the sake of Christ, the promised Redeemer. His sacrifice alone could render the exercise of mercy, through these offerings, consistent with justice. To this Jesus refers in a manner the most remarkable in the Psalm as here quoted, which, when the Jews become enlightened, will alone suffice to settle the question of his mission, since, in a manner the most emphatic, it proclaims the utter worthlessness of the Levitical sacrifices for the removal of guilt, and the necessity for the blood of the body which was to be prepared for the Lord Jesus, that he might thereby be in a position to bear the griefs, and carry the sorrows of his people. The offering of the blood of that body has put sacrifices, which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect:

2 For then ¹would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins.

3 But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.

4 For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.

5 Wherefore, when he cometh into the world, he saith, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not ^bbut a body ²hast thou prepared me:

6 In "burnt-offerings and sacrifices for sin "thou hast had no pleasure:

7 Then said I, "Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God.

8 Above, when he said, Sacrifice, and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for sin, thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; (which are offered by the law;)

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. ¹He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 By the which will "we are sanctified, through ^bthe offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

11 And every priest standeth daily ministering, and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins:

12 But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins, for ever sat down on the right hand of God;

13 From henceforth expecting ¹till his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For by one offering "he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified;

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for after that he had said before,

16 This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;

17 "And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

31 It is ¹a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, "ye endured a great fight of afflictions;

33 Partly, whilst ye were made a gazing-stock both by reproaches and afflictions;

an end to all sacrifice, and all sin in those who believe. When our High Priest had finished his work, he sat down, waiting the fulfilment of the promise concerning the subjugation of the world. Such is his position still; and in due time the fullness of the Gentiles will be brought in, and all Israel will be saved. Ver. 19-25. The apostle, having completed his exposition and his argument, it only remains, according to his custom, to apply the whole. The privileges conferred by Jesus on his people are unspeakable, and such as involve the highest responsibility. The original way of access to God was shut up by the entrance of sin; the typical system could open no other, as was distinctly proved by the Jewish dispensation; but at length it is fully accomplished by the Lord Jesus. Let believers continue steadfastly to hold and to profess their faith before the sons of men, by following the Lord fully. Love and good works stand to each other in the relation of seed and crop, fountain and streams; and Christians may do much to keep alive the flame of this love in each other's bosoms. The Church, the assembly of brethren, is the spring of public worship. It is, therefore, indispensable that they shall from time to time unite for that end. Irregularity in this is attended by the most serious consequences. The abandonment of it would, at once, put an end to social worship, the preaching of the Word, the dispensation of ordinances, watch over the members, and the administration of the laws of Christ. Ver. 26-39. The same solemn style of address, admonition, and warning is here adopted as in the instance already considered, and for the same purpose. The object is to invigorate the souls of Hebrew believers bravely to confront the dangers to which they were exposed. By these means the highest power is brought to bear on the strongest passion; if to go forward be to suffer temporal, to go back will be to suffer eternal death! The apostle appeals to the past to encourage them for the future; already they had acquired considerable experience, both and partly, whilst ye became companions of them that were so used.

34 For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing⁶ in yourselves¹ that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance.

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward.

36 For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.

37 For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.

38 Now, the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.

39 But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul.

CHAPTER XI.

1 What faith is. 6 Without faith we cannot please God. 7 The fruits thereof illustrated by the examples of the most eminent saints under the Old Testament dispensation.

NOW faith¹ is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

2 For by it the elders obtained a good report.

3 Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God; so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.

4 By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts; and by it he, being dead, yet speaketh.

5 By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

8 By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:

10 For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

11 Through faith also Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.

12 Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea-shore innumerable.

13 These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.

14 For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country.

15 And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned.

16 But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city.

17 By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son,

18 Of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called:

19 Accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure.

22 By faith Joseph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones.

23 By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment.

24 By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; of the power of grace, and the hostility of men. They could scarcely suffer more than they had been already enabled to endure; they had, therefore, but to persevere, and their triumph was certain.

Chap. XI. 1-40. The definition here given simply means that faith answers all the purposes of sight: founded on the truth and power of God, it has all the effect of a visible reality. The acts of faith are not to be confounded with its effects: the act is described in the opening verses, and the effects are shewn throughout the chapter. This bright roll supplied by the ancient Church shews that the Gospel, even in its most elementary forms, possessed a power far exceeding all other powers, which proved more than conqueror over everything human. It saw nothing but God, and it feared nothing but sin. Its treasure consisted solely in the Divine favour, and its prime concern was, at whatever cost, to preserve it. Compared with this all earthly good or evil was but as nothing. That to which all these worthies looked forward was not merely unseen, but distant: "they received not the promise," they lived not to see Immanuel, his kingdom, and 25 ^aChoosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;

26 Esteeming ^athe reproach ^rof Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward.

27 By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, ^aas seeing him who is invisible.

28 Through faith ^ahe kept the pass-over, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the first-born should touch them.

29 By faith ^rthey passed through the Red sea as by dry land; which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned.

30 By faith ^athe walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.

31 By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them ^athat believed not, when she had received the spies with peace.

32 And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets:

33 Who ^athrough faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions,

34 Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, ^aout of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

35 ^aWomen received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; ^rthat they might obtain a better resurrection:

36 And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment:

37 They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheep-skins and goat-skins; ^abeing destitute, afflicted, tormented:

Jam. 1. 12.
7. 8.

38 (Of ^awhom the world was not worthy:) they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth.

39 And these all, ^bhaving obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise:

40 God having ^aprovided some ^cbetter thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect.

CHAPTER XII.

1 An exhortation to constant faith, patience, and godliness. 22 A commendation of the new testament above the old.

WHEREFORE, seeing we also are compassed about with so great ^aa cloud of witnesses, ^blet us lay aside every weight, ^cand the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run ^dwith patience the race that is set before us,

2 ^aLooking unto Jesus, ^rthe ¹author and finisher of our faith; ^{who}, for the joy that was set before him, ^cendured the cross, ^bdespising the shame, ^{and} is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

3 For consider him that endured such ^acontradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.

4 ¹Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin.

5 And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, ^adespise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him:

6 For ^awhom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, ^aand scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

7 If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons: for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?

8 But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.

9 Furthermore, we have had fathers of his glory. The promise was a chain, stretching from Adam to Christ; that chain all received, all held, and all died with it in their hands, without a sight of the Divine object in which the last link terminated. They obtained salvation through Him who was to come, but his presence, death, and resurrection, were necessary to ratify their pardon and acceptance, and to perfect their salvation. Notwithstanding the blessing which fell to their lot, they were not made complete till the arrival of Christ, and the completion of the work of Calvary. The Gospel revelation is "the better thing" which the Lord provided for his people. Thus the one Church—Mosaic and Apostolic, Jewish and Gentile—is brought both into one happy brotherhood—the sons of God, the family of heaven.

Chap. XII. 1-13. The example of the Old Testament saints, recorded in the foregoing chapter, should not be lost on us: if with their very imperfect dispensation, they displayed such faith, and performed such works, what ought not Christians, in these respects, both to be and to do! They ran so as to gain the prize; ought Christians to be excelled by them? We have more grace, clearer light, and higher privileges, and in proportion ought to be the superiority of our character. But in order to success, all entanglements must be shunned, and all encumbrances thrown aside—there must be no waste of power—all our strength is necessary to the honourable discharge of our duty. As we run, we must keep the eye steadily fixed on the Lord Jesus, and rely on him for strength, skill, and guidance. The Lord is our Leader; he, too, ran, and finished his course of service and suffering on the cross. Before him was the joy of saving his people, and glorifying the Father. With this in view, he endured the cross, despised the shame, and having conquered, took his seat at the right hand of God. There is the example of all Christians! It is more difficult sometimes, however, to bear parental chastisement than worldly persecution; men who have bravely endured the latter, have been ready to sink under the former. The way to keep up under this, is to remember that it comes from the Father of mercies, and is for our good: for the time it may be grievous, but in the end it will produce the happiest results. Ver. 14-29. Peace may materially contribute to the cultivation of holiness, the great business of the believer. One of the prime objects of Christian fellowship is the exercise of mutual watchfulness, "lest any man fail of the grace of God," the heaviest calamity that can happen to him. The loss of this is the loss of everything that comes to us through Jesus Christ for both worlds. The metaphor of the race is still in the mind of the apostle; the expression signifies our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: ¹shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?

10 For they verily for a few days chastened us ²after their own pleasure; ³but he for our profit, that we might be ⁴partakers of his holiness.

11 Now, no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the ⁵peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.

12 Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees;

13 And make ⁶straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed.

14 ⁷Follow peace with all men, ⁸and holiness, without which ⁹no man shall see the Lord:

15 Looking diligently lest ¹⁰any man ¹¹fail of the grace of God; lest ¹²any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, ¹³and thereby many be defiled;

16 Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright.

17 For ye know how that afterward, ¹⁴when he would have inherited the blessing, ¹⁵he was rejected: ¹⁶for he found no ¹⁷place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.

18 For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

19 And ¹⁸the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which ¹⁹voice ²⁰they that heard entreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

20 (For they could not endure that which was commanded, And if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

21 And so terrible was the sight, that

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Divers admonitions, as to charity, 4 to purity, 5 to avoid covetousness, 7 to regard God's ministers, 9 to take heed of strange doctrines, 10 to confess Christ, &c.

LET brotherly love continue.

2 Be ¹not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby ²some have entertained angels unawares.

to fall behind so as to lose the prize. A root of bitterness signifies anything in doctrine or practice, which may disturb the peace of the Church, and check the progress of the Gospel. The disciples of Moses and of Jesus differ from each other to an extent which cannot, at present, be comprehended. The Mosaic was, indeed, awful and glorious, but the terror was too great to be endured. Christians are come to Mount Zion, of which Jerusalem was an emblem, where is gathered together all that is beautiful and glorious in the universe. There believers are for ever delivered from the law and all its terrors, and invested with privileges precious and everlasting. The spirits of the just are perfected in love; angels are their glorious companions, and heaven their eternal home.

Chap. XIII. 1-6. Where brothers are, the love ought surely to be brotherly, since only that becomes the relation. Nothing more conduces to comfort, edification, and the progress of the Gospel. The policy of the Wicked One is to promote strife and division, which make for the advancement of his cause. The cultivation of this love, therefore, ought to be the prime pursuit of every member of the Church of God. That, of which the Scriptures are so full, should be uniformly exemplified among the faithful, so that the Lively Oracles may find an exposition in the living temple. Hospitality, wisely conducted, may be made materially to contribute to the advancement of the cause of Christ; but, in order to this, it must be managed upon principle and system, having always in view a definite object. It may be carried on upon a scale of great magnitude and cost, without regard to the interests of the Gospel and the glory of God, and so prove mischievous, amounting to nothing more than a waste of time and money. Such hospitality is allied to sin. Christian piety is essentially sympathetic with all suffering, but especially with that which is endured for the sake of religion. Christians never act more in character than when they lay themselves out to stem the torrent of persecution, and to support those who are its helpless victims. Marriage is a primary ordinance of God, the foundation of the domestic constitution, the source of individual happiness, and national welfare. To destroy marriage would be to destroy the family, the nation, and the race! It is the dictate of nature and of reason, and hence it has been found existing, as a rule, throughout all lands and all time. Covetousness, which is idolatry, as one of the greatest and most hurtful sins, ought to be diligently guarded against. Ver. 7-17. The Church of Christ is a kingdom; bishops are subordinate rulers, who govern, not by their own laws, but by those of their Sovereign. The obedience rendered to them, therefore, is simple obedience to the Divine Lawgiver. Not only are their 4 Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled: but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.

5 Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.

6 So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.

7 Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God; whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation;

9 Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines: for it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace; not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein.

10 We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat which serve the tabernacle.

11 For the bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest for sin, are burnt without the camp.

12 Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.

13 Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.

14 For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come.

15 By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that instructions to be received, but their example, so far as it is conformed to the Scriptures, is to be followed. Their life is a life of faith on the Son of God, and their aim his glory. For this they lived, and for this they died. The subject is set forth more explicitly and fully in the 17th verse: obedience and submission are there combined with a very solemn reason—"they watch for your souls." This watch is to be heard of another day; there is an account to be rendered—that document may bear a twofold character, reflecting either honour or disgrace on the flock or the individual members of it. If the former, it will cause joy to the shepherd; if the latter, grief, and they who cause this grief will be the losers. This view of things presents a twofold aspect: it bears with great solemnity on the ministers of the Word themselves. To conduct a pastorate in the spirit of this scripture will be no light matter; it will demand a measure of vigilance, diligence, fidelity, impartiality, wisdom, patience, meekness, courage, and love, which God alone can unite in one individual. Well may the pastor exclaim, "Who is sufficient for these things?"

and the stoutest might well sink under the thought, were it not that their "sufficiency is of God." Ver. 18-25. Paul is everywhere alive to the great importance of the prayers of the Church to the success of his labours. All Christian pastors are the same, and they are not less dependant for prosperity on the co-operation of their flocks. Churches are, therefore, to remember that they have the cause of God very much in their own hands. They must not, therefore, look to their pastors to perform all the work, and to build up a spacious temple; he has his part, but they, too, have theirs, which he cannot possibly perform. Neglecting this, the consequences are soon apparent, and they are but too ready to charge the consequences of their own neglect upon their shepherd. The glorious outburst of love, truth, and piety in verses 20 and 21 is characteristic of the apostle, and a worthy conclusion to this wonderful exposition of the Levitical economy. What the apostle here prays that Christians may be, all should seek to become, and continue to be, till summoned to share the rest of their brethren, and to enter into the joy of their Lord.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JAMES.

This Epistle is called General, although it is not any more so than the Epistle to the Romans. It is especially addressed to the twelve tribes scattered abroad—that is, converted Israelites. The apostle had clearly in view the persecutions of the period, and the support required by the suffering saints. A tendency to abuse the Gospel already began to display itself, and the object of this Epistle was, partly, to correct it. The Holy Spirit selected James to furnish an antidote to this sore evil, both then and in all coming time. None of the apostles have been led so explicitly and faithfully to deal with it. James most impressively shews, that the faith which justifies also sanctifies, and that there can be no change of state without a corresponding change of character. James was naturally a man of powerful understanding. In the Council held at Jerusalem, to settle the question of the circumcision of the Gentiles, he was the last to speak, when he brought the matter to a close, in a manner so clear and forcible as to silence all opposition, and secure uniformity. This vigour of mind is manifest throughout the whole of the Epistle; its appeal is everywhere to the intellect rather than the heart; it contains little doctrine, and hardly any experience; it is chiefly devoted to the exposure and the denunciation of false profession, which is done with a force wholly irresistible. It is probable that James was put to death about the year 62, and that he wrote his Epistle shortly before he suffered.

CHAPTER I.

1 We must exercise patience, 5 and ask wisdom of God; 13 not imputing our sins to him, 17 from whom all good cometh, 21 but obediently hearing his word.

* JAMES, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad, greeting.

2 My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations;

3 Knowing this, ^b that the trying of your faith worketh patience.

4 But ^c let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.

5 If ^d any of you lack wisdom, ^e let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

6 But ^f let him ask in faith, nothing wavering: for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.

7 For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.

8 A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways.

9 Let the brother of low degree ¹ rejoice in that he is exalted;

10 But the rich, in that he is made low: ² because as the flower of the grass he shall pass away.

11 For the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withereth the grass, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the fashion of it perisheth: so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.

12 Blessed is ^b the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive ¹ the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

13 Let ^k no man say, when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with ² evil, neither tempteth he any man:

14 But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed.

15 Then, ¹ when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.

16 ^m Do not err, my beloved brethren.

17 Every ⁿ good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is ^o no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

18 Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be ^p a kind of first-fruits of his creatures.

19 Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, ^q slow to wrath:

Chap. I. 1-15. There are worse things for believers than persecution; sanctified by the Holy Spirit, it serves highly important ends. Wisdom is wanted, however, to bear it well; but that is to be had for the asking. Availing prayer is the prayer of faith in the Divine testimony, and of reliance on the Divine goodness. A double-minded man is a man with two minds—one of faith, and another of unbelief; a man who tries to serve both God and Mammon. The prayer of such a man has no power. The human race is one, and God is the Father of all; the distinctions of earth vanish at his footstool. The law prostrates all in the dust of self-abasement, and the Gospel raises all who receive it to the dignity of sons and daughters of Almighty God. Temptation, by trying faith, strengthens it, and thus adds to the peace, hope, and comfort of believers. When God tempts, he simply exercises the faith of his people, and thereby tests the strength of their confidence in his own word. When the devil tempts, it is to transgress the Divine commands, and to doubt the Divine veracity. Abraham furnishes an example of the one—David of the other. “Lust” is a term signifying the inordinate desire of anything, more especially of things forbidden; sin is the result of its gratification, and the fruit of sin is death! Ver. 16-26. Men, from the beginning, have been prone to charge their own transgressions upon God; from God, however, nothing but good can come—from the Wicked One, nothing but evil. He never tempts but to destroy! James, notwithstanding the intensely practical character of his epistle, distinctly recognises the doctrine and the fact of the regeneration of the souls of the strangers scattered abroad, whereby they became the first-fruits of the glorious harvest which was afterwards to be reaped. On this doctrine the apostle immediately proceeds to 20 ¹For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God.

21 Wherefore, lay apart all filthiness, and superfluity of naughtiness, ²and receive with meekness the ingrafted word, ³which is able to save your souls:

22 But ⁴be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, ⁵deceiving your own selves.

23 For ⁷if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass:

24 For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.

25 But whoso looketh into ²the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not ³a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, ⁴this man shall be blessed in his ⁵deed.

26 If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27 Pure religion, and undefiled, before God and the Father, is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.

5 Harken, my beloved brethren, ⁶Hath not God chosen the poor of this world ⁷rich in faith, and ⁸heirs of ⁹the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?

6 But ye have despised the poor. ⁷Do not rich men oppress you, ⁸and draw you before the judgment-seats?

7 Do not they ²blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called?

8 If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, ¹Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well:

9 But ²if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and ³are convinced of the law as transgressors.

10 ²For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all.

11 For ²he that said, ³Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. ⁴Now, if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law.

found a most important point of Christian morals. "Slow to speak" is one of the most valuable counsels that can be given to the Christian. The bridling of the tongue is the highest achievement of the grace of God. Until this be accomplished, grace cannot be said to reign; but this once realized, everything else will be easy. From this we may learn the extent to which the tongue enters into personal religion. It therefore behoves every man to consider well how far he can stand the application of this test. "This man's religion is vain," is language which ought to make the ears of multitudes of professors to tingle. Every man who mixes much with Christian society, will perceive at once that, thus judged, a considerable portion of existing religion is vain. Ver. 27. This is one of the most precious portions of the New Testament. What prominence is here given to compassion! How unlike is this definition to that which great numbers of professing Christians would probably give! The whole is summed up in two points—the exercise of compassion for helpless suffering, and the cultivation of personal purity. The world is full of the woes of widowhood, and the sorrows of orphanage; and an antidote is to be found only in the Gospel of the grace of God.

Chap. II. 1-18. Christians should view their fellow-men through the same medium as the Saviour himself does. What a man's character, apart from the body and in the world of spirits, will be, constitutes the ground of the estimate in which he ought to be held here. To be a new creature, bearing the image of Christ, clothed in his righteousness, the temple of his Spirit, living to his praise, and adorning his Gospel—although in rage—is to be a son of God, and, as such, an object of love and confidence! Mere raiment can neither add to nor take from his moral worth and personal dignity. In the absence of these virtues and attributes, it is not in the power of earthly substance and circumstances to change either his state or his character. Christians, forgetting this, shew their carnality, and offend their Lord. Here, again, is a test by which to try the spirit of professors. It may still be frequently said, with too much truth, relative to the arrangements of the house of God, "Ye have despised the poor." That such a spirit should have arisen at so early a period, amidst the contempt and persecution to which the Christians were exposed, is not a little remarkable. Moreover, their troubles came not from the poor, but the rich, to whom they were so forward to offer an undeserved homage. It was the rich who persecuted themselves, and blasphemed the worthy name by which they were called. Nor was this all, the bulk of the believers consisted of the poor, whom God had chosen to be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom. On that ground, if on no other, it ill became them to despise the poor. Here the apostle distinctly recognises the "election of grace," as fixing the subjects of the kingdom of God. The importance of the rule laid down is indicated by the remarkable expression, the faith ¹ without thy works, ² and I will shew thee my faith by my works.

19 ^aThou believest that there is one God; ^bthou doest well: ^cthe devils also believe, and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?

21 Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?

22 Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?

23 And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, "Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called "the Friend of God.

24 Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only.

25 Likewise also, was not Rahab the harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?

26 For ^bas the body without the ^cspirit is dead, ^cso faith without works is dead also.

they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth.

5 Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold how great ^aa matter a little fire kindleth!

6 And ^bthe tongue is a fire, ^ca world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the ^ccourse of nature; and ^dit is set on fire of hell.

7 For every ⁴kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of ⁵mankind:

8 But the tongue can no man tame; it is ^aan unruly evil, ¹full of deadly poison.

11 Doth a fountain send forth at the same ⁶place sweet water and bitter?

12 Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bear olive-berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh.

13 Who is a wise man, and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom.

14 But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, ¹and lie not against the truth.

15 This ^awisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish.

"Royal Law," which shews its paramount excellence, its perpetual authority, and universal application. This law is an infallible guide under every variety of circumstances. We have simply to change places with our fellow-men, to ascertain, in any given case, how we ought to act towards them. That can never be right to them which we should deem wrong to ourselves. Ver. 14-26. We now reach the main point in the epistle, and here the question turns upon a single word—"say." The man who has true faith must have works, as fire must have heat; whatever he may "say," it cannot exist without. In the absence of works, a man's "saying" he has faith is of no avail; he is not to be believed, because he does not speak the truth. Where the fruits of faith exist, there can be no doubt as to faith itself, any more than about fire, where strong heat is felt—although the fire be not visible, it must be there. The Searcher of hearts alone can see faith, but its fruits are palpable to all. The case of Abraham is the most remarkable illustration Scripture can supply. The great points here contrasted are a dead and a living faith. Abraham's faith shewed itself by his works, the works perfected the proof of its existence; but it was the faith, not the works—the believing God—that was "imputed to him for righteousness:" on that ground alone he was called the Friend of God. It is strange that it should ever have been attempted, from this Scripture, to establish the doctrine of justification by works, and thus to array James and Paul against each other. There is the most perfect harmony between the apostles—Paul was not less opposed than James to a merely nominal faith. He distinctly states that "neither is circumcision anything, nor uncircumcision, but the keeping of the commandments of God."

Chap. III. 1-12. The term "masters" signifies teachers. Vanity is restless, often prompting a wish to teach where almost everything remains to be learned. The apostle returns again to the subject of the tongue. Here it was, and is, that all were and are in hourly peril. Other temptations are occasional; this is constant. Here, too, men are each other's tempters; in no other way is there so much mutual provocation to folly and sin. The last evil, therefore, to be conquered is this. The picture here drawn is the most humbling and awakening to be found in the pages of Inspiration. The tongue is the most dangerous and venomous thing in the universe; it is an "evil;" it spurns "rule;" and it is full of "deadly poison"—a fire, a world of iniquity; and yet this terrible thing is in the mouth of man! Ver. 13-16. He who is to teach should be endowed with the necessary knowledge; and where that knowledge is, it will shew itself in a good conversation. True wisdom is, moreover, distinguished by meekness. Bitter envying and strife may assume the guise of zeal for religion; but it is not to be trusted—it lies against the truth. Such wisdom is not of Divine origin, but earthly, sensual, and devilish; and, as such, opposed to all the graces of the Holy Spirit. Envy is the parent of strife, incompatible with love to our neighbour, and rebellion against the arrangements of God. The evil which has sprung out of it none can tell; it has embroiled individuals, families, classes, and nations, leading to violence, robbery, and murder! Ver. 17, 18. "Wisdom" here signifies the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus; it is as much as to say—"True religion is first pure, and then peaceable; and every man in whom it dwells is gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy." The new creature is 16 For where envying and strife is, there is confusion, and every evil work.

17 But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy.

18 And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace.

GO to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.

Christ is here delineated with great beauty. Such was Christ the Lord himself; and such ought all to be who bear his name. We have only to look abroad, and to compare with this portrait what is everywhere seen among men, to discover the extent to which the race has suffered from the Fall. When the whole human family shall have been renewed by the Spirit of God, and wrought up to this Divine temper, then will the kingdom of heaven have filled our world. All description, in such matters, is necessarily imperfect; things, to be at all understood, must be tried by a standard. A world unfallen placed by the side of a world "lying in the Wicked One," would be required to shew the terrible and all-pervading effects of sin.

Chap. IV. 1-7. War is among the most awful fruits of the fall of man. As the climax of wickedness and madness, it is standing evidence against the human race. Ungovernable appetite and passion, insatiable cupidity and ambition, among individuals and nations, till quenched by the blood of Christ, will never cease to agitate the world; and the misery thence arising will prove its own punishment. So far as happiness is concerned, all gain realised by violence will be found so much loss, and all success failure. Sin never can produce felicity. The "spirit that lusteth to envy" must, therefore, be cast out: this is the unalterable condition of rest, peace, and enjoyment. James, to his fearful picture of human depravity, adds the doctrine of diabolical agency. We are here presented, not with a mere evil principle, but with an "evil person"—a terrible power. Ver. 8-12. To address men as if sin were their misfortune rather than their fault, is to deceive them to their own undoing, and to prove faithless to the Lord of heaven and earth. We have here an example of the apostolic method of preaching repentance, which would sound strange in the ears of many in modern assemblies. Of all the apostles James is the most pungent in his appeals to the conscience; he reproves sin with all the boldness of a Jewish prophet. Ver. 13-17. Then, as now, there was a constant tendency in the human heart, even among those whom the Lord had taught, to forget their frailty, and to act independently of their Almighty Creator. In ancient times, it was the custom for merchants in the East to travel, carrying their goods with them; and it is to this custom the apostle here alludes. The covetous scheming depicted by James but ill accords with the uncertain tenure of human existence. Man wants not for monitors on every side; he may see a fit emblem of his life in the passing vapour, which is hardly perceived till it is gone. It behoves the Christian to act with a constant regard to the Divine will, satisfied that whatever God ordains is both right in itself, and best for his people. Everything at variance with this is evil. All plans and speculations, the sphere of which is in the uncertain future, are in their own nature foolish, if not dangerous. "If the Lord will," therefore, ought to be the motto of pilgrims to Zion.

Chap. V. 1-12. This awful address evidently points to the great men of the country—the oppressors of the Church, and the prompters of those courses which were ripening the nation for ruin. These men were the depositaries of power, which they abused to purposes of cruelty, rapine, and murder: whom they would they slew, and hated most the best! To be a saint was to be a victim! The very meekness of the Christians only served to invite outrage. Weak and helpless, nothing remained for them but to suffer, pray, and wait till the Lord came to put an end to their sorrows. The sufferings of Job were unspeakably great, but the end of the Lord in sending them was merciful; when his purposes were accomplished, the cloud was dispersed, and the sun of Divine favour shone forth more gloriously than ever. Ver. 13-15. Nothing is to be counted an evil which leads to a throne of grace. Prayer ought to be co-extensive with affliction, and then affliction would everywhere be followed by thanksgiving, praise, and joy. Trials and mercies would be synonymous. The glad heart is to disburden itself in song, making melody to God. The state of mind here indicated should more extensively characterise the children of the kingdom. Music and poetry are the handmaids of devotion, and eminently fitted to promote edification. The anointing here mentioned is one of the strongholds of Popery; which, according to its custom, utterly perverts the truth, by assuming that what is here stated in accordance with the condition of things then existing, was to be a standing rule for every age. This was then quite in keeping with the extraordinary gifts which prevailed; the elders and others had extensively the power of healing, which was variously exercised—at one time by touch, at another by the laying on of hands, or the utterance of words in the name of Christ, or by anointing with oil. As that, and all other primitive gifts, have now ceased, so the anointing is properly laid aside. Popery, however, regardless of the fact, has turned the primitive usage to account, converting it into a sacrament, known as "Extreme Unction." While the imposture is professedly grounded on this passage, its object is avowedly the very opposite to that assigned by the apostle! James enjoins the observance with a view to life; Popery never introduces it till all hope of life is gone! In the one case, it prepared the way for a return to the world; in the other, for a departure from it! None of the impostures of Popery are more palpable, deceitful, and cruel. Ver. 16-20. This is another of those Scriptures which the "Man of Sin" has perverted to purposes of delusion and evil. The Popish priests make it the foundation of their pernicious and impious system of what is called "Auricular Confession," or confession in the ear of the priest, who claims the right, and exercises it, of searching the conscience by all sorts of interrogatories. The confession, on the contrary, enjoined by James, is not to a priest at all, but to one another; nor does it mean more than that general opening of the heart, in any matter that troubles the conscience, to a friend, with a view to counsel and prayer. Popish confession, on the contrary, is a school of iniquity, which, under pretence of discovering sin with a view to its forgiveness, sows broadcast the seeds of it in the hearts of the simple and the untainted, teaching them sins which had never entered the mind. The system of confession, as carried on in the kingdom of Antichrist, while it contributed nothing to personal purity, but the contrary, prodigiously advanced the power of the Popedom. By means of this tremendous engine, the spirit of Europe was placed and kept in fetters for ages. Kings, princes, and people, all were brought by it into a state of the most abject slavery.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

The object of this Epistle is to strengthen, encourage, and console the children of God. There is difficulty in determining whether it was intended for Jewish or Gentile believers, or for both; but one thing is certain, it is equally adapted to either. There is nothing about it at all pointing to the Circumcision. It comprises a general delineation of the system of Gospel doctrine, Christian experience and morality, remarkable alike for its simplicity, clearness, and force. Notwithstanding the great importance which attaches to the labours of Peter, and his special prominence at the outset, he ultimately disappears; we hear no more of him after the Council at Jerusalem. There seems reason, however, to believe that he preached largely to the Jews of the Dispersion, in many parts of the East. It is also probable that he came to Rome about the year 63 or 64, when he fell under the cruel hand of the persecutor, and was crucified, according to the prediction of his Lord.

Chap. I. 1-7. Peter reasons upwards from effect to cause. Apostle although he was, he knew nothing of any man's election but through repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus; but wherever he found these, he viewed and treated the subjects of them as heirs of eternal life, and urged them to make their calling and election sure. "Predestination to life is the everlasting purpose of God, whereby (before the foundations of the world were laid) he hath constantly decreed by his counsel secret to us, to deliver from curse and damnation those whom he hath chosen in Christ out of mankind, and to bring them by Christ to everlasting salvation, as vessels made to honour." In every age this new birth has been a mystery, but the fact has been certain; the subjects of it have uniformly been made new creatures. They who are born again are the subjects of a lively hope, founded in the resurrection of Christ: that great fact proves the acceptance of his work in the room and stead of his people, by which 9 ^aReceiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

10 Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you:

11 Searching what, or what manner of time, ^athe Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand ^bthe sufferings of Christ, and ^cthe glory that should follow.

12 Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us, they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you ^awith the Holy Ghost ^bsent down from heaven; ^cwhich things the angels desire to look into.

13 Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope ^ato the end, for the grace that is to ^bbe brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ:

14 As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance:

15 But ^aas he which hath called you is holy, ^bso be ye holy in all manner of conversation;

16 Because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy.

17 And if ye ^acall on the Father, ^cwho without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, ^dpass the time of your sojourning here in fear:

18 Forasmuch as ye know that ^aye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as conscience is relieved, and the soul filled with happiness. Ver. 8-16. The appeal here made to the feelings of the converts is very affecting. They had not seen the Lord, Peter had; and yet, believing the Divine testimony concerning him, they rejoiced as well as he, and for the same reason. Faith brings distant objects near, and gives things invisible much of the effect of sight. The salvation of souls comprises everything secured for them by Jesus Christ, both for this world and that which is to come. The prophets were the mere penmen of the Holy Spirit, recording his communications even when ignorant of their import. They were, nevertheless, at especial pains to penetrate the mystery; and when they failed, were rewarded by an intimation, that the time was future, and that they had no immediate interest in the matter. As with the body, so with the mind, action requires freedom from incumbrance; the loins of the mind must be girded up, and everything put aside that would interfere with the movements of the soul in the silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers;

19 But ^{with} the precious blood of Christ, ^{as} of a lamb without blemish and without spot:

20 Who verily was fore-ordained before the foundation of the world, ^{but} was manifest in these last times for you,

21 Who ^{by} him do believe in God, ^{that} raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that ^{your} faith and hope might be in God.

22 Seeing ^{ye} have purified your souls ⁱⁿ obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, ^{see} that ^{ye} love one another with a pure heart fervently:

23 Being ^{born} again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, ^{by} the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever.

24 ^{For} all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away:

25 But ^{the} word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.

CHAPTER II.

1 The apostle exhorts them to desire the sincere milk of the word. 11 He beseeches them to abstain from fleshly lusts. 13 He enforces obedience to magistrates and to masters; 16 exhorting them to suffer patiently for well-doing.

WHEREFORE, ^{laying} aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil-speaking,

2 As new-born babes, desire ^{the} sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby;

3 If so be ye have ^{tasted} that the Lord is gracious:

4 To whom coming, ^{as} unto ^a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, ^{and} precious,

5 Ye also, as lively stones, ^{are} built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up ^{spiritual} sacrifices, ^{acceptable} to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, ^{Behold}, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that 15 For ^{so} is the will of God, that with well-doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

16 As free, and not ^{using} ^{your} liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, ^{but} as the servants of God.

17 ^{Honour} all ^{men}. Love the brotherhood. ^{Fear} God. Honour the king.

18 Servants, ^{be} subject to ^{your} masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward.

19 For this is ^{thank-worthy}, if a man fight of faith. Holiness is to be the one great pursuit of the justified; guilt removed, and peace imparted, the principles of evil are to be combated and uprooted, so far as practicable in the present state of human nature. Whatever a class of professors may say, increase of holiness is commanded, and, therefore, possible; every man who has watched the working of his own heart knows there is such a thing as growth both in knowledge and in grace. Ver. 17-25. Life is but a sojourn; the children of God, one generation after another, are called home to rest in peace. While the great principle which is to govern them is love, it is not without a salutary mixture of fear. In the wide universe only one thing can redeem souls—the blood of Christ. Redemption was not an after-thought; the work of Christ was appointed him before the world had a being, and everything which succeeded his manifestation in the flesh was but a part of the Divine arrangement. Truth alone can purge the soul from sin; and wherever it enters by faith it has that effect. Peter unites with the other apostles in testifying to the great doctrine of regeneration. Whatever is stated in Scripture will be fulfilled to the letter in the eternal world; every promise to the righteous, and every threatening to the wicked, will then be found an ever-enduring reality.

Chap. II. 1-10. The seeds of all sin are found in the hearts of all men. Circumstances alone have led to the differences which appear among them. What milk is to the babe in nature, that the simple Gospel is to the young convert. There is no appointment to punishment, unless as the reward of transgression. Their wickedness was foreseen, and its penalty fixed, from eternity. But all was justice, and nothing arbitrary. All that is good in the faithful, is the result of purpose and the effect of grace. Christians are a chosen generation; and, through the Lord Jesus, they are made both kings and priests unto God, that through eternity they may show forth his praise. Ver. 11-17. "Fleshly lusts," and "the works of the flesh," as set forth in Gal. v. 19-21, are terms which explain each other. They must not be indulged in, but modified, through the power of the Spirit. The seat of sin is in the soul; the body is merely the instrument of its operation. The conflict is, therefore, not between the body and the soul, but between the old and the new nature. All indulgence of these evil ^bfor conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully.

20 For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, ^cthis is ^aacceptable with God.

21 For even hereunto were ye called: ^dbecause Christ also suffered ¹for us, ^eleaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps:

22 Who ^fdid no sin, neither was ^gguile found in his mouth:

23 Who, ^hwhen he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; ⁱbut committed ^jhimself to him that judgeth righteously:

24 Who ^khis own self bare our sins in his own body ^lon ^mthe tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: ⁿby whose stripes ye were healed.

25 For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls.

5 For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, ^awho trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands:

6 Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose ^bdaughters ye are as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement.

7 Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered.

8 Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; ^alove as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous:

9 Not ^brendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, ^cthat ye should inherit a blessing.

10 For he that will love life, and see good days, let him ^drefrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they ^espeak no guile:

11 Let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it.

12 For ^athe eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and ^bhis ears are open unto their prayers: ^cbut the face of the Lord is ^dagainst them that do evil.

13 And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

14 But and ^aif ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled;

15 But ^bsanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you ^ca reason of ^dthe hope that is in you with meekness and ^efear:

16 Having ^aa good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil-doers, they may be ashamed that falsely appetites and passions tends to blind the mind, to quench the Spirit, to disturb peace, to stain purity, and impair strength. The chief crime of the Christian, in the esteem of the wicked around him, is his virtue; he is spoken against as evil, only because he has ceased to be such, and with all his heart is learning to do well. The best defence of Christians is their character: "good works" are their own evidence; and in due season the wicked will acknowledge that the righteous are better than they. Divine judgments are powerful teachers: when the Lord visits the earth, then his enemies do justice to his people. Loyalty to the powers that be, is a first principle of the Christian religion; believers submit even to bad governments, and in the end overthrow them by the meek and quiet diffusion of knowledge. The universal triumph of the Gospel will be the destruction of bad governments and bad laws, and the establishment of the reign of truth and justice. Resistance to unlawful measures, however, by legal means, is fully permitted, as is proved from the example of the Apostle of the Gentiles. Ver. 18-25. The lesson here given to all who occupy subordinate stations, is most important. By uniformly acting on it, the cause of Christ will be materially advanced. From the constitution of human nature, patient sufferers will find their account in it. When a man endures wrongfully, he is adopting the surest means of effecting the redress of his grievances; his patience will recoil upon the evil-doer. The use which is here made of the Lord's example is the most touching thing in the epistle. In the hands of the Apostles, it is rendered subservient to every purpose of evangelical instruction, supporting all the promises and enforcing all the precepts.

Chap. III. 1-7. All the Apostles unite in upholding the domestic constitution. Where a husband happens to be an unbeliever, his conversion will very mainly, under God, depend on the deportment of his wife. Religion in the life will often command attention, where religion in the Bible, and in the pulpit, is unheeded. "A meek and quiet spirit" may, to the carnal eye, seem a thing of little value; but it is, "in the sight of God, of great price," and, among men, it is often a great power; it is a jewel, compared with which the gems of the ocean are worthless. The claims of the wife are co-extensive with her duties. The knowledge of God in Christ gives a colour to everything. Here, in a single verse, we have the elements of a treatise; "joint-heirs of the grace of life," is an expression involving a principle which, if obeyed, will abundantly secure all the ends of matrimony. Whatever is at variance with love and peace, will be sure to hinder social worship. Strife and devotion cannot dwell under the same roof. Ver. 8-16. Christian brotherhood perfected, would be the most beautiful spectacle in the universe, and only short of heaven itself. Peter, like James, makes special provision for the rule of the tongue. To manage that organ is one of the highest achievements of grace. The habitual recognition of the Divine presence, and our relation to God as our Father, will raise us above the fear of man, and render us more than conquerors over accuse your ^agood conversation in Christ.

17 For ^ait is better, ^aif the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well-doing, than for evil-doing.

18 For ^aChrist also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, ^athat he might bring us to God, ^abeing put to death in the flesh, ^abut quickened by the Spirit:

19 ^aBy which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison;

20 Which sometime were disobedient, when once ^bthe long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved by water.

21 The like figure whereunto ^aeven ^abaptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ:

22 Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels, and authorities, and powers, being made subject unto him.

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorts them not to practise any longer their former sins; 8 but to maintain charity toward each other, 10 to be diligent in their respective duties, 12 and to rejoice in suffering for the sake of Christ.

FORASMUCH then as ^aChrist hath suffered for us in the flesh, ^aarm yourselves likewise with the same mind: ^afor he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin;

2 That he ^ano longer should live the rest of ^ahis time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to ^athe will of God.

3 For the time past of ^aour life may suffice us ^ato have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:

4 Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with ^athem to the same excess of riot, ^aspeaking evil of ^ayou;

5 Who ^ashall give account to him ^athat is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

every enemy. Ver. 17-22. It is consolatory for Christians to know that nothing can befall them but by the will of God, and that everything is rendered subservient to their welfare. The sufferings of Christ for his people should reconcile them to the endurance of all things, even of death itself, for his sake! That same Spirit which had formed his body, after the crucifixion raised it again from the dead. By that same Spirit, through Noah, he preached to the men of the Old World, commanding them to repent, that they might be saved, throughout the long period of the preparation of the Ark. Christ was not then incarnate; but he superintended all the affairs of his Church, and regulated the course of every believer. Noah, the "preacher of righteousness," was his representative—the Apostle of the Old World—beseeching them to be reconciled unto God. As there was no deliverance but by the Ark, and all perished except those within it, so there is salvation only through the Lord Jesus. Water is an expressive emblem as the means of material purification; but the blood and Spirit of Christ alone can cleanse the soul. The resurrection proved the acceptance of Christ's sacrifice, and made way for his exaltation to the Father's right hand, where he dispenses the blessings of redemption.

Chap. IV. 1-8. The apostle now returns to his subject, as set forth in chap. iii. 18: "Arm yourselves with the same mind"—that is, rather than transgress the Divine command, and dishonour the Lord of glory, be prepared to encounter persecution, and even to lay down life itself, with the same meekness and courage as Christ displayed in bearing the sins of his people. All who are born of God must deny the lusts of men, and henceforth be governed by the principle of filial love. They have been too long the servants of iniquity, walking in paths which led from God to perdition! The revolting picture here drawn shews what was the prevailing habit of the period throughout the Gentile world. In these courses the benighted earth sought happiness, but found it not. The conduct of the Christians, therefore, might well seem strange to them. Their reformation brought a reproach on them; and thus it is still with people, in every condition of life, who break off evil courses, and separate from worldly company. They are frequently considered to be the subjects of mental disorder, and yet they are hated instead of being pitied, which they ought to be, supposing the truth of the insinuation. When enmity reigns around the children of God, that is a strong reason why they should draw more closely together, and by love at home endeavour to com-saved, *where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

19 Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well-doing, as unto ¹a faithful Creator.

CHAPTER V.

1 The apostle exhorts the elders to feed the flock of God; 5 the younger to submit to the elder; 8 and all to be sober, watchful, and constant in the faith; 9 to resist the devil. 10 He concludes by salutations and benedictions.

THE *elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and ¹a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:

2 Feed ²the flock of God ¹which is among you, ²taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; ³not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;

3 Neither ⁴as ²being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock:

4 And when ⁵the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive ⁶a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

5 Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder: yea, ⁷all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for ⁸God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

pensate for unkindness, injustice, and cruelty abroad. They have their happiness very much in their own hands; love will make the most of everything, and follow only such courses as make for peace. Ver. 9-19. Times of persecution, which lead men to flee, render the exercise of hospitality a thing of great moment. Even the lives of the faithful have often depended upon it. In proportion to the means which have been bestowed upon individuals, is their obligation; and they are to remember that, in distributing to the necessities of their brethren, they are only acting as their Master's stewards; the property is not theirs, but his. "Fiery trials" signify persecutions of the utmost intensity, which then raged in the regions to which the apostle refers, in the outset of his epistle. The highest honour known to Christians, was to suffer for the Divine and Glorious Person who had laid down his life for them. Peter is here urging believers simply to follow the example which had been set long before, in Judea, by him and his brother apostles. Reproach for Christ is but another name for honour and happiness; the special blessing of God never fails to rest abundantly on those who suffer for his kingdom. The persecutions of those days were essential to purify the Church, to keep her pure, and thus to prepare her for the glorious enterprise of the world's conversion. But if such dispensations be the lot of God's own people, what is to be expected by their enemies?

Chap. V. 1-7. Peter here, merging for the moment his apostolic office, fraternally addresses the elders of the Church as one of themselves, mingling with his words the touching fact, that he had been a "witness of the sufferings of Christ." The phraseology of the charge here given, very probably arose from the address of the Lord Jesus to Peter, when he commanded him to feed the sheep and the lambs of his flock. The language is full of tenderness and beauty. Human nature is such, that its constant tendency is to go astray. The power derived from pastordom was in danger of being abused to gratify purposes of vanity, pride, and ambition; the subsequent history of the Church shewed that there was but too much need for the caution here given by the apostle. It is proper that the under-shepherds should copy from the Chief Shepherd, for then all will be well; eschewing all attempts at lordship, they will endeavour to be examples to the flock. In addition to what was personally binding on them individually as Christians, they are required, as teachers of others, to exemplify their own lessons; since on this the success of their ministry will very materially turn. These are standing rules for the pastors of Churches and preachers of the Word to the end of time. Age brings experience, and, hence, years are entitled to respect. Pride and perversity, wherever they appear, are fatal to peace, and more especially so in the Church of Christ. Ver. 8, 9. None of the apostles have spoken with such feeling and force as Peter concerning Satanic temptation—plainly for this reason, that none had experienced so bitterly and terribly his malice, cunning, and power. The awful lesson Peter had learned was ever after present to him, to the day of his death. It is as lamentable as it is astonishing, that the revealed fact of the existence and character of this diabolical enemy of man, instead of exciting terror and awakening vigilance, should, by multitudes of professing Christians, be treated with levity and made the subject of jest! He is here described as the "adversary" of the faithful; and to sport with so awful a reality, as if his being were a fiction, is the way for men to prepare themselves and each other for being devoured! The only safe attitude is that of sobriety, watchfulness, and prayer. Ver. 10, 11. Suffering has ever been employed in improving and perfecting all great characters. God uses it as a preparation for his own work of establishing, strengthening, and settling his people. Let none murmur at such a process, seeing it is carried on with a view to the bestowment of blessings so great and precious. Ver. 12-14. There is great uncertainty as to the import of the term "Babylon." Some writers have contended that Rome was meant, as the mystical Babylon, seeing it was about to take the place of the ancient city, outstripping it in depravity, pride, idolatry, and cruelty. Others, however, have thought it more natural to take it to mean Babylon in Chaldaea, or in Egypt, where there were Jewish converts to the Christian faith, and among whom, it is presumed, the apostle was then labouring.

THE SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

This Epistle, it is probable, was written several years after the former, and only a short time before the apostle's martyrdom. Its object was to put Christians on their guard against false apostles, and others, who perverted the Gospel, and infidel scoffers who sought to shake the faith of believers, and to prevent the spread of the Word. The Epistle embodies much precious truth, earnestly inculcating holiness, and entire consecration to the service of the Lord.

Chap. I. 1-9. Character and privilege are always united in the Sacred Scriptures. The foundation of peace and hope is justification before God: until men be renewed, pardoned, and reconciled, and have imputed to them the righteousness of the Lord Jesus, they are not in a position to enter the school of Christ. There must be life and peace before there can be hope and joy, duty and service. A new heart, therefore, lies at the bottom of obedience, and of exhortations to the use of means for growth and edification. In order to faith in the Lord Jesus, there must be knowledge concerning him; this possessed and believed, experience commences, and the spring of holy obedience is opened up. The promises are given in order to purify quite as much as to comfort. This participation of the Divine nature is the source of all personal excellence. The outline of Christian morality here presented is perfect. The whole of the virtues or graces enumerated are necessary to constitute Christian character; they cannot exist apart; the principle of them all is in the new nature: but they may not all be alike cultivated, although they ought to be so; since only in this way can we secure the symmetry which is essential to spiritual beauty. Ver. 10-21. It is by men's obedience to the Gospel call that their "election" is indicated. If the obedience be sincere, there is no doubt as to the fact of the "election;" if the obedience be false, the truth of the "election" has still to be proved. Whatever, therefore, shows the reality of the call, goes to that extent to prove the reality of the "election." Heartfelt penitence and sincere faith are a moral demonstration of election; well-grounded hope, therefore, increases with the growth of holiness. The life and labours of the apostle were now drawing to a close, and his love induced him to look beyond, to the interests of the Church: he was not satisfied to leave the doctrines of the Gospel to the uncertainties of tradition; and, therefore, led by the Divine Spirit, he determined to place on record the substance of the lessons he had hitherto been inculcating on the hearts of the faithful. Peter brings his peculiar knowledge concerning the events of the Saviour's life and death strongly to bear on his instructions. Important in the way of evidence as was the voice from Heaven to those who heard it, yet the word of prophecy was more sure, and every way more important. The witnesses of the voice would, in the course of nature, pass away; but the written testimony would remain for ever. Prophecy was a light in the world, where all was darkness concerning the things of which it spoke. From the beginning, prophecy had described a wonderful Person, giving intimation of the time, place, and circumstances of his birth, foretelling that he would perform miracles, teach wisdom, die for sin, rise from the dead, be taken up to heaven, and establish a universal, glorious, and long-enduring kingdom. It is among the certainties of revelation and of experience that all believers are

Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, 'This is my beloved Son, 'in whom I am well pleased.

18 And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.

19 We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts:

20 Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.

21 For the prophecy came not ⁵in old time by the will of man; but ⁶holy men of God ⁷spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER II.

¹ He foretelleth of false teachers, their impiety and punishments, 7 from which the godly shall be delivered, as Lot out of Sodom; 10 and more fully describeth the manners of those profane and blasphemous seducers.

BUT there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even ²denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 And ³many shall follow their ¹pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be ⁴evil spoken of.

3 And through covetousness shall they with feigned words ⁵make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.

4 For if God ⁶spared not the angels that sinned, ⁷but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, ⁸to be reserved unto judgment;

5 And ⁹spared not the old world, but saved Noah, the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, ¹⁰bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly;

6 And ¹¹turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly; enlightened by the Spirit of God to discover his glory in the face of Jesus Christ. Such illumination and discovery constitute to the individual the highest species of evidence. It is the fruit of the unction from the Holy One, which teaches all things. The various branches of Christian evidence are far from unimportant; but that of which we speak is indispensable, in order to their full effect. It gives finish, cement, and completion to the whole. By "private interpretation" is meant the arbitrary explanation of an individual, without regard to the analogy of faith, the events of history, or the teaching of the Spirit. As prophecy itself was not the result of private opinion, so neither was it to be opened up by private judgment. Man's private sentiments had nothing to do with it: "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." They spoke and wrote just as they were prompted by the Divine Spirit.

Chap. II. 1-22. Peter, as well as Paul, was beset by false apostles and false teachers. It is to be noted that, under the Old Testament, false prophets everywhere

8 (For that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds;)

9 The Lord ²knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, ³and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished;

10 But chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise ⁴government: presumptuous are they, self-willed, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities:

11 Whereas angels, which are greater in power and might, bring not railing accusation ⁵against them before the Lord.

12 But these, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly ⁶perish in their own corruption;

13 And shall receive ⁷the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure to riot in the day-time: spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you:

14 Having eyes full of ⁸adultery, and ⁹that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls: an heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children:

15 Which have ¹⁰forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Bosor, who loved ¹¹the wages of unrighteousness;

16 But was rebuked for his iniquity: ¹²the dumb ass, speaking with man's voice, forbade ¹³the madness of the prophet.

17 These ¹⁴are wells without water, ¹⁵clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist of ¹⁶darkness is reserved for ever.

18 For when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those ¹⁷that were ¹⁸clean escaped from them who live in error.

19 While they promise ¹⁹them liberty, ²⁰they themselves are the servants of corrupted themselves up with the true, opposing their instructions, and neutralising their labours. In the New Testament the state of things was materially altered, which led to a corresponding change on the part of the enemy. The Lord Jesus now became the great subject of attention; his person and offices were the objects of extreme hostility to the adversary. "Damnableness" are heresies which bring along with them, or which are followed by, damnation. Of this class was the denial of the Godhead, the Divine mission, and atoning sacrifice of Christ. The seeds of such heresies were scattered abroad privily, so as to raise no alarm. "The tares were sown while men slept." The peril is constant, and so should be the vigilance of the faithful, who are never for a moment safe against the incursion of evil. These false teachers succeeded in their object mainly through craft and falsehood. Loud in their pretences to piety, even when adopting the surest methods of uprooting it, they deceived the simple. While themselves the slaves of corruption, they invited others to come and share with them the sweets of Gospel liberty! Of all evilruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.

20 For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world, through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

21 For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

22 But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, "The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire."

CHAPTER III.

1 The certainty of Christ's coming to judgment, 11 which we ought to prepare for, 17 by stability, 18 and growth in grace.

THIS second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance:

2 That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour:

3 Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts,

4 And saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.

5 For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water:

6 Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished:

7 But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

8 But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

9 The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

10 But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burnt up.

11 Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness;

12 Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?

13 Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent, that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless:

15 And account that the long-suffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you;

16 As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things: in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.

17 Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness:

18 But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

doers, those are the most culpable, and their punishment will be in proportion, who "sin that grace may abound." They have professed allegiance to Christ the Lord, and mingled with his people, only that they might be in a better position to adopt means for the overthrow of his kingdom; they are, therefore, rebels of the most treasonable description, and their reward will be worthy of their work.

Chap. III. 1-10. It is no mean office to perform to the people of God the part of a remembrancer; to a large extent it constitutes the business of the Christian pastor. The boundaries of Inspiration are fixed, and the facts of the Gospel cannot be multiplied. The great concern, then, of the Church of God is, to increase their acquaintance with the old truth, and to grow in the love and faith of it. The prophets and the apostles were the inspired messengers of God to man, and their words constitute the Lively Oracles which make men wise unto salvation. Scoffing and profligacy go together. Men oppose the Bible, because it opposes them. Voluntary ignorance is positive transgression, and it will be punished as such. The wisdom of the world is ignorant alike of the beginning and the end of the visible universe, whereas men inspired by God are perfectly at home in dealing with the stupendous and awful subject. Ver. 11-18. These facts are not mere matter of curious information; they have a strong practical bearing. The prospect of such a time, combined with the great stake in it which belongs to every human being, may well inspire seriousness. All, even the wicked, will then be solemn; it is, therefore, well for all to begin now. To these great facts are added others: the space to be left void, by the destruction of the present system of things, is to be occupied by new heavens and a new earth, which are to be the abode of righteous intelligences. Thus sin, and the consequences of it, will be removed from this wide domain of the universe; and the memory of the terrible catastrophe by which death was introduced, will be obliterated. It is a great and a fatal mistake to suppose that a life of faith is a life of sloth. It behoves all who bear the name of Christ to be diligent, that they may be found of him in peace. All error tends to wickedness, and is, therefore, accompanied with peril to the people of God, who ought to watch lest they fall from their own steadfastness. The sure means of holding out to the end is growth in grace and in the knowledge of Christ. By pursuing this course, none

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF JOHN.

It is probable that this Epistle was written towards the close of John's life, and after all his apostolic brethren had rested from their labours. The crop of heretical doctrine which had long been springing up, had then appeared throughout the Christian world, more especially in the East. Christ the Lord was everywhere the great object of attack. One class denied his divinity; another, his proper humanity; a third, his sufferings as a sacrifice for sin; and a fourth, professing to hold these truths, perverted the grace of his Gospel, contending that believers were under no obligation to observe the moral law. Against all these, and others, without naming them, John here directs his testimony. The Epistle teems with Gospel truth, wrought up with the experience of the faithful in a very remarkable manner. It is stamped by the same originality as John's Gospel. The spirit, sentiment, and language all bear the closest resemblance: while, full of love, the whole is directed towards personal holiness, with a point, a force, and an affection, to be found nowhere else in Scripture.

CHAPTER I.

1 He bears testimony to Christ, 5 and to the necessity of holiness, in order to fellowship with God; 9 with whom, however, the true penitent is accepted for Christ's sake.

THAT which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and ^bour hands have handled, of ^athe Word of life;

2 (For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you ^athat eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;)

3 That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

4 And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.

5 This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.

6 If we say that we have fellowship will fail of the crown of righteousness, which the Lord will give to all that love him.

Chap. I. 1-4. John comes forth very much in the character of a witness: he opens his epistle without salutation, and closes it without benediction. Having finished his deposition of truth and love, he retires. Nothing is here spoken from hearsay—the knowledge of the writer, even apart from inspiration, was the most complete and perfect conceivable. The eye, the ear, and the hand, all united in ascertaining the fact of the incarnation, death, and resurrection of the Son of God. From Jesus comes all life, natural, spiritual, and eternal. In the fellowship here set forth, the Holy Spirit is not mentioned, for the obvious reason that such communion is effected and sustained solely by him: he is the immediate source of Divine life to the elect; from him proceed peace, joy, hope, love, and all the other graces by which believers are distinguished. Ver. 5-10. "God is light," is an idea full of beauty and glory. Light and holiness are synonymous terms, as well as darkness and sin. Light and heat are that source of life and gladness throughout the material universe, and, therefore, a striking emblem of those influences which obtain in the spiritual world. All Christians have fellowship with God the Father in this light, and the holiness of which it is the symbol. John makes short work with those who deny that they are sinners, by the direct citation of the testimony of the Searcher of hearts. There is no forgiveness without penitence, which must be at once with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:

7 But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and ^athe blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

8 If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and ^athe truth is not in us.

9 ^aIf we confess our sins, ^bhe is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, ^cand to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

10 If we say that we have not sinned, ^awe make him a liar, and ^bhis word is not in us.

CHAPTER II.

1 Comfort against sins of infirmity. 3 To know God is to keep his commandments, 9 and love our brethren. 12 All are guarded against the love of the world, 18 and anti-christian errors.

MY little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. ^aAnd if any man sin, ^bwe have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous:

2 And ^ahe is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also ^dfor the sins of the whole world.

sincere and expressed. When that takes place, forgiveness necessarily follows—first, from the fidelity of God to his promise of such forgiveness to every returning transgressor; and, secondly, from his equity: the ransom has been paid by the Lord Jesus, and, in virtue of that, pardon must, in justice to him, be extended to all believers. The blood of the Atonement meets the necessities of all who come to him. If, therefore, any perish, theirs will be the blame as well as the ruin.

Chap. II. 1-14. To remove sin from the earth, is the object of all that enters into the idea of Christianity. To fight against it, and endeavour to uproot it from the soul, is the primary duty of all believers. As the abominable thing which God hates, it has involved the human race in such destruction that nothing could recover them but the death of God in human nature. Notwithstanding the full forgiveness and entire justification of all believers, human nature is still such, even after regeneration, that sin will occur afresh; and, therefore, provision requires to be made for its removal, since otherwise no flesh could be saved. This necessity is fully met by the advocacy and the atonement of Jesus. The love of the Head is uniformly attended with the love of his mystical body. It is impossible to love the Head, and to hate the body, or any part of it. A Christian may be cruelly injured and most deeply aggrieved by a brother, but still he cannot hate him; and the means he may adopt for the correction of the wrongdoer proceed from love, and not enmity.

3 And hereby we do know that ^awe know him, ^bif we keep his commandments.

4 He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, ^ais a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 But ^awhoso keepeth his word, ^bin him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.

6 He that saith ^ahe abideth in him, ought himself also so ^bto walk, even as he walked.

7 Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment, which ye had from the beginning: the old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 Again, ^aa new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you; because ^bthe darkness is past, and ^cthe true light now shineth.

9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, ^ais in darkness even until now.

10 ^aHe that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none ^boccasion of stumbling in him:

11 But ^ahe that hateth his brother is in darkness, and ^bwalketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, ^cbecause that darkness hath blinded his eyes.

12 I write unto you, little children, because ^ayour sins are forgiven you ^bfor his name's sake.

13 I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him ^athat is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children, because ^aye have known the Father.

14 I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him ^athat is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and ^bthe word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one.

15 ^aLove not the world, neither the things ^bthat are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.

16 For all that ^ais in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, ^bis not of the Father, but is of the world.

17 And ^athe world passeth away, and the lust thereof: ^bbut he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever.

18 Little children, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that ^aantichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time.

19 ^aThey went out from us, but they were not of us; ^bfor if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that ^athey might be made manifest that they were not all of us.

20 But ^aye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things.

21 I have not written unto you ^abecause ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

22 Who is a liar, but ^ahe that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? ^bHe is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 Whosoever ^adenieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: [but he that acknowledged the Son, hath the Father also.]

24 Let that therefore abide in you which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ^aye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.

26 These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you.

27 But ^athe anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you; and ^aye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in ^ahim.

28 And now, little children, abide in him; that, ^awhen he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

29 If ye know that he is righteous, ^aye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him.

CHAPTER III.

1 He admires the love of God in making us his children: 8 shews that this hope will promote holiness. 11 He marks the necessity, 16 the extent, 19 and benefit of brotherly love.

BEHOOLD ^awhat manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, ^bthat we should be called the sons of God! therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

Forgiveness, as an act of grace, has no respect to years or attainments. Even the little child in Christ is forgiven; faith, however weak, is invariably followed by pardon. Life is always imparted in regeneration; faith follows; and the result is union with Christ, and a participation in all the blessings of his salvation. Ver. 15-21. It is impossible to love sin and holiness at the same time—to seek happiness in God, and in things earthly. “Antichrist” means a person or a power opposed to Christ. Learned men have greatly differed in their opinions as to the term; their discussions, however, amount to very little. Suffice it to say, that the Church of Rome, and that only, meets the full import of the idea. The Antichrist proper was to spring up in the Church, and to be the fruit of a “great falling away.” This minor Anti-christ to which John refers had been in the Church, but departed out of it; another, however, would arise, that would remain till the little leaven had leavened the whole lump—till the fountain of truth had been thoroughly poisoned—till the Gospel had been fairly destroyed, and Christ himself divested of all his offices: then would Antichrist, the Man of Sin, be fully revealed, and Popery perfected. Ver. 22-29. To deny the Father, is not to proclaim Atheism, but to deny the truth of his testimony concerning the Son; and to deny the Son, is to reject him as he is freely offered in the Gospel. He who denies that, in effect denies the Father, and the Father is unapproachable to him. Jesus is “the way, the truth, and the life;” and they who refuse to come to God by him, must remain for ever apart.

2 Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; ^cfor we shall see him as he is.

3 And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.

4 Whosoever ^dcommitteth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law.

5 And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins; and ^ein him is no sin.

6 Whosoever ^fabideth in him sinneth not: ^gwhosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him.

7 Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.

8 ^hHe that committeth sin is of the devil; for ⁱthe devil sinneth from the beginning. For ^kthis purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 Whosoever is ^lborn of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.

10 In this ^mthe children of God are manifest, ⁿand the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 For this is the ^omessage that ye heard from the beginning, ^pthat we should love one another.

12 Not as Cain, ^qwho was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.

13 Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.

14 ^pWe know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren: he that loveth not ^qhis brother abideth in death.

15 Whosoever ^rhateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.

16 Hereby perceive we the love of ^sGod, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down ^tour lives for the brethren.

17 But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of ^ucompassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed, and in truth.

19 And hereby we know that we are of the truth, and ^vshall ^wassure our hearts before him.

20 For if our heart condemn us, ^xGod is greater than our heart, and ^yknoweth all things.

21 Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, ^zthen have we confidence toward God.

22 And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and ^{aa}do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

23 And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and ^{ab}love one another, as he gave us commandment.

24 And he that keepeth his commandments ^{ac}dwelleth in him, and he in him: and hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.

Chap. III. 1-12. John resolves the whole Gospel system into Divine love. It originates in love; its essence is love; its end is love. There was nothing in mankind to call it forth, but everything the contrary. From first to last the whole is of grace, without merit, request, or desire on the part of man. Likeness to the Lord Jesus will be the result of the distinct and perfect vision of him in his glorified state. The souls of his people will be sufficiently strengthened to look upon him; and by the sight they will be changed into the same image, from glory to glory. The hope of such a scene may well lift the faithful above all that is mean and grovelling on earth, and lead them to the vigorous use of all the appointed means for the removal of every spot on the soul. This blessed expectation will induce a constant recourse to the "fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness"—to a stedfast resistance to the demands of the flesh, and whatever tends to pollute the soul and darken the understanding. In explaining the words of John regarding the commission of sin, we must distinguish between an act and a habit, since it is clearly of the latter the apostle speaks. All Scripture is harmonious; and therefore no interpretation can be correct which makes any text contradict all other Scripture. Now, nothing is more sure than that the man who is born of the Spirit does not live in the habit of sin; his old courses, whatever they may have been, are fairly broken off; and so far as the new nature prevails, grace reigns, and he does not commit sin; he hates and abhors it. His delight is in the law of the Lord, in which he endeavours to walk with a perfect heart. The language of the apostle is peculiar; and it must, therefore, be explained consistently with the analogy of faith, and with the experience of true believers in every age. While it is at the peril of man either to add or to take from the Word of God, it is not less forbidden to put upon it a sense which directly contradicts the entire body of the Sacred Writings. Now, we shall certainly do so, if we interpret this verse as signifying that perfect holiness is uniformly consequent on regeneration. The spiritual warfare would, then, have no existence: where there is no foe there can be no fight; means of grace, promises and threatenings, are superfluous. Regeneration and perfection would then be synonymous terms; and the measure of piety on the earth would just be the measure of perfection. Such a view would involve the most frightful consequences. The fact, then, is this: the intense language of the apostle constitutes a species of hyperbole, such as when he says at the close of his Gospel, "There are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." There was then, as there has been ever since, a strong tendency to abuse the Gospel; and the apostle was thus led by the Spirit to enter a strong and final protest against all such courses. The language cannot amount to more. This very epistle supplies the means of explaining the statement here set forth, shewing the necessity of qualifying the apostle's language, and harmonising it with the analogy of faith. In chap. ii. he says, "These things I write unto you, that ye sin not: and if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father." Thus, while the duty of not sinning is set forth, its possibility is at once assumed. Again, when in chap. v. he says, "If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death." The possibility of sin is clearly

CHAPTER IV.

1 He warneth them not to believe all teachers who boast of the Spirit, but to try them by the principles of the Christian faith; 7 and, by many reasons, exhorteth to brotherly love.

BELOVED, believe not every spirit, but ^atry the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

2 Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: ^bEvery spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is ^ccome in the flesh is of God:

3 And ^devery spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: ^eand this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world.

4 Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them; because ^fgreater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.

5 They are of the world; therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.

6 ^gWe are of God: ^hhe that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we ⁱthe spirit of truth, and ^jthe spirit of error.

7 Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for ^kGod is love.

9 In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that ^lGod sent his only-begotten Son into the world, ^mthat we might live through him.

10 Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and ⁿsent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.

11 Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 No man hath ^oseen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and ^ahis love is perfected in us.

13 Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 And we have seen, and do testify, that ^bthe Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.

15 Whosoever shall ^cconfess that Jesus is the Son of God, ^dGod dwelleth in him, and he in God.

16 And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. ^eGod is love; and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 Herein is ^four love made perfect, that ^gwe may have boldness in the day of judgment: because as he is, so are we in this world.

18 There ^his no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. ⁱHe that feareth is not made perfect in love.

19 ^jWe love him, because he first loved us.

20 If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?

21 And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also.

CHAPTER V.

1 The new birth is evidenced by love to the brethren. 6 The Messiahship of Jesus attested in heaven, and on earth; 10 and hath a further witness in ourselves. 13 The prayer of faith shall be heard.

WHOSOEVER ^abelieveth that Jesus is the Christ ^bis born of God: and every one that loveth him that begeth, loveth him also that is begotten of him.

2 By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments.

taken for granted. Ver. 13-24. We have here the most striking test of regeneration to be found in the Word of God: it is simple, sure, and easily applied; a child may use it without fear of mistake. What is easier than for a man to determine whether he loves the people of God as such, or not? Wherever such love is felt, it is a proof of the soul's passage from death unto life. In the matter of Church fellowship this is a most important scripture; the wise and experienced pastor will know how to use it in dealing with the trembling soul. The language of ver. 22 must be taken with due limitation. Our prayers must be agreeable to the will of God—that is, for our own good, and for his glory—that they may be heard. To grant all that the children of the kingdom frequently ask, would prove their undoing; but their unwise requests are subject to the love and wisdom of their gracious Advocate, who knows their necessities, and acts accordingly.

Chap. IV. 1-11. It is impossible for us, in these days, to form anything like an adequate conception of the state of matters in the times of the apostle. The powers of darkness were roused to the utmost pitch of effort, in order to stay the progress of the light and truth which threatened the destruction of Satan's kingdom. From the outset he appears to have been everywhere on the alert, and in all possible ways warring against the Son of God and his saints. He prompts Herod to murder the Holy Child, Judas to betray his Master, Peter to deny his Lord, Ananias and Sapphira to lie to the Holy Ghost; and when the work of setting up the kingdom began, he everywhere raised up a body of false prophets, false apostles, and false teachers, to counteract the Divine operation through the instrumentality of inspired men. One of the chief points which these deceivers insisted on, and all agreed in, was, that Jesus Christ had not come in the flesh. This was to strike a blow at the heart of the Christian system; for if Christ was not come, then there was no death, no atonement, no resurrection, no ascension, no justification by faith, and no salvation by grace: the whole was one mass of fiction! These men were of the world, and the world heard them; they were praised and followed by the ungodly masses, but the children of the kingdom knew and shunned them. Ver. 12-21. The union of the soul with God is effected and cemented by the Holy Spirit, whose indwelling presence is known by his fruits. The confessing of Christ here specified is more than a verbal assent, a matter of words; it can be made only by men who believe in him with the heart, to the saving of the soul. It is, therefore, such a confession that cannot be made by an unconverted man. "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him," is language which never could have originated with the unaided mind. Inspiration alone could have produced it. Reason is simplified and perfected in the meek and grateful testimony, "We love him because he first loved us." The Gospel is, love to man: personal piety, love to God. The former was causeless; the latter springs from the former: God's love to man is sovereign, distinguishing, free, and everlasting.

Chap. V. 1-5. The new birth is the source of faith

3 For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous.

4 For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

6 This ¹is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood: and it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth.

7 For there are three that ²bear record in heaven, ³the Father, ⁴the Word, and ⁵the Holy Ghost: ⁶and these three are one.

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth, ⁷the spirit, and the water, and the blood: ⁸and these three agree in one.

9 If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son.

10 He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.

11 And this is the record, that ¹God hath given to us eternal life; and ²this life is in his Son.

12 He ³that hath the Son hath life; ⁴and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.

and every grace. The faith thus originated wholly differs from the mere assent of the mind to evidence, which may be given by either a fallen angel, or an unrenewed man. It does not admit of definition, and can be fully understood only by experience. It implies, however, the belief of all that the Scriptures have said concerning Christ as Prophet, Priest, and King; and a reliance on him for pardon, righteousness, grace, holiness, adoption, and everything that enters into salvation. Ver. 6-8. Jesus commenced his ministry by presenting himself at John's baptism, and he finished it by a baptism with blood: the one was necessary to "fulfil all righteousness;" the other, to magnify the law, that the Lawgiver might be just, and yet the justifier of the ungodly. These Heavenly Witnesses, though personally distinct, are one in the unity of the Godhead. The mode of subsistence is beyond the comprehension of mortals; but the fact is distinctly stated, which is all that man can comprehend, and all that he is concerned to know. The earthly witness is of a nature suited to the Gospel system, and the salvation it imparts. The explanations which have been attempted of the language, shew that more light is wanted to reach anything satisfactory; but the harmony of the whole is manifest, and it all bears in one direction—setting forth the great truth, that the Gospel is the power of God to salvation to all believers. Ver. 9-15. The highest evidence to the truth of the Gospel that exists is, the experience of its power on the heart. The discoveries which the believer makes, through the teaching of the Spirit, concerning the ruin of man, the evil of sin, the holiness and justice of the Most High, the atonement of Christ, and the work of grace, all unite to demonstrate to him the truth of Revelation. So entirely, indeed, is the Gospel its own witness to all such, that they are apt to be impatient of discussion, holding that it does violence to Reason, not less than to Inspiration. They would as readily be convinced that the sun in the heavens, and the mighty system of which he is the centre, were the work of men, as that the Gospel, and the Scriptures which unfold it, are matters of human origin. Ver. 16-21. The "sin unto death" is, doubtless, the sin against the Holy Ghost, mentioned in the Gospels. Mutual intercession is the duty and the privilege of the children of God. If any man fall into sin, and thereby injure his own soul, it is proper that he should implore the prayers of his friends that he may be healed. The sin against the Holy Ghost was of a nature so awful that no encouragement is held out to pray for those who commit it. Sins of surprise, or of negligence, or of security, however culpable or punishable by the parental rod, still come within the limits of pardon. There is mercy in store for all true penitents. How far this sin unto death then prevailed, it is impossible to determine; but a statement so awful as this, was much fitted to awaken that godly fear which is best adapted to prevent all sin. Sin of any kind in a Christian is a thing so heinous, that the children of God ought to shudder at the very thought! Who can bear to "crucify the Son of God afresh," and "put him to an open shame?" The one great business of their lives is to cultivate "holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF JOHN.

The object of this Epistle, like that of most others, is to administer a caution against false teachers, who utterly perverted the apostolic doctrine concerning the person and the work of the Lord Jesus. The Epistle is particularly noticeable for the emphasis with which it enjoins the withholding of all countenance from such men. The caution is one of a nature to be useful even in our own age and country.

¹ He exhorteth a certain honourable matron, with her children, to persevere in Christian love, ⁸ lest they lose the reward of their former profession; ¹⁰ and to beware of those seducers that bring not the true doctrine.

THE elder unto ^athe elect lady and her children, ^bwhom I love in the truth: and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth;

² For the truth's sake, ^cwhich dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever:

³ ^dGrace ^ebe with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, ^fthe Son of the Father, ^gin truth and love.

⁴ I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children ^hwalking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

⁵ And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.

⁶ And ⁱthis is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.

⁷ For many deceivers are entered into the world, ^xwho confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist.

⁸ Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have ^ywrought, but ^zthat we receive a full reward.

⁹ Whosoever transgresseth, and ^{aa}abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, ^{ab}hath not God: he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, ^{ac}he hath both the Father and the Son.

¹⁰ If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed:

¹³ The children of thy elect sister greet thee. Amen.

Ver. 1-7. John was now far advanced in life, and the only surviving apostle of the Lord Jesus. The woman addressed was obviously a Christian of great eminence for piety and benevolence—an “elect” or chosen vessel to bear the image and breathe the spirit of the Lord, and imitate his example by doing good. Wherever the truth dwells, the person is a temple of the Holy Ghost, and, as such, an object of Christian affection. The apostle, in the language here employed, assumes and sustains the doctrine of the Godhead of Christ. Nothing so gladdens the heart of an aged Christian as to find the children of his friends walking in the truth; compared with this, earthly distinctions are as nothing. Here again, as before, we find that the main point in the policy of the deceivers was to assail the doctrine of the incarnation. That point carried, success was complete, since it was the keystone in the arch of the evangelical system. Ver. 8, 9. Although the letter is directed to an individual, it is intended for the common good, and, hence, John exhorts all to whom it may come, to “take heed.” Notwithstanding all the helps which have been provided for the faithful, every man must be the chief agent in his own edification, and, therefore, never cease, amid his concern for others, to look to himself. Continuance in the grace of God is the primary object; and, to secure it, the sure method is to grow. A reward of grace is provided for all who “fight the good fight,” and keep the faith. The venerable apostle himself speaks as a man personally interested in the matter; throughout eternity his spiritual children would be his “crown of rejoicing.” Now, whatever men may assert to the contrary, the favour of the Father and the Son were one and indivisible: “the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ,” and the “love of God the Father,” are essentially conjoint blessings, never to be had apart, and it is by continuance in the doctrine of Christ that they are enjoyed. For this continuance the Holy Spirit provides, and thus the blessing is secured to all the chosen seed. Ver. 10-13. A spurious charity, which is always popular with the world, is but too frequently displayed by that portion of the professed Church of God which desires to stand well with those who make no distinction between truth and error, but, as circumstances may dictate, are alike prepared to support or oppose either. Such a charity has often upheld error in a variety of ways, to the grievous scandal of the Gospel, and the deep sorrow of the spiritually-minded. To act a consistent part in relation to this matter, may subject men to the charge of bigotry, and much vituperation; but, amid reproach and scorn, let them comfort themselves by remembering the solemn interdict here laid down. Where God has spoken, there is an end of human controversy; whatever a false philosophy or a spirit of infidel comprehension may affirm to the contrary, goes for nothing. To bid the enemies of the truth of the Gospel God-speed—although the very lowest measure of support that can be accorded to them—is to be partaker of their evil deeds. He that hath an ear, let him hear the Word of the Lord!

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF JOHN.

So far as the object of this Epistle may be gathered from its contents, it was to commend the duty of hospitality in furtherance of the Gospel, and to condemn the sin of spiritual usurpation. Both these points have come up, in other Epistles, as matters of instruction; but their identification with individuals gives them an increased interest, while, in themselves, they are things of great importance to the Churches.

¹ He commendeth Gaius for his piety, ⁵ and hospitality, ⁷ to true preachers. ⁹ He blames the very opposite conduct of Diotrephes; ¹² but gives a good report of Demetrius.

THE ^aelder unto ^bthe well-beloved Gaius, ^cwhom I love ¹in the truth. ² Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth.

³ For I rejoiced greatly when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth.

⁴ I have no greater joy than to hear that ^dmy children walk in truth.

⁵ Beloved, thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers;

⁶ Which ^ehave borne witness of thy charity before the church; whom if thou bring forward on their journey ²after a godly sort, thou shalt ^fdo well:

⁷ Because that for his name's sake they went forth, ^gtaking nothing of the Gentiles.

⁸ We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellow-helpers to the truth.

¹⁰ Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words; and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, ⁱand casteth them out of the church.

¹¹ Beloved, ^jfollow not that which is evil, but that which is good. ^kHe that doeth good is of God: but ^lhe that doeth evil hath not seen God.

¹² Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth itself: yea, and we also bear record; and ye know that our record is true.

Ver. 1, 2. Gaius is unknown to history; but this epistle stamps his character with an honour which will descend to the latest ages. With respect to many who profess to be Christians, it would be hazardous to pray that their bodily health and temporal circumstances might be brought into harmony with the state of their souls; in many cases it would by no means improve their condition in either respect. There are those however—and their numbers are not small—whose souls are in a condition so prosperous that it might be safe to address them as the apostle does Gaius; the prayer realised, it would increase their health, and add to their earthly substance. Ver. 3-8. Good men are always gratified by good tidings relative to the cause of God, and especially when they concern their own children. We have here an important glimpse at the Missionary operations of the apostolic age. There were no organisations then for the support of the undertaking. Holy men went forth to propagate the Gospel among the Gentiles, declining to accept anything, in the first instance, at their hands. They seem to have been dependant on their own means, the casual contributions of the Churches, or the aid of individuals; and they were, doubtless, frequently the subjects of great privation. Returning from their journeys, they reported to the Churches the events which had occurred, with their trials and supports, dangers and deliverances. The expediency of this course is proved by the epistles of Paul to the Corinthians. The experience of that apostle illustrated the propriety, under peculiar circumstances, of “taking nothing” even from the converts among the Gentiles. This scripture, then, shews that the principle of modern missions is the right one, and that it therefore behoves the Churches of Christ liberally to act upon it. Aid is indispensable, at the outset, in every land; and by furnishing it, they are “fellow-helpers to the truth,” and so co-workers with the Son of God. Ver. 9-14. It seems probable that John wrote about this very subject to the Church in question, suggesting aid to the missionaries; while an individual, apparently the pastor of the flock, took upon him to exclude the apostolic communication, if not also the apostle himself, and to expel from the Church all who befriended the cause. Such conduct seems now not merely extraordinary, but almost incredible. That any man, professing to be a Christian, and sustaining, as Diotrephes most probably did, the office of a bishop, should have acted such a part, is revolting even to our lowest notions of decency. Nor is this all; the power of the Church in admitting or expelling members appears to have been entirely taken away; they were reduced to helpless vassalage: Diotrephes had assumed complete lordship over the flock of God. The picture of tyranny here presented is alike odious and impious. It may be beneficial for those who bear rule in the Church of God occasionally to look at it. The spirit it indicates is as much opposed to the spirit of the Gospel as can be conceived. If such things could exist at a period so early, and in relation to the only surviving apostle—“the disciple whom Jesus loved”—it should not be counted strange if similar displays on a small scale are occasionally made in our own times. Diotrephes, in his way, is a sort of patriarch—the first of a line of unlovely men not yet extinct; but the worst of them present an amiable character as compared with his, which bears the stamp of unmitigated deformity.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JUDE.

This Epistle is correctly designated General, since its subject is the "common salvation;" and it is not less adapted to Jewish than to Gentile converts. The date of its penmanship is quite uncertain; some assign it to the year 64, and others so late as 90, which shews the absence of all accurate knowledge concerning it. It is remarkable for the prophet-like force of its language, and the fidelity of its denunciations, as well as for its striking discrimination of character.

8 He exhorts them to contend for the faith; 10 and describes certain false teachers.

JUDE, the seryant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to ^athem that are sanctified by God the Father, and ^bpreserved in Jesus Christ, and called:

2 Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied.

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you, ^dthat ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.

4 For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, ^eturning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and ^fdenying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5 I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not.

6 And the angels which kept not their ¹first estate, but left their own habitation, ²he hath reserved in everlasting chains, under darkness, ³unto the judgment of the great day.

7 Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after ²strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of ¹eternal fire.

defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.

9 Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses, ¹durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, ^mThe Lord rebuke thee.

10 But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, ⁿin those things they corrupt themselves.

Ver. 1-4. Jude, like the rest of the apostles, is careful, at the outset, to determine the character of the parties to whom he addresses himself; and, in this respect, the apostles furnish a model for all teachers. The remarkable expression, "the common salvation," only occurs here; and this solitary instance is wrongfully employed to support the doctrine of "common grace," or "universal light." The proclamation of the Gospel is common to all mankind; there is no exclusion of Jew or Gentile, bond or free, savage or civilised—all are invited. The experience of its power to salvation, however, is limited to a class; it is common, not to mankind at large, but to the "sanctified," the "preserved," and the "called." To these it is, in all respects, common; to them there is one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one peace and one hope, one way and one end—everything is one. The doctrine of the common faith was now in danger, and requiring a common defence. The apostle does not look on this, however, as simply an apostolic or pastoral affair; it was the duty of all the flock of Christ. But while it behoved the pastors and leaders to occupy the chief place, they alone were not considered equal to the enterprise—it was to be the work of all. There is no room for novelties in the domain of inspiration; God has spoken, and man's duty is to hear, believe, love, and obey. The danger was much increased by the fact that the enemies were in the Church; they had glided into the fold of Christ silently as the serpent, and their true character was not known till the poison had been diffused, and the work of seduction begun. When men of this stamp get into the Church, they may sow the seeds of error on a large scale before it be fairly discovered, and means can be adopted to furnish an antidote. There they are, professors of the faith—members of the Church—quietly, under the pretence of Christian liberty, "turning the grace of God into lasciviousness," and "denying the Lord Jesus Christ." These men were in the most favourable position possible for promoting the interests of Satan's kingdom; open infidels and avowed enemies, they would have possessed but little power for mischief; but, as a part of the flock of God, it was much otherwise. Ver. 5-16. The portrait here sketched is one which displays the frightful depth of human depravity. There are no lengths to which the wicked will not go, and as their way so will be their end; their unparalleled iniquity will be visited with the most tremendous vengeance! These men, with all their pride, arrogance, and boasting, were remarkable for their selfish cunning. The standard by which they estimated the character of those they had to do with, was ability to further their

THE REVELATION OF ST JOHN THE DIVINE

This Book was probably written about the year 95 or 96, and during the height of the Persecutions which then raged against Christians. Its character and object would appear to have been determined by this circumstance. It was eminently adapted to support and encourage the people of God amid their manifold and overpowering afflictions. They are fully assured of their own preservation, the overthrow of their enemies, and the universal establishment of the kingdom of Christ. This grand outline comprised a multitude of important particulars, all connected with the one great end. After the Introduction, and the Letters to the Seven Churches, comes the Opening Vision; and to this succeeds the marvellous and sublime developments which constitute the Book. It is edifying to observe the perfect harmony which everywhere subsists between authentic history and the inspired testimony of Scripture. The most profound and philosophic of all the Roman historians, Tacitus, opens his great work with the following passage, describing Rome at the very period to which the apostle refers:—"The time abounded in revolutions and surprising events; tragical in battles and slaughter; full of fury and faction, of insurrections and revolts; a time horrible and bloody, even in the intervals of peace! Behold four Emperors slain by the sword; three fierce civil wars, foreign wars still more so; generally a sad mixture of both civil and foreign. The fairest cities of Campania swallowed up or overthrown, and the finest territory covered with desolation; Rome itself, by frequent conflagrations, laid waste; her temples, the most venerable and ancient, utterly consumed; and even the Capitol itself burnt down by the hands of Romans. Religion profaned; mighty and daring crimes committed; the isles peopled with banished citizens; the rocks contaminated with murder and blood. But more hideous still were the ravages of cruelty at Rome. It was treasonable to be noble; a capital offence to be rich; own sordid interests: their measure of worth was wealth; in their view gain was godliness! The race is not yet extinct; people professing godliness are often but too ready to heap honours on men who have no claim to consideration on the score of character, simply because of their wealth, while they neglect or despise men of distinguished piety in humble circumstances. Mere opulence is, in the eyes of these self-seekers, a sufficient substitute for intelligence, wisdom, and piety. Ver. 17-19. The Spirit of Christ, in all the apostles, seems to have pointed to a great apostasy from the faith and love of the Gospel. With respect to the bulk of them, they would separate themselves from the faithful, which would materially lessen the evil; "sensual" men are out of their element in an atmosphere of high spirituality. It is in vain that such men profess to be the temples of the Holy Ghost; they are led captive by the Wicked One. Ver. 20, 21. Jude, like the other apostles, in dealing with the saints, is careful to connect means with ends, and in so doing, no fear is manifested lest such exhortations should interfere with the freeness of grace, or the prerogatives of the Spirit. While believers are "God's building," they are required to put their own hand to the undertaking; in this, as in the spread of the Gospel, they are co-workers with God, and the union is made a motive, not to sloth, but to activity. Believers are commanded to pray in the Holy Ghost, inasmuch as he is in them the Spirit of life, the source of all that is good, and the promoter of true devotion. That believers may keep alive in their own souls the flame of love to God, they must keep their eye steadily fixed on God's love to them; but when they have done and suffered all that circumstances require, the notion of merit is never for a moment to enter their minds. Nothing can meet their case but mercy; it is mercy first, last, and for ever! Ver. 22, 23. The precise import of these verses cannot, perhaps, be ascertained with certainty. If the apostle refers to such as have been led astray by these deceivers, the meaning may amount to this: Make a difference between those spirits who are self-willed and self-sufficient, stubborn and turbulent, and those who are meek and gentle, and whose simplicity has rendered them the victims of heretical cunning. The last verse is particularly difficult; it is certain, however, that it implies a resolute effort to effect the salvation of individuals exposed to perdition; it is likened to an endeavour to snatch persons from a house in flames, and assumes the use of means the most prompt, determined, and unceremonious, the object being, not to please, but to rescue. In making this effort, however, they must take heed, lest they themselves should perish. The metaphor is striking: the garment of one who has died of the plague is a thing so full of danger, that to touch it may be to peril life. In all efforts to save souls, care must be taken to avoid the contagion of sin. Ver. 24, 25. The apostle has, to an unusual extent, combined threatenings to the wicked with encouragements to the righteous. The Lord Jesus has both the power and the will to preserve his people; none can pluck them out of his hand; he who has begun the good work in them will carry it on to the day of Christ. He who foresaw the terrible temptation of Peter, and provided for it, sees the future of his saints, with every peril attending their pilgrimage, and will lay up in store for every emergency.

criminal to have borne honours, criminal to have declined them; and the reward of worth and virtue was quick and inevitable destruction!" Such was the terrible, the unparalleled state of things throughout the Roman Empire in the days of the last of the Apostles. The reference of the historian to the peopling of the deserted isles with the banished is very affecting, and specially pertinent to the case of John, who was "in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ."

CHAPTER I.

3 John recommendeth the study of his prophecies, 4 and addresses the seven churches in Asia. 12 He describes a vision which he had of Christ among seven golden candlesticks.

THE Revelation of Jesus Christ,^b which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and ^che sent and signified ^dit by his angel unto his servant John:

2 Who ^ebare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw.

3 Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.

4 JOHN ^fto the seven churches which are in Asia: Grace be unto you, and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and ^gfrom the seven Spirits which are before his throne;

5 And from Jesus Christ, ^hwho is the faithful Witness, and the first-begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood,

6 And hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen.

8 I am ⁱAlpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, ^jwhich is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty.

Chap. I. 1-9. The Seven Churches specified all lay in one region, within an average distance of about forty or fifty miles from each other; and it is not improbable that the aged apostle was personally known to them all previous to his banishment. The state and dignity with which the Book opens is in keeping with all that follows. The Father gave the Revelation to Jesus; Jesus to his angel; and the angel to John. At the very outset, John invokes the Persons of the ever-blessed Trinity on behalf of the Churches. He who is, and was, and is to come, is the Father; the "seven spirits" signify the Holy Spirit, the plurality indicating his manifold gifts and operations. Jesus, in his royal capacity, is spoken of plainly, without a figure; and to this is immediately added his priesthood, with his atoning sacrifice—the love from which it springs, and the blessings to which it leads. Patmos is a small island in the Archipelago, now called Palmoza, rather mountainous, and about fifteen miles in circumference. The inhabitants still shew the house in which, according to tradition, the Revelation was written, and the cave where it was revealed. Ver. 10, 11. Being in "the Spirit" signifies a peculiar, but not a new state of mind; it was something preparatory to inspiration, but not inspiration itself; for it sets forth John's condition previous to hearing the voice which introduced the vision and all the discoveries that followed. "The Lord's day" is an expression of great importance, 9 I John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.

10 I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, 11 Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia; unto Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea.

12 And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And, being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks;

13 And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle.

14 His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire;

15 And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters.

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars; and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword; and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength.

17 And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last:

18 I am he that liveth, and was dead;

as bearing on the observance of the first day of the week in the times of the apostles. When John wrote, it was universally established among the Churches as the season for public worship and the observance of ordinances. "The Lord's day," "the Lord's table," and "the Lord's supper," are all expressions of a kindred character; all, in a peculiar sense, were connected with his service, honour, and glory. However the Apostles and Evangelists may have availed themselves of the gatherings of the Jews in the synagogues on the seventh day—their immemorial Sabbath—for the purpose of preaching the Gospel to them, it was on the first day that Christians came together specially to receive instruction, offer prayer, and commemorate the death of the Lord. Thus the season and the rite, the day and the supper, strikingly united to set forth the two cardinal facts of the Gospel—the death and the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. There is no reason to think that there is anything at all either mystical or prophetic in the Seven Churches. From their several conditions, they serve to indicate the aggregate character of the universal Church, both then and in all future times. Every distinct fellowship, in every age and country, will be found to come under one or other of the states here set forth; and in that view the epistles possess a special value, both as a mirror and a monitor, to the end of time. Ver. 12-15. There is danger in any attempt to spiritualise the features of the sublime and glorious vision of the Lord Jesus which is here presented; to do so is easy, but the act is without authority. There is no mistaking the import of the golden candlesticks, or lamp-stands, as the words signify; which are full of instruction. Here the Seven Churches must be taken to represent the one Church. The candlesticks, however, are all distinct, and not connected, as those in the vision of Zechariah, which presented a different but most instructive and beautiful view of the subject. The Lord stands in the midst of these lights, regulating and watching over them with peculiar care. While the lamps shine with power and beauty around him, he holds in his hand a corresponding number of stars. The great idea, with respect to both these classes of objects, is that of light; and light in relation to its source—the Son of God. He is the “great light”—“the light of the world,” which was buried in darkness till, like the sun in the heavens at opening day, he broke forth at the beginning of the Gospel. These lamps and stars are objects of his own creation, instruments of his own appointment, for the purpose of diffusing the rays of the glorious Gospel. Ver. 16-20. The two-edged sword is the most striking emblem that earth can supply of the Divine Word. The idea was known to the Old Testament Church: the prophet says of Jesus, “He shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.” According to Paul also, the sword of the Spirit is the Word of God; in the hands of the Holy Ghost it is a wonderful power—it wounds and heals, kills and makes alive! The key is a symbol of sovereignty. Hell, here, simply means the invisible state, the abode of disembodied spirits. As the Lord of both worlds, his people may safely trust him: they are never out of his sight or beyond his reach; and he is to them a very present help in trouble, ever ready to guide, comfort, and protect them.

Chap. II. 1-3. Ephesus was the metropolis of the Lydian Asia, and, according to tradition, the residence of the Apostle John; it was the most distinguished city for splendour and commerce in Asia Proper. Its present condition shews, in a most affecting manner, the mutability of all human affairs. In 1816, it comprised only fifteen miserable dwellings, and contained only three persons who professed the Christian name, but knowing almost nothing of Christian doctrine. Thus the candlestick has been removed, and the land left in darkness. All these epistles are constructed on the same principle: they begin with a command to write, and open with some character or attribute of the Speaker, derived from the vision contained in the first chapter; commendation or admonition follows, accompanied by promises or threatenings, according to circumstances, and all closes with counsel. The prominence given to “works,” in this and all the other epistles, is most significant. Works are taken as the test of spiritual condition: religion is love, and works are the only way through which love can make itself manifest: works, moreover, while they prove the existence of love, likewise shew the measure of it. Much love, and much labour, either in purpose or endeavour, stand to each other in the relation of seed and crop. The faith of the Gospel, which is just a display of God's love to man, never fails to produce love to God, uniformly taking the direction of holy obedience. Christian experience and sound doctrine, servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

21 And I gave her space to repent of her fornication; and she repented not.

22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed, ²and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

23 And I will kill her children with death; and all the churches shall know that ¹I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts: and ²I will give unto every one of you according to your works.

24 But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thyatira, (as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known ¹the depths of Satan, as they speak,) I will put upon you none other burden:

25 But that which ye have already hold fast ¹till I come.

notwithstanding their essential importance, do not occupy the first place in the Lord's inquiries: he here acts on the same principle as he will in the final judgment; the sole ground of his decision then will be character. But this, in effect, comprises everything. Christian truth alone can produce Christian experience—that is, love and other graces; and this it invariably does where it is believed. Experience is a thing of the heart—works, of the life; the former is invisible to the human eye—the latter are obvious to all. Ver. 4-7. Love is the fruit of regeneration; all who are born of God love both the Father and the family. Love and religion are synonymous expressions in popular language; love is proof positive that its subject is born again. It may always be assumed that the penitent believer loves the Lord that bought him; from the constitution of human nature, in a regenerated state, it cannot be otherwise. In the absence of love, there is no evidence of conversion, but the contrary. Growth in grace is simply growth in love; decline in love is decline in religion. Those people who had "left their first love" were drawing back from the Cross, and the strength of their faith was diminishing. The ground of love—the love of God to man, as shewn in the gift of his Son—remains unchanged; and therefore the love of believers, however much it may increase, should never diminish. If the believer be steadfast in the faith, his love will never flag; if he grow in knowledge, and if faith keep pace with his acquisitions, his love will "increase, and abound yet more and more." This is the doctrine of all the Apostolic Epistles. A vital thing in itself, and the soul of everything in the Divine life, it ought to go on increasing to the last. Mercies are forfeited by their abuse. The removal of the Spirit from a Church or a body of Christians, will be their ruin; the form may for a season survive the power, but even that will at length perish, as is proved by all history. Countries once the glory of Christendom, are now, and have been for many centuries, filled with the superstition and infidelity of Mohammedanism. Heresies of all sorts, and divisions without end, paved the way for the utter overthrow of Christianity, and the establishment of the system of the false Prophet. Ver. 8-11. Smyrna was then, and is still, after a lapse of eighteen centuries, an important city. Its present population is about 140,000, of whom no fewer than 26,000 bear the Christian name, although the doctrines of Christianity are nearly forgotten. The steadfastness of these people had brought on them the most violent persecution, but all their sufferings passed under the compassionate eye of their Lord and Master, whose address to them is most consolatory and cheering. His language is eminently fitted to encourage all, in every age, who are suffering for the sake of righteousness. The poorest members, even of the poorest Church, are rich who have the Lord for their portion.

The devil, although unseen, is the prime mover in all the persecutions, imprisonments, banishments, and martyrdoms of God's people; but there is a limit set both to the time and the measure of his cruelties. Fidelity may sometimes bring death, but the crown of life will be the immediate reward. Ver. 12-17. Pergamos has still a population of about 20,000, among whom are about 2000 nominal Christians. This, in John's day, was one of the strongholds of darkness, where the profession of the faith involved the utmost danger. Satan appears to have held court there; iniquity of every sort, and in its most hideous forms, abounded. Of this martyr nothing is known, beyond the fact that he laid down his life for his Lord, who has, with his own lips, indited his epitaph—"My faithful servant Antipas." This is true fame! The grace of God will suffice to confess him and serve him, even where Satan's seat is, and before his very throne! The white stone has, by many writers, been considered as referring to an ancient method of expressing opinion, as is done by a modern ballot-box, by means of a black or a white stone; and if so, the white stone signified approval and eternal life. One class of expositors, however, have strongly opposed this view, believing that the thing referred to what the Romans called the testera—an emblem of lasting friendship between persons or families. In that case, a piece of ivory or stone was shaped in the form of an oblong square, which was divided lengthways into equal parts, on each of which one of the parties wrote his name, and interchanged it with the other; and by producing this, when they travelled, it gave a mutual claim to the individuals contracting, as well as to their descendants, to hospitality and kind treatment at each others' houses. According to this notion, then, the promise amounts to this—that the Lord Jesus would acknowledge the faithful among them, and ever after receive them into a state of favour and friendship. This view explains the "new name written"—a thing left wholly unexplained by the urn theory. This name no man knew save him who received it; but there was no name put on the ballot stone. Besides, the white stone was not given to the party on whose behalf it was placed in the urn; he only received the benefit of it, not the stone itself. Again, the name on the Roman testera was not that of the person who wrote it, but of his friend, who possessed it; it was, therefore, known only to the possessor, who kept it private, that none else might enjoy the benefit, which belonged exclusively to him and his descendants. Ver. 18-29. Thyatira has still a considerable population, about 3000 nominal Christians. Things went well with that Church, upon the whole; but they were at fault for not exercising sufficient jealousy on behalf of Christ. Jezebel is probably the name given to an individual, because of her likeness, in profligacy and spirit, to the cruel and impious wife of Ahab. Professing to be a

CHAPTER III.

¹ Epistles, with warnings, threatenings, and promises, suitable to the state of the church at Sardis, 7 at Philadelphia, 14 at Laodicea.

2 Be watchful, and ^bstrengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found ^cthy works perfect before God.

3 ^dRemember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast, and ^erepent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, ^fI will come on thee as a thief, and ^gthou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

4 Thou hast a few names even in Sardis ^hwhich have not defiled their garments; and they shall ⁱwalk with me in white: ^jfor they are worthy.

5 He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not ^kblot out his name out of the book of life, but I will ^lconfess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

prophetess, she uttered language which clearly shewed that her inspiration was not from above. She was both a teacher and a pattern of iniquity, which ought to have led to her immediate exclusion from the Church; but notwithstanding that, she was culpably suffered to remain. This greatly increased her facilities for mischief; had she been promptly and publicly cast out, the brand of exclusion which she would have borne would have served to warn the Church and the public against her. The Church of Christ is responsible, not only for the character of its members, but also of its teaching, both of that which it receives, and of that which it communicates to a perishing world. It is not to "believe every spirit, but to try the spirits, whether they be of God." The beautiful image of the "Morning Star" is an emblem of the Lord himself, suggesting the idea of light, and the discoveries that are made by its means—the certainty of victory and glory that will follow when they themselves shall shine as "the brightness of the firmament, and as stars for ever and ever."

Chap. III. 1-6. Sardis, once famous in the annals of the East, is now all but extinct. A Christian traveller, who visited it some time ago, found in it only seven nominal Christians! The condition here described is very deplorable—"a name to live, and yet dead." They had a reputation for piety, although wholly destitute of it—a significant admonition both to individuals and religious communities. There may be much appear-

17 Because thou sayest, ^sI am rich, and increased with goods, and ^thave need of nothing; and ^uknowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:

ance of piety, with very little true godliness. The quality of works wholly depends on the state of the heart; as it is, so are works in the sight of God. But one course remains for those who are in the sad condition here described: they must review their course, weigh themselves in the balances of the sanctuary, carefully mark their shortcomings, confess their transgressions, sue for pardon through the blood of Christ, reform whatever is wrong, and begin afresh to run the race of holy service. The most corrupt communities have yet had among them patterns of purity, and models of excellence. No piety but such as is both sincere and strong, can survive under such circumstances. The conduct of all such as are so situated, is laudable in a high degree, and will not fail to receive special tokens of the Master's favour; they will be honoured to "walk with him," as being "worthy." Inherent worth, indeed, they have none; but, of his tender mercy, he will consider, and treat them as if they had. "White raiment" is an emblem of salvation, as comprising all the graces of the Spirit wrought in the soul: Ver. 7-13. Although Philadelphia is now but a very humble community, it comprises about 1000 nominal Christians. At the outset, as a Church, they do not appear to have been strong, yet they were true and faithful to their Lord, who did great things for them. He set before them an "open door which no man could shut"—that is, he put his own seal upon the ministry of the Word, and gave the population a disposition to hear; souls were converted to

CHAPTER IV.

1 John, in vision, beholds heaven opened, and the glory of God, as seated on an exalted throne, surrounded by twenty-four elders, and four living creatures, who unite in adoring him as the Creator and Lord of all.

AFTER this I looked, and, behold, ^aa door was opened in heaven: and ^bthe first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter.

Christ, and none could hinder it, or, when done, undo it. The operations of the Almighty Spirit were beyond the reach of the persecutor, even when that persecutor was the Roman Cesar, the ruler of the world. "A pillar in the temple of my God," is an expression which is strikingly illustrated by the antiquities of the East still in being. Numbers of inscriptions remain to this hour on pillars brought from the Greek cities of Europe and Asia, and some from isles in the neighbourhood of Patmos itself, commemorating the victories of distinguished warriors. Some of these pillars stood in the temples of the heathen gods, to signify that they were under divine protection: the names of the gods were inscribed on them, as well as the names of the conquerors themselves, and of the cities to which they belonged. The language of the apostle was, therefore, not only intelligible, but interesting and impressive to the people of the East. Ver. 14-22. Of all the Churches, that of Laodicea stood lowest on the scale of spiritual excellence, and its end corresponded with its condition. Its chief distinctions were self-sufficiency and spiritual pride; and ruin followed in due season. The Church had but little salt in itself, and produced little impression on the city, which at length perished through the force of its own corruption, and the Church itself went down along with it. That once famous city is now a ruin; where wealth and greatness revelled, nothing is now seen but the wolf and the jackal. In an adjacent village about fifty poor people reside, among whom, when it was last visited, there were only two nominal Christians. No species of pride is so offensive to God as that which is called spiritual. Pride and piety are wholly incompatible; pride is the very essence of sin. Its principle is such as to require regeneration to destroy it, and to implant the germ of meekness and lowliness of heart, the distinguishing features of the character of the Lord Jesus. Seeing that pride is so deeply rooted in the soul, it is a part of spiritual wisdom to watch, pray, and strive against it: there is nothing from which the people of God have more to fear; and therefore it is expedient that the reading of the Divine Word, meditation, and prayer should all bear in that direction. Such, indeed, is the importance of the subject, that the lessons and the devotions of the sanctuary should never long lose sight of it. Wherever it appears, if indulged, it will work desolation. If it shall break out, it will infallibly lead to sin. It is, indeed, itself sin in its most hateful form; and all sin in the people of God, if not repented of, will bring rebuke and chastisement. It is impossible to say how far this fact may explain the trials and sorrows which, under a variety of forms and aspects, are found to overtake the people of God.

Chap. IV. 1-7. Here commences the second division of the Book, comprising matters still future. The visions of this and the next chapter prepare the way for the great and awful revelations which are to follow. The things John saw in vision are not to be supposed as actually existing in the heavenly world; they were merely figures designed to illustrate great facts which lay in the future. The emblems seem, in part, to be taken from the Temple worship, and are, therefore, marked by Jewish modes of thought. By being "in the Spirit," as before, we are to understand a state of mind produced by the Holy Spirit preparatory to the communications afterwards to be made. If the rainbow was anything more than a part of the drapery of the sublime scene, and intended to communicate ought to the apostle, it might be a token of the covenant of peace with Noah and his posterity. Ver. 8-11. We are here presented with as sublime a picture of devotion as is anywhere to be found in Scripture. How pure, fervent, and perfect the worship offered! It is in the highest degree celestial. Its matter is Creation; no mention is made of Redemption. If, then, Creation alone, in its wisdom, power, beauty, and goodness, produces such fervour, gratitude, gladness, and rapture, among perfect natures, what ought not the Cross to effect, with its grace, truth, love, humiliation, suffering, righteousness, and salvation!

thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

Chap. V. 1-7. The idea of the registration of events still future is familiar to the inspired penman. This Book is in the right hand of the Most High, shadowing forth the great truth, that he at once rules and reveals the affairs of the ages to come, to the end of all things. Ancient books were made of skins, fixed to rollers, after the manner of our maps. It was not the custom to write on both sides; in the present case, however, that was done, probably in token of fullness and completion. The seven seals were not on the outside fold, as comprising all within; the roll consisted of seven sheets, each fastened with a seal before the next was put on, so that the loosening of one seal exposed the contents of only one sheet; thus they could be successively read only as the seals were successively broken. The tribe of Judah, from which the Lord sprang, is represented under the emblem of a lion, bespeaking strength, courage, and majesty. Ver. 8-14. "Beasts" ought here to have been translated "living creatures," or somewhat implying intellect; since they are clearly intelligences of a most exalted order, and not mere animals. Their spiritual import it is impossible to determine; learned men have made the attempt only to discover their inability. The elders may be symbols of the Old, and subjects of the New Testament Church triumphant in heaven. This view has prevailed, but it is quite arbitrary. But, whatever their characters, both unite in worshipping the Lord Jesus, as God over all. Perfect Godhead alone can explain and vindicate such devotion. What is thus begun, the angels carry on; and in so doing they are most explicit and emphatic in setting forth the sacrifice of Jesus as, in one view, the ground of his claim to the adoring tributes which are here paid him: this they do, of course, as a matter of judgment and of feeling, sympathy and admiration, having no personal interest in the matter. What is thus commenced and carried on by the angelic hosts, is finished by the united voice of the whole creation. "Vials," is an imperfect rendering of the original; the term means cups, censers, or goblets, made of brass, silver, or gold. Popery has woefully perverted this language, and founded on it the doctrine of the intercession of the saints. The living creatures, moreover, united with the elders; and further, the prayers offered were not their own, but those of the saints—whether in earth or heaven we are not told. The whole thing besides is merely a sublime figure in furtherance of a special end, not a rubric of devotion; and it lays no foundation whatever for the Popish practice, which is flatly contradicted by the whole current of Scripture. The allusion, as already stated, is clearly to the Temple-service, and the import is, that the prayers of the saints are more pleasing to God than melodies and incense, just as the "sacrifices of God are a broken heart."

Chap. VI. 1-8. The Seals are now to be opened in order, as significant of preparation for the judgments with which the earth is about to be visited. White horses were used in the triumphal processions of victorious generals; the bow was another emblem of conquest. The red horse was a symbol of terror, as betokening evil to men on a scale of appalling magnitude. It has been the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword.

5 And when ¹he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, ¹A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine.

7 And ²when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

8 And I looked, and behold a pale horse; and his name that sat on him ³was Death, and hell followed with him: and power was given ⁴unto them ⁵over the fourth part of the earth, ⁶to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, ¹I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, ²dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow-servants also, and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and ³the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;

¹The servants of God are sealed. ²The number of them from the several tribes of Israel. ³An innumerable multitude of all nations before the throne; how they came thither, and the blessedness which they enjoy.

AND after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the east, ⁴having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

3 Saying, ⁵Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, ⁶till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

4 And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

interpreted of the retributive judgments which awaited the Romans for their cruelties in Judea between the years 100 and 188 under the Emperors Trajan and Hadrian; it is computed that the Romans took or destroyed 1000 cities, towns, and fortresses, and slew 580,000 of the men of Israel! By this unparalleled carnage, the wickedness of the Jews was in part punished, and the predictions of the Lord Jesus concerning them fulfilled; but on the part of the Romans it was simply cruel ambition, malignant vengeance, to be punished in due season. Ver. 9-11. This awful passage has been interpreted, perhaps correctly, of the terrible persecutions endured by the Church between the years 270 and 304, in some respects the most awful that ever befell the Church of Christ. The slaughter was so great and general, that the heathen believed and boasted that the race of Christians was extinct. Some writers have, indeed, referred the passage to the martyrs of the Ten Persecutions preceding that which closed in the year 304, which would then be a fulfilment of the intimation made in ver. 11, when they were comforted, and told to "wait for a little season," till what remained of suffering and death should be accomplished. Ver. 12-17. This passage has received a twofold interpretation: one class confine it to the great revolutions which were effected in the Roman Empire before the establishment of Christianity; it has been argued that no event of the time was so great as the fall of the Empire, when the lights of the heathen world, the sun, moon, and stars—that is, the powers civil and ecclesiastical—were all eclipsed and obscured, the emperor slain, the heathen priests and augurs extirpated, heathen officers and magistrates removed, the temples demolished, and their revenues appropriated to better uses. These are, doubtless, stupendous events; but surely no candid interpreter, who sufficiently examines the passage, apart from all preconceived ideas, will view it as rising to the level of the sublime and terrific picture drawn in these verses. The day of judgment alone, with all its tremendous accompaniments, can fully meet and adequately sustain these words of Inspiration. It implies nothing less than the convulsion of universal nature, the destruction of the present system, and the descent of all-devouring vengeance on the heads of the enemies of Christ.

Chap. VII. 1-17. The Sixth Seal is still continued. All this would seem to be but introductory to the mighty events of the Seventh Seal. The Four Seals present the forces of heaven generally, as brought to bear on the wickedness of earth; the Fifth points to those who have confirmed their testimony with their blood; and the Sixth foreshadows the terror and sufferings of the enemies of the Church. We are now taught to lift up our eyes, and see the Lord's gracious care of his people, amid all the convulsions, distresses, and perils which surround them. To these four angels is especially committed the peace of the earth. This, it is considered, refers to the time of Constantine, when a troubled world had rest. Never had such a tempest swept over the face of Europe; never was repose so needed or so prized. Two of the greatest writers of the period, Eusebius and Lactantius, both bear testimony to the literal and

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The seventh seal is opened, and seven angels appear with seven trumpets to announce approaching judgments.
7 The sounding of four of the trumpets, and an intimation of more awful calamities under the other three.

AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

2 And I saw the ¹seven angels which stood before God; and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And ²another angel came and stood at the altar, ³having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should ⁴offer it ⁵with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, ⁶and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it glorious fulfilment of the prediction in the person of Constantine, which shews the view that was then held. The medal struck by him furnishes a most impressive illustration of the point in hand; on the reverse it bears the inscription, "BLESSED TRANQUILLITY." This season of peace was to be employed in sealing the servants of God. The precise import of the act it is impossible to discover. We have, nevertheless, something in the Jewish Talmud bearing a slight resemblance to it. The Jews had a notion that the children of Israel were sealed up in the Book of Life and Death. According to the Talmud, the first ten days of the month Tisri they call the Penitential Days; throughout that period they fast and pray that on the tenth day their sins may be forgiven, and their names written in the Book of Life; this day, therefore, they call the Day of Expiation, and, returning home from the synagogues, they say to each other, "God the Creator seal you to a good year!" They conceive that the books are now sealed up, and that the sentence of Heaven remains unchanged to the end of the year. The same thing, they tell us, is signified by the two goats, on whose foreheads the High Priest yearly, on the day of expiation, laid the two lots, inscribed, "For God," and "For Assael"—God's lot signifying the people who were sealed with the name of God in their foreheads; and the lot Assael, the goat which was sent into the wilderness, representing those who receive the mark and the name of the beast. The seal by which the godly here are set apart for the Lord, is true faith, and its fruit—universal holiness. The sublime statement in ver. 9 and 10, may perhaps be taken as an emblem of the elect of God in every age of the world. The order in which the tribes are placed has been the cause of some perplexity, as well as the absence of one of them altogether from the roll. One thing, however, is clear; since only twelve tribes were to be introduced, and as Levi was to stand as one of them, one was of necessity excluded, which was that of Dan. It has been suggested that Dan was passed by to mark the detestation in which idolatry was held, since that tribe was the first that fell into it after the settlement in Canaan. A blight, indeed, had rested on Dan for many ages. Long before the time at which John wrote, that tribe was "brought very low:" indeed, "the sons of Dan are not numbered among the rest of the tribes," was the language of the historian at an early period. It does not appear, moreover, that any of that tribe returned from the Captivity. God will honour those who honour him: whereas they who despise him shall be lightly esteemed.

Chap. VIII. 1-13. We may now be said to have reached the climax of this wonderful vision; this seems to contain all that is prophetic in the sealed book. Communications the most sublime and tremendous are now to be made, and, as if to prepare the heavenly world for them, there is a prolonged silence. This seal comprises seven periods, each distinguished by the sounding of a trumpet. It is thought there may be some allusion here to a ceremony which prevailed among the Jews. The incense in the Temple-service used to be offered before the morning, and after the evening sacrifices; and while the offering was being presented, the trumpets sounded; but while the priests went into the temple, all was silence, and the people prayed without. Now, it is suggested, that this was the morning of the Christian Church, and that, therefore, the silence precedes the sounding of the trumpets. This view is held both by Sir Isaac and Bishop Newton. As the Seventh Seal is by far the most important of the Seals, so is the Seventh Trumpet of the Trumpets. These grand ceremonies of the temple represent the devotion of Christians, whose prayers are set forth as coming up in remembrance before God. The arrangements of the temple are respected by giving to ²into the earth: ³and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.

6 And ⁴the seven angels, which had the seven trumpets, prepared themselves to sound.

7 The first angel sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth: and ¹the third part of trees was burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

8 And the second angel sounded, and as it were a great mountain ²burning with fire was cast into the sea; and ¹the third part of the sea became blood:

9 And ³the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died; and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

10 And the third angel sounded, and there fell ⁴a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon ⁵the fountains of water;

11 And the name of the star is called Wormwood: and the third part of the waters became wormwood; and ⁶many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

12 And the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was darkened, and the day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.

13 And I beheld, and heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, ⁷Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound!

CHAPTER IX.

²The fifth trumpet sounds, and an angel openeth the bottomless pit. ¹³The sixth trumpet soundeth, and four destroyers loosed.

AND ⁴the fifth angel sounded, and I saw ⁵a star fall from heaven unto the earth: and to him was given the key of ⁶the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit; and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace; ⁴and the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, ⁷as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men ¹which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that ²they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: ³and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days ⁴shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

this angel, as to a priest, "much incense," that he might offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne, answering to the altar of incense, which was overlaid with gold, and stood before the Holy of Holies. This angel was, doubtless, an emblem of Christ as the great High Priest of his people; this "much incense" meetly represents his merit and mediation, through which alone his people's prayers can find their way to heaven. The fire taken from off the altar was a fearful symbol of the Divine wrath. It has been generally supposed that the first Four Trumpets point to the destruction of Papal Rome; it is, nevertheless, impossible to arrive at certainty on this head; walking in the light of history, however, facts are found which give an air of probability. It is assumed that the disclosures about to be made begin with the fall of the Empire, and that the events referred to were realised between the years 410 and 556—a period which was, doubtless, followed by occurrences of terrible significance. In dealing with such subjects, we must keep to broad and general views, taking heed not to confound great events with dazzling drapery. In 556 the Roman Empire had been broken in pieces, and all that remained of the mighty fabric was the small dukedom of the exarchate of Ravenna. Then, it is believed, was the "sun smitten;" the hour of woe had now arrived, when the genius of anarchy had taken possession of the world, and desolation was everywhere in the ascendant. Mighty instruments of destruction, qualified to scourge a wicked world, successively appeared. The Goths, the Vandals, and the Moors, under the guidance of their several leaders—incarnations of the sanguinary spirit of havoc and annihilation—performed the awful part assigned to them. The earth now presents a terrible spectacle, illustrative of the wisdom, justice, and power of God, and of that mighty scheme of providence whereby he governs the universe; while all bears, with mighty power, on the kingdom which cannot be moved.

Chap. IX. 1-12. We have here the first of the Woe Trumpets; the evils indicated are various and terrible. Smoke is an emblem of solemn significance; as it operates on the eye, so do errors on the understanding—blinding the mind, and thus incapacitating it for dealing with truth, and so preparing it for the reception of all sorts of falsehood and delusion. It has been generally allowed, that this trumpet points to the apostasy of Rome from the faith of the Gospel, the rank imposture of Mohammed, and the rapid spread of his kingdom. The False Prophet arose about the year 600, and died in 632; on his appearance, the corruption of the Christian Church in the East had prepared the way for his success. As the pure in heart see God, so the carnal become blinded; they love darkness and hate light. But the Koran, notwithstanding its absurdities, did far less violence to the reason of mankind than Popery, especially in its ultimate state of perfection. In dealing with such subjects, it is perilous to assume anything, but it is permitted modestly to specify historic facts, which seem to furnish a key to the prophecy. The vast armies of Saracens, who came forth from the benighted region of the East, it is thought, most probably, symbolise the locusts; the resemblance in divers points is very striking. The Mohammedan Arabs, in countless multitudes, speedily overran the north of Africa and the south of Europe. The five months assigned them for purposes of torment is the first specific period we have yet met with; it is, nevertheless, difficult to deal with it so as certainly to determine its import. Since, however, a day means a year in prophetic language, and a month 30 years, the five months multiplied become 150 years. Now, the False Prophet commenced his career

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions; and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

11 And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is ¹Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name ¹Apollyon.

12 One woe is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter.

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God,

14 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river Euphrates.

15 And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand: and I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breastplates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone: and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

CHAPTER X.

1 An angel with a book. 8 John is commanded to eat it.

AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud; and a rainbow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire:

2 And he had in his hand a little book open: and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth,

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices.

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not.

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven,

6 And sware by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, that there should be time no longer:

7 But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to in 612; 150 years added to that, brings us down to 762, and it is a historic fact, that in 746 the Saracens were broken up and enfeebled by internal divisions. In 762 the Caliph Almansor betook himself to the promotion of internal improvements, and built the famous city of Bagdad. From this time, therefore, the Saracens began to withdraw from the theatre of war and contest. The one woe, then, which is past, is viewed as signifying the devastations of the False Prophet. Ver. 13-19. It is considered that Christianity, with its corruptions, is now the chief subject of contemplation; the difficulties, however, which present themselves are such, that whatever is adduced must be so with great diffidence. Many theories have been propounded, but they are all liable to objections which appear to be insuperable. The four angels are considered so many destructive powers; and these, it is thought, are found in the four Turkish Sultanies which came forth to invade and devastate Europe. It has hitherto baffled all the powers of man to give a satisfactory solution of the "times" set forth in the fifteenth verse. On the various points of the passage it were easy to speculate, or to bring forward the sum of the diverse speculations which have been obtained on the subject, but it would avail nothing; all is wrapped in darkness, which there are no means of dissipating. Ver. 20, 21. If, as is highly probable, these verses refer to the Romish Church, then there is no difficulty in finding matter to illustrate them. The dreadful scourge of Mohammed was attended with no benefit to the kingdom of Antichrist. The Romish idolaters obstinately continued to worship demons or angels, and the spirits of departed saints, so called. They even became increasingly devoted to the adoration of images; they continued to persecute and murder the true Church of God under the appellation of "heretics;" they forbade marriage, yet connived at concubinage; they laid on multitudes vows of celibacy, and yet made public provision for licentiousness, and derived immense revenues for trampling morality in the dust. The first woe of the Saracens failed to work repentance in the Eastern Churches; and, therefore, the second woe of the Turks was sent to perfect the overthrow: and as the Western Church failed to profit from these events, the third woe was sent to cover her with desolation.

Chap. X. 1-3. Of all the angelic portraits in the book, this is the most sublime and glorious; which has led many to view it as that of the Lord Jesus himself; but for this, beyond the superlative majesty of the picture, there is no authority. Temple usages are supposed to be still here referred to. On the great Day of Atonement, it was customary for the high priest to stand on a level place in the court of the people, where he read the law to them, while the heifer and the goat, which was the Lord's lot, were burring without the temple. The angel is supposed to stand so that his right foot appeared to John as if resting on the sea of glass, and his left on the ground, while he spoke with a loud voice, in reading the law. By the earth the Jews understood the continents of Asia and Africa, to which they had access by sound, 'the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, 'Take it, and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, 'Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies; and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These have 'power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, 'the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

land; and by the "Isles of the sea," all parts to which they sailed, and especially Europe. The events of the little book seem to cover 1260 years. This book makes no advance, however, in the vision; it merely sets forth the condition of the world during the Woe Trumpets. These thunders are viewed as emblematic of the Levites, who sang and played on instruments, at the great sacrifice, on the seven days of the Feast of Tabernacles, when the trumpets also sounded. Then the trumpets were blown, and the Levites sang, alternately, three times at every sacrifice. The prophecy of the Seven Thunders, therefore, is just a repetition of the prophecy of the Seven Trumpets in another form. Ver. 4-11. The angelic oath seems to amount to this: There shall be no further delay of the appointed judgments; the purposes of the Most High God for the final overthrow of the kingdom of Satan and the universal establishment of the kingdom of Christ, will shortly be realised. To "eat the book" may signify to ponder and digest the awful words now recorded. The statements are of a mixed character; some are pleasant, and some painful. This chapter is plainly not a continuation of the prophecy, but a sublime introduction to what follows. John has, in effect, prophesied up to the present hour; and the sphere of his predictions in extending every day, through the translation of the Sacred Scriptures into the language of every people, and the extension of the missionary enterprise through all the earth.

Chap. XI. 1-6. This "reed" has been viewed as an emblem of the Sacred Scriptures, the sole and only rule by which God's spiritual temple, as composed of his elect, is to be built. The adversaries of the Lord would be permitted to trample down his people throughout the long period of 42 months—that is, in prophetic language, 1260 years. The period here specified deserves special notice as very remarkable, from the fact that it is repeated under a variety of aspects. The precision with which the time of the Church's prostration is here stated is such, that nothing is wanted but the exact date of the commencement of the calculation to enable us to determine, with sufficient certainty, when it will end; but, for wise reasons, darkness rests on that point. One thing, however, is sure—the 1260 years date from the commencement of the down-treading of the Church; but it is necessary to ascertain distinctly what is meant by the "Holy City;" and as the language is throughout symbolic, it cannot mean the literal Jerusalem, but its anti-type, the Church of Christ. Granting this, however, it still remains to inquire what is meant by the "treading down." Is it direct persecution? The probability is otherwise; the tendency and effect of that has ever been to purify and strengthen. It was, probably, the corruption of its doctrine, its fellowship, and its ordinances, whereby it was polluted, prostrated, enfeebled, and undone. For this end, the year 606 is usually fixed on, because then, although the corruption was far from perfect, an event occurred by which it was steadily and progressively advanced; the Bishop of Rome then hoisted the standard of the Popedom, by claiming a Universal Episcopate. One class of expositors have contended for the later period of 756, when the Pope became a temporal

CHAPTER XII.

1 A woman clothed with the sun. 3 The great red dragon. 7 The dragon overcomes.

AND there appeared a great ¹wonder in heaven; ²a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:

³ And she, being with child, cried, ⁴travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

⁵ And there appeared another ⁶wonder in heaven; and behold ⁷a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads.

⁸ And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: and ⁹the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born.

¹⁰ And ¹¹she brought forth a man-child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was ¹²caught up unto God, and to his throne.

¹³ And ¹⁴the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

prince, which they consider necessary to complete his character of the "Man of Sin." The Witnesses have been the subject of much controversy: one class have supposed them to mean the Old and New Testaments; another, the Old and New Testament Churches; a third, the faithful servants of the Lord Jesus generally, both individuals and churches, who have borne witness to the truth of the Gospel. Closely examined, it will be found that the principle in all is the same. The Witnesses are described as "two," probably because, under the law, that number was required to establish a charge. The period through which their testimony extended was most remarkable—1260; just the time during which the "Holy City" is being trodden down. From the time, therefore, that corruption began fully to develop itself, onward to the close, there were men valiant for the truth, who ceased not, in the name of Almighty God, to protest against the corruptions around them. The two olive-trees are considered to be an emblem of the faithful Witnesses raised up from age to age to illumine a dark world, and awaken a slumbering Church, during the long period of 1260 years. The allusion is to the beautiful vision of Zechariah, in which the olive-trees were an emblem of Zerubbabel the governor, and Joshua the high priest, respectively types of the Lord Jesus in his kingly and priestly office. The fire proceeding out of their mouths is the truth of the Gospel; as Christ the Lord, by the Apostle Paul, is predicted as ultimately to destroy Antichrist "by the breath of his mouth, and the brightness of his coming." Ver. 7-14. The "Beast" is allowed to be the Church of Rome in a matured state of corruption, impiety, and cruelty, which is to appear when the testimony aforesaid shall have been finished. This is one of the most perplexing portions of the prophecy; no interpretation yet given is at all satisfactory. Some of the ablest expositors hold that it points to events yet future. A dispensation so terrible is implied, that nothing in their view has yet occurred coming up to the language of the prophet. In the worst times, they contend, the race of Witnesses has never failed; but the words of John indicate a state of things in which they would be utterly silenced. These words betoken something like the temporary extinction of all visible appearance of the true religion. On the other hand, expositors of great name have contended that the Witnesses were slain prior to the Reformation, when Popery was at its height; to escape a difficulty, they insist that the symbolic phraseology must be taken with proper limitations. In particular, they make much of the circumstance that the leading Papists of the period, as their writings still shew, exultingly congratulated each other on what they believed to be the extirpation of heresy from the earth. In harmony with this view, they hold the Reformation to have been the resurrection of the Witnesses. Thus, plausible pleas have been made out for both theories of interpretation; the preponderance, however, of evidence seems in favour of the latter. Good men will rejoice in this. According to the one view, the worst is past; according to the other, it is yet to come. The earthquake is generally taken to point to the French Revolution of the last century, which, for the time, gave an overwhelming blow to the Popedom; and that power is believed by many to have still a distinguished part to play in the demolition of the system. Such may be the fact; but, at present, it rather promises to continue for a time, at least, to be a prime pillar of Antichrist. Ver. 15-19. In verse 15, one of the most glorious in the book, the prophet's eye darts into the bright future, when the symbolic gives way to the literal, and the coming triumph of truth and righteousness is clearly foretold. For a Woe Trumpet, the notes are cheering and joyous beyond expression. The Divine song, however, is sung by anticipation; there is still much to be both done and suffered before the arrival of that happy day: seven vials of wrath are first to be poured out; and then the glorious future, like the rising sun after a night of tempest, will break forth to gladden the universe.

Chap. XII. 1-6. The vision now presented brings forward nothing new; it only sets forth another view of the period of 1260 years, developing the sufferings of the faithful. A woman clothed with the sun, with stars for jewels, and the moon for a footstool, is supposed to represent the Church, arrayed in the righteousness of her Lord, and is one of the most beautiful ideas ever presented to the eye of the mind. Nature can supply no other image so expressive of honour and dignity—nothing uninspired, as emblematical of nations, virtues, or gods, ever equalled this picture. It is a notable fact, that when this "book" was written, it was customary to represent the moral virtues and public societies by the figure of a woman, as may still be seen on Roman coins. Salus, for example, as a female, stands on a globe, as the symbol of the safety and security of the world under the care of the Emperor Hadrian; on the 7 And there was ^bwar in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And ^cthe great dragon was cast out, ^dthat old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which ^edeceiveth the whole world: ^fhe was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and ^gthe kingdom of our God, and ^hthe power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.

11 And ⁱthey overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by ^jthe word of their testimony; and ^kthey loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore rejoice, ^lye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the ^mman-child.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 A vision of a beast rising out of the sea: 11 of a second beast, rising out of the earth, exercising the power of the former beast, making an image of it, and compelling all to worship it. 13 The number of the beast.

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the ^kname of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and ^lthe dragon gave other side of the coin the inscription explains the emblem. The whole of this magnificent image of the woman would seem to indicate the body of Christ, which is his Church. "Travail in birth" may well represent the sufferings connected with the maintenance of the Gospel testimony on earth, the preaching of the Word for the conversion of men, and the increase of the heavenly family. The dragon, the emblem of violence, voracity, and cruelty, meetly shadows forth the "old serpent," the "accuser of the brethren," while his horns refer to the kingdoms into which the Roman Empire was broken up, and whose power was employed to uphold "Antichrist," and persecute the people of God. The drawing of the stars from heaven, and casting them to the earth, is considered to have its counterpart in seducing from the faith of the Gospel princes and potentates, and ministers of the Word. This is a fearful event, implying for the moment an immense triumph of the powers of darkness. The "child" of the woman is considered to be an emblem of the entire offspring of the Church—that is, all converts—during the period specified. The children of the Divine family are helpless; and, therefore, the "serpent" is most intent on their destruction. A great practical principle is here involved: would that the Church of God were but duly alive to the perils of her young converts! She would then make all possible provision for their preservation. The "man-child" is, by many, supposed to mean Constantine, but the time referred to in the vision was long after his appearance: however striking, therefore, may be the analogy, the prediction was not fulfilled in him. The ministers and confessors of Christ, considered as a line, are more in point. The wilderness—that is, trial, proscription, and persecution—has always proved the safest place for the Church of God. When farthest from the world, she is nearest to her Lord. If the conversion of Constantine allayed the tempest of persecution, it introduced the sunshine and patronage which laid the foundation of that state of things which developed Antichrist. The pure Gospel has never been damaged by tribulation; but worldly favour has invariably tended to corrupt it. Here, again, it is very remarkable that the specified period of affliction and sojourn in the wilderness, is the same as that which was set apart for the treading down of the Holy City, and the prophesying of the Witnesses in sackcloth. This is the third time the same figures have been produced, all referring to the same event under different aspects. Ver. 7-17. War in heaven, symbolically viewed, implies conflict on earth, shared by the heavenly powers—Michael and his angels. Angels have far more to do on earth in relation to the Church of God, than is supposed by those who have not inquired into the Scripture representations on the subject. They will be extensively employed in the final overthrow of the kingdom of darkness. The "casting out" is considered as referring to the Reformation, which is among the first-fruits of the great harvest of glory which the heralds of the Gospel have yet to reap. The final victory will be a source of great joy to all the unfallen intelligences of the universe. The subjugation of Satan will mark a mighty revival of the work of God in the earth; "salvation," and "the kingdom of God," will then sweep over the world like a mighty tide, carrying everything before it. It is proper to mark the thoroughly evangelical character of the conflict: the source of the power by which the dragon was overcome, was the blood of the Lamb, and the word of his testimony. In ver. 14, the mystical number 1260 turns up again the fourth time, as specifying the period of the woman's seclusion. Time signifies a year—times, two years—and a half time, half a year, in prophetic language; amounting to the sum already specified. These figures must bear an import of a precise and emphatic character. Floods mean persecution, and the "earth helping the woman" finds a suitable explanation in the assistance the temporal powers from time to time gave the Church—at one period directly, and at another indirectly, through the civil feuds and international conventions by which they were drawn off from the wicked work of persecution.

Chap. XIII. 1-10. About the "beasts" in this case there can be no mistake: the term as employed in an early part of the Book, meant creatures, wise, exalted, and holy; here, however, it signifies a wild beast, a creature strong, cruel, and wicked. We have before us the ten kingdoms into which the Roman Empire was divided, and over which Rome for a period was to exercise supreme dominion, wielding their powers at pleasure, to persecute the Church of God. By the sea we are to understand him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

3 And I saw ^bone of his heads as it were ^awounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and ^dall the world wondered after the beast.

4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: ^eand they worshipped the beast, saying, 'Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

5 And there was given unto him ^aa mouth speaking great things, and blasphemies: and power was given unto him ^bto continue forty and two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

8 And ^ball that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, ⁱwhose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 He ^athat leadeth into captivity, shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword, must be killed with the sword. ⁱHere is the patience and the faith of the saints.

11 And I beheld another beast ^mcoming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth, and them which dwell therein, to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 And he doeth great wonders, so that ^ahe maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,

14 And ^edeceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwell on the earth, ^pthat they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

15 And he had power to give ^alife unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and ^ccause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16 And he caused all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to ^breceive ^aa mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 ^aHere is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred three-score and six.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 A prophetic view of the remnant of believers, during the reign of the beast. 6 The progress of the reformation. 14 A figurative prediction of future terrible judgments upon the antichristian kingdom and its subjects.

AND I looked, and, lo, ^aa Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, ^bhaving his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard ^aa voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps:

3 And they sung as it were ^aa new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were ^aredeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. ^aThese are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These ^awere ^aredeemed from among men, being the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God.

the troubled, convulsed, and tempestuous state of things which then existed, and which was necessary to the rise of Antichrist. The beast and the dragon had the same number of heads and horns. The leopard-like beast fitly symbolises the civil power of those ten kingdoms, which were in all things subservient to the purposes of the "Man of Sin." As to the "blasphemy," so incontrovertible is the fact, that the symbolical is made to give place to literal expression. Nothing could exceed the impiety of the titles arrogated by the Pope: "God upon earth," "Vice-God," "Vicerent of Christ," "Our Lord God the Pope," are examples. The leopard, bear, and lion are all emblems of strength, ferocity, and cruelty. As to the wounded head, expositors are completely divided; nothing even plausible has been offered in explanation. The dragon and the beast are so essentially united, that to worship the one was to worship the other. The Pope may be considered as the representative on earth of the devil, by whom his kingdom has been formed, ruled, and preserved. Here, for the fifth time, we have the 1260 symbolic days, in various combinations; and, as already said, all bearing on the same subjects and events, all shewing that the triumph of the "Man of Sin," and the affliction of the true Church, will be periods contemporaneous, and of the same duration. "All that dwell upon the earth," is an expression comprehensive of the nations of Europe. The times will be such as to call for both faith and patience on the part of God's people. Ver. 11-18. How the appearance in this fresh beast contradicts the reality! The one is all Christ-like, the other all devil-like. Nothing can be more descriptive of the Romish clergy during the palmy days of Popery. The history of the period is the best comment on the text. The Popish priesthood, for many ages, dictated the political course of the kings, whom they kept in a state of the most degrading bondage. "The number and the name" is a remarkable phrase, which is supposed to allude to an ancient custom of marking cattle with a number which is the amount of the letters of the owner's name taken as numbers. All attempts at explaining the close of ver. 18 have hitherto been a failure.

Chap. XIV. 1-7. We are now approaching the close of the 1260 years, the destruction of the "Man of Sin," and the universal spread of the Gospel. The night of weeping is now gone, and the glorious morn of millennial happiness begins to dawn. The spirits of the just made perfect are apprised of the great fact, and in token of joy break forth into song. None can speak the language or sing the songs of heaven but the children of it. The

6 And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having ^bthe everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

7 Saying with a loud voice, ¹Fear God, and ²give glory to him; for ¹the hour of his judgment is come: and ^mworship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

8 And there followed another angel, saying, ^aBabylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, ^bbecause she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

9 And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, ^pIf any man worship the beast and his image, and receive ^{his} mark in his forehead, or in his hand,

10 The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb:

11 And ^qthe smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.

12 ^rHere is the patience of the saints: ^rhere are they that keep the commandments of God, and ^tthe faith of Jesus.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, ^sBlessed are the dead which die in the Lord ^sfrom henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may ^trest from their labours; ^sand their works do follow them.

defilement here referred to is purely figurative and symbolic. They had not been stained by the spiritual pollution of the Romish Church; they had been kept free from her idolatry and all its corrupting impieties. As the rise, so the destruction of Antichrist will be a work of time. In the way of instrumentality, co-operating with the Gospel, a multitude of things will conspire to further the grand result. This is the first distinct intimation we have of the utter destruction of the "Man of Sin." The time of this angel must be fixed to the period which witnessed the first public proclamation to the world of the crimes of the Antichristian powers and their followers. We are, therefore, pointed to the stars of the Reformation—Huss, Wycliffe, and the Waldenses. The manner in which the everlasting Gospel is here introduced is very remarkable. The commission of the Lord Jesus, previous to his ascension, is, in effect, amplified, and put in the historic form. That which ought to have been done, but which Satan prevented on his overthrow, is to be accomplished to the fullest extent. Here, again, the figurative is lost in the literal. Shadows give place to the glorious light of the Sun of righteousness. Ver. 8-12. The proclamation here is in beautiful harmony with that of the preceding angel. The triumph of the Gospel will be the utter extinction of Popery. The one is truth, the other error; the one is light, the other darkness; the one works man's salvation, the other his destruction; the one is of heaven, the other of hell! The angel displays strong excitement in making the announcement of the glorious fact of the ruin of Antichrist. He clearly exults in the communication. The intelligence is full of interest to the universe. It may well be supposed that angels, who rejoice in the conversion of one sinner, are far from indifferent spectators of the destruc-

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, ^band cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God.

20 And ^cthe wine-press was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the wine-press, even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

AND I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, ^aseven angels having the seven last plagues; for in them ^bis filled up the wrath of God.

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass

tion of the "Man of Sin." The event here set forth clearly refers to the close of the 1260 years. That period arrived, the time of vengeance will have come, and it will descend to the uttermost on the guilty head of Antichrist. The period has, indeed, been long, but it is worth waiting for. The saints had truly need of patience; their faith was severely tried, but, by the help of their God, they held out to the end; and now they receive a full reward. Ver. 18-20. But what of the world of spirits? Here is the reply:—"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; Yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labours, and their works do follow them"—they attain a felicity far beyond that which is here enjoined. To live will be Christ, but to die will be gain: they will "be with him, which is far better." The reaping-time has come, the 1260 years are fulfilled, and the harvest of wickedness is be cut down. The world will be cleared of the enemies of its Lord. The language here employed, foreshadows events of inconceivable terror. It is certainly an extraordinary circumstance that "1600 furlongs" is exactly the length of the Papal dominions in Italy, and if the language of the prophet here is to be taken literally, those dominions will be deluged with blood to an extent never witnessed even in times of the greatest carnage the world has seen. Nothing seems more certain than that these events are still to come, inasmuch as Rome is to be the sphere of these judgments, and the destruction of Popery their issue.

Chap. XV. 1, 2. It is impossible to determine the precise import of the imagery of these verses, or to say whether it aims at anything beyond colouring the sublime scene. The glass has, indeed, been supposed to represent mingled with fire; and them ^athat had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, ^dhaving the harps of God.

3 And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, ^eGreat and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; ^fjust and true are thy ways, thou King of ^gsaints.

4 ^hWho shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for ⁱthou only art holy: ^jfor all nations shall come and worship before thee; ^kfor thy judgments are made manifest.

5 And after that I looked, and, behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 And the seven angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, clothed in pure and white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles.

7 And one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels ^lseven golden vials full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And the temple was filled with smoke ^mfrom the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

Go your ways, ^aand pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man: ^band every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters; ^cand they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, ^dThou art righteous, O Lord; ^ewhich art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus:

6 For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; ^ffor they are worthy.

7 And I heard another out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, ^gtrue and righteous are thy judgments.

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun; ^hand power was given unto him to scorch men with fire.

9 And men were ⁱscorched with great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: ^jand they repented not to give him glory.

11 And ^lblasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, ^mand repented not of their deeds.

the frail and fleeting nature of this world; and the fire, the mixture of calamity and misery to which the saints had been exposed before arriving at the state of security and happiness which they then enjoyed. The seven last plagues are those which will fall at the close of the 1260 days. Ver. 3-8. The song of Moses and the song of the Lamb were, in principle, the same; the one may be considered the type, and the other the antitype. There is something peculiarly grand in the idea of these two songs, as connected with the two dispensations, and both with merciful deliverances to men. That of Moses, although confined to things temporal, was marvellous in the extreme; nothing like it had ever been known to mankind: that of the Lamb, however, rises high above it, beyond all comprehension. The idea of God manifest in the flesh, and dying to atone for the sins of men, leaves every other idea at an infinite distance. The magnitude of the thought exceeds the capability of an angel to grasp it. There is here a bright glance at the future spread of the Gospel: "All nations shall come and worship before thee," is language not to be mistaken, and in beautiful harmony with all the other Scriptures which touch on the spread of the Gospel. The closing verses are full of mystery. It seems highly probable, however, that the Church herself is partially involved in the subject of the plagues. Through all her borders she needs both quickening and purification; and the love of her Lord will provide for her in both respects whatever she requires for her good, and to fit her for her duty. The Sacred Scriptures are the sole and only rule by which everything appertaining to the kingdom of Christ will be tested; whatever will abide this will live; all else will perish, and the sooner the better. The desire and the prayer of holy men throughout the world is for unity in the Church of Christ; and nothing will so much conduce to that blessed consummation as the general study of the Word of God in the spirit of prayer, and with an honest determination to receive its teachings with the simplicity of little children, and to walk by them, regardless of worldly consequences.

Chap. XVI. 1-12. The difficulties to be encountered in an endeavour to understand and explain these Vials is great; when learning, piety, and prayer, have done their utmost, it is found that very little has been accomplished. There is every reason to believe, however, that the events predicted are still future, and that time alone can explain the prophecy. One thing is certain; each of the Seven Trumpets has a point of resemblance to one of the Seven Vials. The First Trumpet operates on the earth, and so does the First Vial, and so of the rest. But this leaves us just where we were as to the precise import of the Vials. One principle, however, would seem to govern all: the whole of the Vials bear the impress of vengeance on those who have the mark of the beast, and who have worshipped his image; and that must, therefore, come under the 1260 years. With respect to this Vial, one class of expositors hold that it has not yet been poured out; and among these are Gill and Fuller. Another class, among whom are Faber and Keith, consider that it has, and that it consists in the atheistical spirit which has long reigned on the nations under the sway of Popery. Babylon occupies a somewhat important place among these mysterious symbols. As that once famous capital was defended from invasion by the river Euphrates, and was at last taken only through the diverting of the waters into another channel; so the drying up of this river is considered to be an emblem of the destruction of all the defences and resources of Antichrist. Ver. 13-21. An unclean spirit comes out of each mouth; their respective characters are a matter of great uncertainty. Perhaps no opinion is so near the truth as that which views them as emissaries of Antichrist, sent forth by Satan, the dragon, and the leopard-like beast, or the 12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.

13 And I saw ^athree unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of ^bthe false prophet.

14 For they are the spirits of devils, ^aworking miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, ^cto gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

15 ^dBehold, ^eI come as a thief. ^fBlessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

16 And he gathered them together into a place called in ^gthe Hebrew tongue Armageddon.

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, ^hIt is done.

18 And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great.

19 And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell: and great Babylon came ⁱin remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.

20 And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

21 And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent: and men ^jblasphemed God

Antichristian states. The False Prophet has by some been viewed as pointing to Mohammed, but it seems to mean the second beast in chap. xiii., or the Antichristian ecclesiastical state. "The battle of that great day" obviously alludes to some tremendous conflict which is to take place about the close of the 1260 years. Armageddon would seem to be derived from the slaughter of Sisera's army at the waters of Megiddo, by Barak, and to suggest that the same would be the fate of these united adversaries of the Church of God. Great earthquakes, in prophecy, are emblems of great convulsions or revolutions, and that produced by the seventh angel was such as the world had never seen. Where this is to take place, it is impossible to ascertain or imagine. This falling of the cities of the nations can signify nothing less than the convulsion of the world, and the breaking in pieces of the Papal system. This mighty display of the Divine wrath will be known to the whole earth, and produce effects which will most materially conduce to the advancement of the Divine glory. This is, of course, still future; the dates fixed upon are somewhat different, but sufficiently near each other to shew that the date is real and tangible, and not a thing of mere arbitrary opinion. Faber fixes the time of these events to the year 1864; Newton to 2000; and Lowman, to 2016. So far, then, as appearances are to be judged by, the first is the least probable. To that mighty event, come when it may, all things are tending and conspiring; that which the course of Providence will prepare for, will, in due season, be finished by the miracles which will distinctly proclaim it to be of God.

1 John's vision of the mystical Babylon. 7 The interpretation thereof.

AND there came ^aone of the seven angels which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither; ^bI will shew unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters;

2 With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

3 So ^che carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw ^da woman sit upon a scarlet-coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet-colour, and ^edecked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication.

5 And ^fupon her forehead was a name written, ^gMYSTERY, ^hBABYLON THE GREAT, ⁱTHE MOTHER OF ^jHARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

6 And I saw the woman ^kdrunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of ^lthe martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottom-

The crimes here specified are all of a spiritual nature; the prophetic figures of licentiousness indicate the abounding moral turpitude of the people. The matrimonial relation was used to express the union which obtains between God and his Church, and her unfaithfulness expressly illustrates the constant tendency of Israel to deviate into the polluted paths of idolatry. The woman—that is, the Church of Rome—sits on the beast—that is, on the political powers of whom we have already had an account; the Ten Horns, it is allowed on all hands, mean the kingdoms into which the Roman Empire was broken, and which, for a season, were given over to the "Man of Sin." That the Seven Heads symbolise the seven hills on which the city of Rome is built, is another point so clear that discussion is superfluous. But not only did Rome rest on seven hills, she had also been the seat of seven successive forms of government. The woman is the indisputable emblem of an ecclesiastical state, or Church; and, as the figure implies, her worship was impure and idolatrous. Who does not perceive Daniel's "little horn," and Paul's "Man of Sin," in the person of the vicious woman enthroned in this mystical Babylon? A "wild beast" is the proper emblem of an idolatrous persecuting power. Such a power "was" the Roman Empire at the rise of Christianity. When that Empire, or its ruler, became Christian, it might then be said, with respect to the beast, "it is not;" on its subsequent apostasy, it became in effect a "wild beast" again; and again it persecuted the Church of Christ! The form was changed, but the spirit remained, and under new pretences, and new aspects, it pursued its old courses. The Popish system arose from hell, and it is destined to perdition. It is the most masterly, and the most wonderful achievement of Satanic less pit, and ¹go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, (^mwhose names were not written in the book of life ⁿfrom the foundation of the world,) when they behold ^othe beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

9 And here ^tis the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, ^{and} the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a short space.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition.

12 And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.

14 These ^pshall make war with the Lamb, and ^qthe Lamb shall overcome them: for he is ^rLord of lords, and King of kings; ^sand they that are with him ^tare called, and chosen, and faithful.

15 And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And ^uthe ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, ^vthese shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate ^wand naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.

17 For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, ^yuntil the words of God shall be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

CHAPTER XVIII.

² The fall of Babylon. ⁹ Her destruction lamented.

AND after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory.

2 And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, ^aBabylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird.

3 For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the ^babundance of her delicacies.

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, ^cCome out of her, my people, that ye be not ^dpartakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues:

5 For her sins have reached unto heaven, ^eand God hath remembered her iniquities.

6 ^fReward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double, according to her works: in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double.

7 How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.

8 Therefore ^gshall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; ^hand she shall be utterly burned with fire: ⁱfor strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.

skill and power that earth has seen. If it be remembered that Christianity was intended to honour God, and to save man, and if the Christianity of Paul be compared with the Christianity of Poper, it will be seen at once with what success the Wicked One, for a season, has been mysteriously suffered to defeat the Divine purpose. He first brought ruin on man, and then contrived, not simply to mar, but completely to destroy, the scheme of man's redemption! The skill, the power, and the effort thus employed were inconceivably great. The last act is the climax of Satanic transgression; and the crime will measure the punishment. That Satan should have been allowed to perpetrate either of these things, is amongst the inscrutable arrangements of Providence which cannot be explained, at least in time. Ver. 10-18. If absolute certainty cannot be reached in the interpretation of these words, the probability is, that these Seven Kings signify not individuals, but successive forms of government which prevailed at Rome. It is not a little remarkable that the two greatest Roman historians mention the "five fallen"—namely, Kings, Consuls, Dictators, Decemvirs, and Tribunes. "One is"—that is, the sixth form of rule, the Imperial. The "other is not yet come," may mean the Dukedom which succeeded the death of the last Emperor, in the year 476. The eighth form of government is clearly the Papal; history supplies nothing else. But although in one view that is the eighth, if the one which was to last but a short space be set aside, it will become the last of the seven. The Ten Horns, as repeatedly stated, symbolise the Antichristian states of Europe—the Ten Kings the rulers of these states. They had no kingdom when John wrote, because the Empire had not then been broken up; but in this sense they would receive, and reign "one hour"

—that is, at the same time with the Papal power—when they will devote the whole force of their several kingdoms to uphold the "Man of Sin," opposing the power of the Gospel and the true Church with all their might. A change, however, will come over them: the delusion, and their devotion to the Pope, will not last for ever; they will discover their error and their guilt, when their love will be turned into hatred, and their utmost vengeance directed against the deceiver. This event is still future; something, indeed, by way of first-fruits, took place in the commencement of the Reformation; and what was then so hopefully begun, will be awfully perfected on the expiry of the 1260 years. Some wise men think that this vengeance will proceed from the spirit of Infidelity—not of Christianity. This is a very discouraging view of affairs; for if such shall be the fact, the Church will have to lay her account for a time, not with the increase, but the diminution of piety, till at last the "Man of Sin" shall have disappeared from the face of the earth. But this is neither the only nor the most serious view of the case; it is but too probable that the same spirit of Infidelity—supposing this view to be correct—which shall lead to the extirpation of false, may also direct its vengeance against true religion. Be this as it may, the Church of God will survive every change, and be purified, invigorated, and ennobled by every successive dispensation.

Chap. XVIII. 1-3. The whole of this glorious vision would seem to shadow forth the entire overthrow of Antichrist on the expiration of the period of 1260 years. The figures are such as to shew that it will be sudden, terrible, and complete. The fall of ancient Babylon was sung by anticipation in the noble and sublime strains 9 And the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning.

10 Standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, Alas, alas! that great city Babylon, that mighty city! for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more:

12 The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble,

13 And cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men.

14 And the fruits that thy soul lusted after are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all.

15 The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Rejoicings in heaven. 7 The marriage of the Lamb.
17 The fowls called to the great slaughter.

AND after these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, "Alleluia; "Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto the Lord our God:

of Isaiah; and here John may be said to have produced a new version of the wonderful ode as applied to mystical Babylon. The analogy between the subjects is very remarkable; and in the end it is probable the resemblance will be so close as to astonish mankind. The language represents the very perfection of desolation; the picture admits of no additions, the cup is full, and not one ingredient of bitterness is wanting. Ver. 4-8. Authority here bears the stamp of compassion. It is an affair of life and death: to remain in her will be to perish with her; it therefore behoves every child of God to come out of her, whatever obstacles may stand in the way, or whatever it may cost in the shape of friendship or worldly interest. It is here assumed that there are of the Lord's people in her; and such has been the fact in every age. The grace of God suffices to overcome every obstacle in the way of calling his elect, and preserving them to his kingdom and glory. The saints will be devout spectators of these tremendous scenes; nothing is said from which it can be gathered that they themselves will be required to take any part in the work of destruction; this is reserved for the men of the world, who have their portion in this life. The potsherd of the earth are suitably employed in dashing each other to pieces! God's people, among the strife and confusion, have their own appropriate business to attend to: "Come, my people, enter ye your closet, and shut the door, until the indignation be overpast." Ver. 9-24. These kings must clearly be distinguished from those mentioned in the last chapter, who united for the destruction of the MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS. The pride and luxury of Rome are delineated with great splendour of colouring; the articles set forth are very significant, and rise with a sort of gradation, till at length they reach the bodies, and finish with the souls of men! It becomes the true Church of God to rejoice over the downfall of Rome, her cruel enemy. It deserves notice that there was the same exultation in the predicted fall of Babylon, and her utter desolation is set forth under the same imagery. As Seraiah fixed a stone to Babylon, and cast it into the Euphrates in token of her fall, so this mighty angel seizes a millstone, which he casts into the midst of the sea, as an emblem of the destruction which awaited the mystical Babylon. The bearing of this terrible prediction is not less direct and striking on the ancient, than on the modern. Though hand join in hand, and the numbers increase till they comprise millions, nations, and continents, iniquity cannot prosper. Sin, sooner or later, is sure to be followed, found out, and punished by justice. Rome in her meridian glory, and Rome when her hour shall have come, will present the most astounding contrast imaginable: nothing like it will have occurred since the creation of the world. In the doom of Rome, God's people should see the evil of sin, and the justice of the Divine government, as well as love and mercy to the faithful in Christ Jesus. His Church is safe beyond the reach of the hostility of both earth and hell. Nothing but perdition remains for the impenitent persecutors of the Church of Christ.

Chap. XIX. 1-8. The spirits of the just may well be supposed to be, of all intelligences, the most interested spectators of the wondrous scenes connected with the destruction of the "Beast." They consist, to a consider-

2 For ^otrue and righteous are his judgments; for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, ^{and} hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand.

3 And again they said, Alleluia. And her smoke rose up for ever and ever.

4 And the four and twenty elders, and the four beasts, fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, Amen; Alleluia.

5 And a voice came out of the throne, saying, ^oPraise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: ^{for} the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

7 Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: ^{for} the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready.

8 And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and ^{white}: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints.

9 And he saith unto me, Write, ^{Blessed} are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God.

10 And I fell at his feet to worship him. And he said unto me, ^{See thou do} ^{it} not: I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus: ^{worship} God: ^{for} the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

able extent, of those that were slain by her murderous hand. By "much people in heaven," some expositors understand the Church on earth, as exulting in the great events they saw transpiring; but surely this is doing violence to the language of the apostle, and running counter to the whole strain of the book. By "much people" must certainly be meant the general assembly and Church of the first-born, who surround the throne of God and of the Lamb. The apostle sets forth the favour of God to his people under the figure of a bridegroom, and the Church as a bride. The marriage is viewed as the Millennium itself. Both that, and the fall of Babylon, which is to precede it, are here set forth by way of anticipation. Ver. 9, 10. It is a happiness to good men to look forward in hope to those events, so full of justice and of truth; but what must it be actually to behold them! Those millennial days will exhibit not merely the absence of all foes, whether human or Satanic, but a marvellous increase of spiritual strength and stature among the people of God. The Holy Ghost will be poured out in a measure the most copious, enlightening the mind, enlarging the heart, and "filling it with the peace which passeth all understanding." The standard set forth in the New Testament will be reached by the great body of the saints, who, as a rule, will be filled with all the fulness of God. The reign of truth, peace, love, and joy will be completely established. The question of offering worship to angels, as practised by Popery, is here fairly set at rest. The prohibition is most per-empty; and in a subsequent chapter it is repeated. It is strange that the Popish priesthood, with such scriptures staring them in the face, should so persevere in the worship of angels; but this is one of the many things which explain their reason for withholding the Scriptures from their people. Ver. 11-15. The victory over Babylon has been anticipated, and now we have some of the particulars of the battle. We here approach that towards which all that has gone before has steadily tended. The Seventh Seal, the Seventh Trumpet, and the Seventh Vial, all meet here. The hour is come, and the Lord appears—the "Faithful and True," the Hope of his Church, and the Lord of Creation. The Captain of Salvation girds his sword on his thigh, arrayed in glory and majesty. The blood in which his vesture is dipped was not his own, as has been often erroneously represented, but that of his enemies. His name is particularly noticeable—"the Word of God;" a designation which harmonises with the language of John in the beginning of his Gospel, and in his Epistles. Ver. 16-21. The ancients were accustomed to adorn the image of their deities, princes, and other persons of distinction, with inscriptions expressive of their names and actions. Statues yet exist bearing such inscriptions on the garments which are over the thigh; thus everywhere things arise to illustrate and confirm the representations of Scripture. In chap. xvii. we find this same title given to the Lamb, intimating that he is the Sovereign Ruler of all the powers of the earth, by whatever name known. An and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Satan bound. 5 The first resurrection. 7 Satan again loosed. 12 The general resurrection.

AND ^aI saw an angel come down from heaven, ^bhaving the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years,

3 And ^ccast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he ^dshould deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season.

4 And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I ^esaw ^fthe souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, ^gand which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received ^hhis mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and ⁱthey lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. ^jThis is the first resurrection.

6 ^kBlessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

angel standing in the sun is an image of the utmost magnificence, which meetly symbolises the light and knowledge which will then be diffused among mankind. The battle issues not in a defeat merely, or in a rout, but in utter annihilation. Kings, captains, and mighty men, all fall in promiscuous carnage. The "beast" and the "false prophet" alone survive the dreadful day; it is impossible to give a more complete idea of entire destruction. Popery, then, with all that appertains to it, will from that moment become extinct. The event will be the crisis of the world's history. Rome and Romanism will perish. That city will be razed from its foundations as thoroughly as was ancient Babylon.

Chap. XX. 1-3. The 1260 years are now closing, and we behold the beams of the rising Sun of the millennial day. In the foregoing chapter we witnessed the destruction of all the instruments of Satan in the work of opposing the kingdom of Christ; but the spring of all the evil, the "Old Serpent" himself, still remained at large. It was, therefore, necessary to place him under restraints; this was an essential condition of peace and safety. The time of his full punishment is still future; but, in the meanwhile, he is to be shut up in prison a thousand years. From that moment the soul of man will be left to itself, and to its own inherent workings, without the all-obstructive influence of diabolical agency. Human nature and Divine truth will everywhere be brought into contact, without the interference of Satanic power: the Spirit of the Lord will then work without obstruction in the conversion of men. Nations will then be born in a day. This is not the place for polemic discussion about the Millennium and the Personal Reign: suffice to say that the period will be one of the utmost happiness and glory of which man on earth is capable. Some expositors of repute have thought that here, as in other matters touching time, the prophetic principle ought to be applied, which would extend the Millennium to the surrounding period of 365,000 of our present years!

7 And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, ^kGog and Magog, ^lto gather them together to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.

9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: ^mand fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10 And ⁿthe devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

11 And ^oI saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, ^pfrom whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them.

12 And ^qI saw the dead, small and great, ^rstand before God: and ^sthe books were opened; and another book was opened, which is ^tthe book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

13 And ^uthe sea gave up the dead which were in it; ^vand death and ^whell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found writ-

Such an idea, however, is wholly at variance with the views of the wise, and the hopes of the faithful in every age. The apostles clearly looked on themselves as having passed the meridian of the world's day, and as drawing towards evening. The language of the Epistles distinctly intimates that we are now "in the end of the world." Proceeding on the mysterious principle of sevens, it is further considered that the fixed time of our world is a week, and that after six days of labour and sorrow, will come the seventh, the Sabbath—a day of rest for our troubled race. Ver. 4-6. The question of the resurrection, here presented, is beset with great difficulties. The argument against the literal resurrection is very strong. John saw the souls of the martyrs living. Does this mean that he saw them residing on the earth in a disembodied state? "Souls" is a term often put for the entire person; but souls of persons would seem to represent them in contradistinction from their embodied state. A generation of heroic men may be said to have the souls of the martyrs alive in them, just as Elijah was said to live in John the Baptist. The other circumstances of the vision are symbolic—why, then, should this be literal? The Scriptures, moreover, abound in references touching the resurrection, all plain and literal; they speak uniformly of only one resurrection: first of all, the righteous, and immediately afterwards, the wicked. Such is the invariable statement which they all bear. We are here told that the "rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished." Are we, then, to understand that, at the end of the period specified, the unholy dead will rise and live on this earth? This view is at variance with every Scripture touching the wicked, who are always spoken of as rising at the judgment, and not till then. These are only a sample of the objections, and, perhaps, not the strongest, that might be urged against the notion of a literal resurrection. Ver. 7-15. We are here presented with one of the most mysterious portions of Inspiration: at the close of the thousand years, Satan is let loose again, ten in the book of life ^x was cast into the lake of fire.

2 The heavenly Jerusalem, 10 with a full description thereof.

AND I saw ^a a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

2 And I John saw ^b the holy city, new Jerusalem, ^c coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

3 And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, ^d Behold, the tabernacle of God ^e is with men, and he will dwell with them, and ^f they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.

4 And ^g God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

5 And he that sat upon the throne said, ^h Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful.

6 And he said unto me, It is done. ⁱ I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end: ^j I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.

¹ all things; ¹ and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in ^m the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: ⁿ which is the second death.

9 And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, ^o the Lamb's wife.

10 And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me ^p that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God,

11 Having ^q the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper-stone, clear as crystal;

12 And had a wall great and high, and had ^r twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, ^s and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel.

13 On the east, three gates; on the north, three gates; on the south, three gates; and on the west, three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, ^t and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15 And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

to undo all that has been done, and, as if his passion for evil had acquired strength from abstinence during his long incarceration, he returns instantly to the work of evil! He confines not his operations to any given region, but invests the entire globe, and his reception is everywhere such as if mankind had been wearied of felicity, and actually waiting to be tempted! The work of apostasy is instant and universal—his adherents are as “the sands of the sea.” This is a new species of apostasy, in which the “beast” and the “false prophet” have no hand. Nothing less will satisfy these new adversaries than the extinction of the Church of Christ. But in this case the Lord cuts short the work of the wicked, in mercy to the righteous—destruction in a moment comes upon the destroyers! All previous displays of the Divine wrath compared with this are as nothing. The descending fires at once confound and consume the countless host! As a close to this terrible scene, it has been suggested by expositors that as there is nothing in the account which intervenes between this and the resurrection of the dead, the fire may be the commencement of the general conflagration, as spoken of by the other apostles—a view which seems to derive support from the closing verses; the throne of judgment is set up immediately after the battle. All flesh are now dealt with according to their works. In heaven there will be no mortality, and death and the separate state will be swallowed up in perdition. “The second death” is the settled doom of the wicked, which will consist in final separation from the approving presence of God, to dwell in outer darkness, amid “weeping and wailing, and gnashing of teeth.” Even granting that “the lake of fire” is figurative, if such be the figure, what must be the fact? Does the reader quake at the thought of “devouring fire” and “everlasting burnings?” Then let him flee at once from the wrath to come, to the righteousness of faith and the blood of sprinkling. Let no man stumble at the “Book of Life,” as if it were a matter of injustice. It is a record simply of approval; the names contained in it are the names of those who have feared God and wrought righteousness, who have trusted in the blood of the Lamb, and, from the love they bore to his name, kept his commandments.

In the judgment, according to all Scripture, men are dealt with, not according to a Divine decree, a secret purpose, an arbitrary resolve, but “according to their works” in the days of the flesh. The good bestowed is all of mercy; the evil inflicted is all of justice.

Chap. XXI. 1-21. The judgment is now past, and a new order of things apparent. From this we see that there is a corresponding order in the Divine plans, and in the predictions concerning them. The state of things here described is generally applied to that which is to succeed the literal dissolution of the present system by fire. If that view be correct, then, it must symbolise the happiness of heaven. The probability is, that it is a representation of the celestial glory, so far as it relates to the earth on which we dwell, which will become the seat of purity and happiness. The earth, it would seem, will be purified, not annihilated, by the conflagration. On such a theme, however, mere opinion goes for nothing. The first and the last question is, “What is written?”—“How readest thou?” Certain it is that the New Jerusalem, now in the heavenly world, consists of the spirits of the just, who must be again embodied at the resurrection in tenements suited to their natures. By the tabernacle of God being with men, is meant a manifestation to them of his glory, the result of which will be happiness neither to be expressed nor conceived. Every wound will now be healed, every want supplied, every grievance redressed. “God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.” What compassion! What condescension! Now, such is the way in which we are to look at the heavenly state, which is a matter of fact, not of imagination. If the description here given does not mean the heavenly state, what does it mean? “No death!” What meaning is contained in that one utterance! Who can estimate the sorrows of death throughout the human family even for a day? They present an aggregate which only the Divine mind can comprehend. Ours is a world full of death; all life ends in death. The world to come, amongst the people of God, will present no instance of mortality. The pain, sorrow, and crying which result from death alone, constitute the bulk 16 And the city lieth four-square, and the length is as large as the breadth. And he measured the city with the reed, ^atwelve thousand furlongs: the length, and the breadth, and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, ^aan hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

18 And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald;

20 The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And ^athe twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 The river and tree of life. 18 Nothing may be added to, or taken from, God's word.

AND he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, ^aproceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

2 In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, ^awas there ^bthe tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.

3 And ^athere shall be no more curse: ^abut the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and ^ahis servants shall serve him:

4 And ^athey shall see his face; ^aand his name shall be in their foreheads.

5 And there shall be ^ano night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: ^aand they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me, ^aThese sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets ^asent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 Behold, I come quickly: ^ablessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, ^aI fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which shewed me these things.

9 Then saith he unto me, ^aSee thou do it not; for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: ^aworship God.

10 And he saith unto me, ^aSeal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book; ^afor the time is at hand.

11 He ^athat is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: ^aand he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

of the sufferings of the human race. Exclusion from the felicity of heaven is founded wholly on character; the accompaniments of unbelief are falsehood, whoredom, murder, sorcery, and idolatry! All who are chargeable with these heinous sins, will be visited with appropriate vengeance. They have spurned mercy, and the alternative is justice—justice issues in perdition! The “bride” signifies the Church, purified from all her corruptions, and richly arrayed in the graces of the Spirit. The magnificent figures here set forth, must be viewed generally as emblematic of the ineffable beauty and glory of the Church in her state of perfection. Ver. 22-27. Heaven will consist in the full manifestation of the Saviour's glory, so far as it is practicable for holy creatures to behold it. The Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of the city and the light of it. Let the reader mark the union. Can words more explicitly set forth the supreme divinity of the Lord Jesus? How striking the oneness with the Father here exhibited! Whatever darkness may rest on points affecting the future state, all is clear when reference is made to the character of the parties who are to enter the holy place. The sole condition of admission is holiness. Sanctification is the only proof of justification; whenever the latter appears, there will be no dispute as to the former. The faith which justifies the soul, as the fruit of the Spirit, indicates its renewal. All who are in Christ are new creatures; they bear his image, breathe his spirit, walk in his ways; where he is, there also will his servants be.

Chap. XXII. 1-6. The tree of life, and the water of life, are impressive emblems of immortality. The figure depicts the state of glory, honour, immortality, and eternal happiness, which awaits all the faithful in Christ Jesus. The tree of life is a precious emblem of himself, and of the health and cure which the souls of his people derive from him. While the products vary, their properties are common; every leaf is fully charged with a healing virtue. Thus all the offices of the Lamb, all the truths of his word, and all the lessons of his Providence, unite in effecting the salvation of the saints. Heaven will be a state, not of sensual sloth, but of holy activity. “His servants shall serve him,” is language which indicates the use of all their faculties in some way to promote his honour. He will have abundant employment for the humblest of his saints, who will all find their chief happiness in doing his pleasure. In the figurative language of the prophets, darkness often signifies 12 And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.

13 ^aI am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 ^bBlessed are they that do his commandments, that they ^cmay have right to the tree of life, ^dand may enter in through the gates into the city.

15 For ^ewithout are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

16 ^fI Jesus have sent mine angel ^gto testify unto you these things in the churches. ^hI am the root and the offspring of David, and ⁱthe bright and morning star.

17 And ^jthe Spirit and the bride say, affliction, which will have no place in this new state of existence. Ver. 7-16. We now arrive at the close of this marvellous Book, and as it began, so it ends. A great practical question is raised by the words, "Blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book." In all that is preceptive, happiness is connected with obedience. There is here somewhat of difficulty; in ver. 7, 10, the speaker is undoubtedly the Lord Jesus himself, and not the angel before whom John fell down, of whom he speaks as the angel who shewed him these things. John is here instructed not to seal the sayings of this prophecy, but to publish them for the good of the Church. The remarkable language of ver. 11, is a solemn intimation of approaching finality: "He that is unjust," and "he that is filthy," in spite of instruction and warning, offers of mercy and grace, may now take his course, and end as he is going on. The hour is at hand which will fix him in his present state for ever. Let the righteous, and the holy also, who, through evil report and good report, have kept the faith, hold on their way; the struggle will soon be over, the day is breaking, deliverance is at hand, and glory awaits them! Although salvation is, from first to last, in every respect, of grace, the faithful services which flow from a new heart will all be rewarded. The Lord of heaven and earth is too great to receive anything at the hands of his people without appropriate acknowledgment. Obedience to his commandments is the perfection of homage. This is true service, which will be taken as the passport to Paradise. Christ is David's son according to the flesh; David's Lord, as respects his Divine nature, his eternal power, and God-head. Ver. 17. With what benignity the vision closes! Behold the fountain of life, and look abroad on a thirsty, drooping, dying world! All need it, all may have it; it is the Master's will that all should partake of it; it is the special office of his Spirit, by the written Word, and its oral ministration, to say to all, Come! It is the duty of the Church to call to the whole human race, Come! Every man who hears the invitation himself is not only permitted, but commanded, to repeat it to his neighbour, and to say, Come! Nay, simple thirst, invitation apart, is sufficient warrant for every man to come. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life!" Let him, let all, share the blessing of salvation freely. Ver. 18-21. Although these solemn words were uttered originally in relation to this book, the principle contained in them applies alike to every part both of the Old and New Testament Scriptures. This solemn injunction, which has always been important, was never more so, perhaps, than at the present day, which witnesses a disposition to take liberties with the Holy Scriptures, both as to their inspiration and their authority, which requires to be watched with godly jealousy. Much is uttered that appears to bring both speakers and writers within the scope of this awful warning.
